The happy ending came Thursday when Isabel's father suddenly withdrew the court ban against her marriage.

The wedding took place quietly in the border town which Sir Walter Scott once called the most romantic village in Scotland, and where Robert Burns was so moved he "breathed a prayer to the Almighty."

Six hours after the ban on their wedding was lifted, Isabel and Jimmy motored to Kelso from their hiding place in an Edinburgh house. In a final, flourishing touch, they drove over icy roads in an old green truck usually used for transporting pigs.

Her father, refusing any comment, returned to London.

However, in Edinburgh today the Goldsmiths said they had reached an understanding with the bride's father.

"There has been a reconciliation and we are very happy to have this amicable solution," Goldsmith said. He declined to elaborate.

Full-Scale Search Under Way

Autopsy Results Change Opinion Of Accidental Death

TORONTO —(CP)— Police said today Helen Boyle, 24-year-old brunette hospital technician, was a murder victim and launched a full-scale search for a mysterious attacker who bludgeoned her as she worked in a hospital laboratory.

Police reached the murder conclusion after medical authorities said the injuries from which the girl died—two star-shaped fractures of the skull which damaged the brain—were not caused accidentally.

The word that the skull fractures were "not caused by an ordinary fall" came from Dr. Chester McLean, provincial pathologist.

Miss Boyle was born in Peterborough and her father is now residing in Cobourg.

The 24-year-old hospital technician died Thursday night without speaking the words that would have cleared up the mystery of how she suffered the head wounds which caused her death.

Following an autopsy this morning, Dr. McLean said the skull fractures were "of a very major size" and had been caused with "considerable force." If they were caused by a fall, it would have been "a fall from a height, such as from the top of a table."

It was possible, he added, the fractures were caused by blows.

DON'T LOOK ACCIDENTAL

Prof. L. Joslyn Rogers, medico-legal expert of the provincial government, said the wounds are "inconsistent with what one might expect from accidental blows."

"It is difficult to determine the nature of the wounds exactly until the pathologist can confer with the doctors who operated on the woman," he said. "Soon after Miss Boyle was found, brain specialists operated in an attempt to relieve pressure that had built up in her head as the result of the serious skull fractures."

The brunette technician was found unconscious in a pool of blood Wednesday night on the floor of a darkened sixth - floor biochemistry laboratory in downtown St. Michael's Hospital. She had suffered two star-shaped skull fractures which doctors said damaged her brain.

Before the autopsy, police and hospital officials were inclined to the belief she slipped and fell as

Board Of Education Shows $33,516 Surplus For Year

A surplus of $33,516.29 on the year's operations was announced Thursday night at the inaugural meeting of the board of education.

K. S. Wightman, superintendent of schools, preferred to call it a "balance" rather than "surplus"—the difference between 1953's total receipts, $1,203,355.80, and the total disbursements, $1,169,839.51.

Last year this surplus (or balance) was $36,473.79.

The statement of receipts and disbursements was available to the incoming board Thursday night only because of an extra effort on the part of the board's office staff. The detailed statement of estimates and disbursements for each account will be available later when the 1954 estimates are being considered.

ALL IN BLACK

All three divisions showed surpluses: public schools $23,468.02, collegiate academic $404.52, and collegiate vocational $9,643.75.

"In the public school division we spent $742,251.94," said Mr. Wightman. "Of this $9,104.76 was capital expenditure not included in the estimates. Actual expenditure for operation was therefore $733,147.18. At the beginning of the year the estimated expenditure was $735,044. We find, therefore, that we have kept under this figure to the extent of $1,896.82; or to put it another way, actual operating costs were within ¼ of 1% of the year's estimate.

"It may be questioned how in these circumstances we were able to pay $9,100 in capital account and still show a balance of $23,468. The explanation, of course, lies in the fact that apart from the municipal levy receipts are also an estimated quantity subject to variation. This year we absorbed No. 13 Smith and at the time the estimates were prepared we knew neither what balance remained in the treasury of that school section nor what provincial grants we might get on the new area.

"Also we have no way of knowing at the first of the year how many children from North Monaghan will be in our schools, and in this item alone—that is non-resident fees, we gained about $4,000. There was also an amount advanced last year on account of Cameron street school before the debenture proceeds were received which was owing to the general account and therefore transferred."

The total of collegiate disbursements, taking academic and vocational together, was $427,587.57, or $6,228 less than was estimated. This made expenditures within 1 1/5 per cent of the estimates.

Collegiate receipts, apart from the municipal levy, came to $215,360, or $3,820 more than was estimated.

"It will be noted that the balance for collegiate academic is much smaller than for the vocational school," said Mr. Wightman. "This is due in part to an underestimating of the needs of Kenner Collegiate which was natural enough since we had had no previous experience of the operation of this school for a full year. The difference is also partly due to the action of the department in deducting all superannuation, both academic and vocational, from the academic grants. It would have been possible to make a division on your balance sheet but it seemed wiser to keep it in the shape in which it must appear on the financial statement submitted to the department."

Canadians Go On Greatest Buying Splurge

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's imports topped the $4,000,000,000 mark in the first 11 months of 1953 as the country indulged in the biggest foreign buying splurge in history.

The record high of $4,048,600,000 worth of goods imported in the 11-month period was $363,200,000 greater than the $3,685,400,000 imported in the similar 1952 period, bureau of statistics figures showed today.

However, there were signs the buying splurge was tapering off. After hitting new highs in previous months, imports during November slipped by $11,000,000 to $352,400,000 from $363,400,000 in 1952.

The cut was caused by smaller purchases from the United States. Imports from other sources, including Britain, increased slightly.

November's import cut was accompanied by a reduction in exports, down $36,700,000 to $855,100,000 from $391,800,000. Exports, however, were still a little head of imports, giving Canada a small $2,700,000 surplus—third monthly surplus for 1953, compared to deficits for eight months.

Briton Upsets Russian In Marathon Chess Classic

HASTINGS, England (CP) — Charles H. Alexander, a British foreign office official, upset Russian Grand Master David Bronstein today in a marathon game of 120 moves that may well prove a classic in world chess annals. The vital match in the international Hastings Chess Congress was decided after several adjournments and 14 hours of play. The victory put Alexander one point ahead of Bronstein and gave him what appeared to be a winning position in the tournament.

Bronstein has an adjourned game remaining with Germany's Rudolf Teschner which he must win to give him a tie for the tournament title. But Bronstein's position in the Teschner game is inferior and he will be fortunate to pull out with a draw. Alexander has completed his tourney games.

SENSATIONAL ENDING

The Alexander-Bronstein queen and pawn ending was a triumph of virtuosity for the British wartime code-breaker. Chess connoisseurs will be studying it and replaying it for many years to come. Major tournament games that run 100 moves or more are rare.

Alexander relaxed between play in the Bronstein struggle by reading space fiction. Bronstein conferred with his fellow Russians at the tourney or munched chocolate bars.

The match was resumed today after Bronstein and Alexander called it quits at 10:30 Thursday night. By that time they had fought through 102 moves and 10½ hours.

At the close of play Alexander, 44, still boasted a two-pawn advantage over his 29-year-old opponent. Each dropped a pawn during the day's play, while keeping king and queen.

Early in the game the Russian offered Alexander a draw. But the Briton decided to fight on, staved off the possibility of a "perpetual check" and now is given a chance of winning a clear victory if he keeps up the brilliant level of his play.

Report Doctor "Only Fair"

TIMMINS (CP) — Dr. Barclay McKone, son of J. A. McKone, Peterborough, and superintendent of Moose Factory Hospital for Eskimos and Indians, Thursday underwent an emergency abdominal operation a few hours after a hastily-assembled mercy train sped him southward from James bay.

Hospital officials reported his condition "only fair" but said they are hopeful he will recover.

The 38-year-old Peterborough-born head of the Moose Factory hospital was stricken with an acute abdominal condition. A snowmobile took him four miles over the ice to the mainland settlement of Moosonee. With weather preventing use of a plane, a train took him 186 miles from Moosonee to Cochrane in just under five hours. An ambulance brought him the 50 miles from Cochrane to Timmins.

Explorer's Friend Eaten By Fish

PARIS (Reuters) — French explorer Michel Perrin, 41, said today that his beautiful woman companion was drowned and devoured by fish after their canoe overturned in the headwaters of South America's Amazon river.

He said that upon his return to civilization in Peru a former police official, Manuel Gutierrez, accused him of causing the death of his dark-eyed daughter, Teresa, 29, through "negligence."

Perrin said he challenged Gutierrez to a duel after the ex-police officer called him "not a Frenchman but a coward." But instead he was imprisoned and finally expelled from Peru.

UNESCO SPONSORS HIM

Perrin, who arrived here New Year's Day, made his trip under auspices of a Paris museum and the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization.

Perrin started last year from a Peruvian village near the historic capital of the Incas intending to find the true source of the mighty Amazon. With him went Miss Gutierrez and three Indians.

Slowly they made their way along the snake-infested valley of the Apurimac river. Every few miles rapids forced them to carry their canoe overland.

Perrin said he and Teresa were caught in a whirlpool. Their craft overturned and Teresa was swept swiftly out of sight.

Pupils Use Boats

MIDDLE MUSQUODOBOIT, N.S. —(CP)— Many children in this agricultural district are going to school in boats, because the rain-swollen Musquodoboit river has flooded thousands of acres of farmlands and meadows.

Dieppe Meteorite Blast Shatters Windows

DIEPPE, France (Reuters)—Astronomers today said they believe a meteorite smashing through the earth's atmosphere caused a blinding explosion here before dawn Thursday.

The blast shattered windows, lit the sky over Dieppe with white and orange flashes and sent pajama-clad residents screaming into the streets.

The flash was seen 60 miles away. The captain of a fishing boat 25 miles out at sea said he saw an enormous "bowl of fire" streaking across the sky in the direction of this port where the Canadian Army made its epic raid in 1942.

Language Student Worries Over Machine Can Translate Fluently

NEW YORK (AP)—The International Business Machine Corp. put its ingenious electronic brain to work on language today and came up with a new kind of translator. Give the brain a sentence—any old sentence — such as this one in Russian: "Myeshdunarodnoye ponyimanyiye yavlyayestya vazhnim faktorom v rheshyenyiyi polyitYichYeskyix voprosov."

It'll be tossed back at you in English in 10 seconds.

The arrangement is mostly the doing of Dr. Leon Dostert, chairman of Georgetown University's institute of languages and linguistics, and Dr. Cuthbert C. Hurd, director of IBM's applied science division.

REALLY TALENTED

It consists of 12 machines weighing tons each. The rig takes seconds to do any equation that would take you a lifetime.

The machine's twinkling lights can work in any language, provided it is supplied with the proper ingredients.

Russian was picked for the first tests because of the current interest in what Russians say and do.

Atomic Talks Begin Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — State Secretary Dulles and Soviet Ambassador Georgi M. Zarubin will begin preliminary atomic talks next Monday, diplomatic authorities reported today.

The conversations will be what the diplomats call "procedural," which means they will officially be concerned only with arrangements for subsequent substantial discussions. But in fact, U. S. officials hope from these contacts to find out whether the Soviet government is at all seriously interested in atomic negotiations at this time or is just going through the motions for propaganda purposes.

May Be World Record

KINGSTON (CP) — Dr. Bruce Hopkinson, superintendent of the Ongwanada Sanitorium today termed "extraordinary" reports that not a single tuberculosis death had occurred in the Freeport Sanitorium at Kitchener in 1953 and said he would not doubt if it was a world's record. The superintendent said that the closest the local sanitorium came to a perfect year was two years ago when no Kingstonians died. However, a number of deaths of district patients here were recorded.

Plan To Develop New Supersonic Jet

OTTAWA (CP)—A. V. Roe of Canada Ltd. soon will start development of a new supersonic jet fighter to replace the CF-100 possibly by 1960, it was learned today.

The new plane, to be known as the CF-105, will be fitted with newly - designed engines, swept-back delta-shaped wings and will be capable of speeds of about 1,000 miles an hour, informants said.

Development work on the new plane will likely continue for several years. Funds have been allocated.

Avro, located at Malton, Ont., is producing the CF-100, a twin-engine interceptor used by the RCAF along with the F-86 Sabre jet.

Father Saves Four Children

STRATFORD (CP)—Clad only in pyjamas and running in his bare feet in freezing cold, Warren Fairles carried his four children one by one to safety when an after-midnight fire gutted part of his home today.

Fairles, who was sleeping downstairs, was awakened by the smell of smoke. His wife, Shirley, who had been to a choir social, was hammering at the locked front door.

Fairles at once began to remove the children, one by one, from their upstairs bedrooms. He took them to a neighbor's house.

Cause of the fire, which was mostly confined to the basement and downstairs floors, is not known.

Youth 21, Shot During Chase

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A man later identified as William Ruscior, 21, of Windsor, died today three hours after being fired at by a policeman during a chase through downtown streets. Ruscior recently came here from Timmins and was unemployed.

The fatally wounded man was found on Park street by another policeman a few minutes after Constable Gordon Prior had fired five shots in an unsuccessful effort to stop one of four men who scattered and fled when challenged.

Inspector of Detectives James Campbell said that Constable Prior had observed the four carrying articles of clothing, which he believed had been stolen from a car.

2 Firms Merge Build Pipeline

OTTAWA (CP)—Two big competing companies have merged to build a natural gas pipeline from Alberta to the east, clearing one of the last major hurdles confronting the $300,000,000 project.

Announcement of the amalgamation was expected later today from Trade Minister Howe, who brought the companies together after the Alberta government agreed to release gas for sale outside the province only if two divergent undertakings were made a joint job.

The merger will bring together Trans-Canada Pipe Lines, Ltd., and Western Pipe Lines under the name of the former. Their joint venture will be the longest pipeline in the world.

4 Taxi Drivers Fired In Sarnia Dispute

SARNIA (CP)—Four taxi drivers have been fired as a result of a police commission demand that the cab company produce a driver who sold a bottle of liquor to a minor.

County judge E. A. Shaunessy, chairman of the police commission said Thursday the cab company owners told him they had been unable to find who sold the liquor, but were certain it was one of the four men dismissed.

The commission had threatened to suspend the licence of every cab in the company if the guilty driver was not produced.

Judge Shaunessy said the discharge of four men put the matter in a different light. He said:

"We will discuss the problem and announce our decision at the next meeting of the commission."

AA Calls Ottawa Mayor's Attitude In Tangle 'Unkind'

OTTAWA (CP)—The Ontario regional committee of Alcoholics Anonymous has called remarks made Tuesday by Mayor Charlotte Whitton about AA "seemingly unkind."

Miss Whitton then opposed renting quarters in a civic building to the Ottawa division of the Ontario Alcoholism Fundation at a low rate. She refused to hear Dr. Wallace McKay, secretary of the Ottawa division, who she said was also secretary for Alcoholics Anonymous.

"At the police commission we call it 'Alcoholics Unanimous.' We have had quite a few pickups after their meetings, too," she added without amplifying the remark.

UNFORTUNATE, SAYS AA

In a letter to the mayor, the Ontario chairman of AA said it was "unfortunate" that the name of AA was brought into the discussion, for it has nothing to do with the administration of the alcoholism foundation.

It was "inevitable" that there would be "some troublemakers" among the 200 AA members in Ottawa, the letter writer identified only as A. D. L., said.

"I think it is fair to say that if the police were not picking these people up in the vicinity of AA they would be picking them up elsewhere and that the problem is AA."

MP CHIDES MAYOR

In an address Thursday to the Junior Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Houck was critical of remarks made in Ottawa Tuesday by Mayor Charlotte Whitton in which she used the term "Alcoholics Unanimous."

"As the hear of our capital city she should be ashamed to make such a stupid statement," said Mr. Houck. "Alcoholics Anonymous is one of the finest organizations in our country, and instead of discouraging this group our officials should be encouraging it."

Giant Mudslide Bowls Train Off Tracks 90 On Streamliner Escape With Shaking Up

WHITE ROCK, B.C. (AP)—A speeding Great Northern Railway passenger train was bowled off the tracks by a giant mudslide near here Thursday but the more than 90 passengers aboard escaped with a shaking up.

The diesel streamliner was northbound from Seattle to Vancouver when it was hit broadside by the slide, which carried uprooted trees before it as it cut a swath down a steep embankment.

The mishap occurred two miles north of this border resort town, 30 miles south of Vancouver.

The passengers were rerouted to Vancouver by bus.

Company officials said they hoped to have the line open for traffic by noon today.

Expect No Changes In Cabinet—Gemmell

SUDBURY (CP)—Lands Minister Gemmell of Ontario said Thursday night that Premier Frost has told him no changes are anticipated in the Ontario cabinet.

He told the Young Progressive Conservative Association that Mr. Frost "has asked me to carry out the legislature debates for the department of lands and forests."

The 43-year-old member for Sudbury said that during the last 10 days he was given medical permission to resume his cabinet duties. Last fall he suffered a heart attack and spent some weeks in a Toronto hospital.

Richard Criticizes NHL Chief

MONTREAL (CP) Maurice (Rocket) Richard, in his column today in the French-language weekly Samedi - Dimanche, says President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League dealt unjustly with Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion and "if Mr. Campbell wants to throw me out of the league for daring to criticize him, let him do so."

Richard wrote that he was "burned up" over the "most extraordinary punishment, to say the least," imposed by Campbell on Geoffrion.

He said the punishment was "absolutely unjust in view of the facts, humiliating to Geoffrion, and was even criticized by newspaper men of Toronto and Detroit."

Rocket went on to say that Geoffrion hadn't been the same since being given an eight-game suspension by Campbell as the result of a stick-swinging brawl with Ron Murphy of New York Rangers in a game in New York. Geoffrion suffered a cut on the head, then landed on Murphy who suffered a fractured jaw. Murphy was given a four-game suspension.

MURPHY "THIRD-RATE"

Geoffrion was "demoralized" humiliated, and I am not talking about the fine he had to pay for having dared to defend his life against a vicious and voluntary attack by a little third-rate player."

"I see that Dick Irvin (coach of Montreal Canadiens) wasn't backward about saying what he thought, and I won't be backward either."

Richard wrote that Campbell admitted that Murphy was the instigator of the affair. He also said Murphy wasn't so badly injured because he will probably return to the game within a month.

CAN PLAY AGAIN

"Murphy will be able to play against Canadiens again, while Boom Boom won't be able to play against Rangers this season.

"What a farce! It would be funny if it wasn't so tough on Geoffrion, one of the stars of the league and a gentleman as well.

"I'll go further. According to a number of friends who watch President Campbell during games at the forum the president shows evident partiality in his reactions to the play. He smiles and openly shows pleasure when an opposing club scores against us, and it is known that on several occasions he has given his decision against Canadiens players."

Farm Land Expropriation Termed Unfair

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario government methods of expropriating farm land for use in running power lines or as sites for government-sponsored housing projects came under fire Thursday at the annual meeting of the Ontario Whole Milk [illegible] farm organizations meeting here this week. The Ontario Federation of Agriculture continues its sessions today. The Ontario Cheese Producers' Association wound up its deliberations Thursday.

The milk producers passed a resolution criticizing the expropriation measures as "unfair, unjust and unnecessary." It urged setting up of a "fairer" system of arbitration, "so that a farmer would be assured of receiving a fair market price for his property, plus compensation for his loss and damages."

MAIN OBJECTION

In the case of some of the housing projects, "the main objective seems to be the transfer of the burden of low-taxed dwellings from the big cities to the surrounding municipalities."

A dual price plan, whereby there would be one price for farm products destined for export and another for domestic sales, was discussed by the Federation of Agriculture.

C. A. Milligan of Napanee, federation president, said such a system is used by implement and automobile manufacturers. He asked:

"If it works for industry, which it obviously does, why won't it work for the farmer?"

27 Corporations Go On Trial

TORONTO (CP) — Twenty-seven Ontario and Quebec corporations and two individuals will go on trial here Monday on charges of conspiring to fix prices in the fine paper industry.

The corporations and individuals are charged with conspiring to fix prices at the manufacturing and wholesale level from 1933 to Oct. 31, 1952.

Mr. Justice Wishart Spence will preside at the trial in non-jury assize court. Norman Mathews, crown prosecutor, said the trial may last two months.

City Churches Observe Week Of Prayer

A prayer service at Mark St. United Church Thurday was the third held in a week of prayer services under the auspices of the Peterborough Ministerial Association.

Mark St. United Church, which has held prayer meetings on four nights this week, attracted a fairly large congregation. Dr. N. D. Patterson gave an address entitled "On Guidance," and anthems were sung by the church choir. The last of these prayer services will be held in the Salvation Army Temple on Saturday night.

Services were held in Alliance and Baptist Churches, Park St., on Tuesday and in St. Andrew's United Church on Wednesday.

Mysterious Explosion Precedes Shop Fire

SARNIA (CP)—A mysterious explosion shook houses about a two-storey frame building here Thursday night and touched off a $25,000 fire that destroyed a tinsmithing shop and severely damaged a construction company office.

A neighbor said he heard an explosion just before 8 p.m. and running out, saw flames shooting up the back of the tin shop which occupied the lower half of the building.

An estimated $12,000 worth of tinning equipment was lost in the blaze and new office furniture and company records in the construction office were ruined. Some 2,000 gramophone records in the office were melted by the heat.

Cause of the explosion and fire were not immediately determined.

French Freighter Sinks Off Spain

BIARRITZ, France (Reuters)—The 1,490-ton French freighter Cap Falcon sank off the coast of Spain in the Bay of Biscay today during a violent storm.

All 22 men aboard the vessel were picked up by two Spanish trawlers in the area close to France's border with Spain, according to radio messages received here.

By tradition, Capt. Jean Beccara was the last to leave his sinking ship. He jumped into the raging waters just before his vessel went under.

The crew reported a small fire broke out aboard the freighter two days ago but was put out. Cause of the sinking was not immediately known.

$6,000 Accident Damage

ORILLIA (CP) — An estimated $6,000 damage was done to a large transport on Highway 11 about 10 miles south of here today when it plunged into a ditch while attempting to avoid an oncoming car passing another. Driver-owner Archibald Ball of Bracebridge was unhurt.

School Students In Sympathy With Teachers

TORONTO (CP)—Sixteen presidents of city high school student councils, representing 17,000 pupils, met Thursday night to discuss "a plan of action" should teachers stop extra-curricular work Jan. 22 in protest against the present salary system.

The presidents declared themselves in "full sympathy" with their teachers who are seeking a separate salary scale instead of the present single-salary scale which lumps together primary and secondary school teachers.

"We don't want to become the tools of the teachers by agreeing to fall in with everything they say," said one president. "We want to help them, but we must consider the student body first."

WOULD CANCEL EVENTS

"If we support the teachers to the hilt, it must be all the way, and we must cancel dance tickets and orchestra committments," said David Greenspan.

The meeting decided to back the teachers until Jan. 22. Further meetings will be held to decide if students will take over management of such extra-curricular activities as sports, social affairs, literary projects and drama.

No Request For Testimony

OTTAWA (CP)—There is "no foundation" for Senator Pat McCarran's suggestion that Canada might not agree to Igor Gouzenko's testimony being made public, a spokesman for the external affairs department said Thursday.

Senator McCarran, one of two senators who quizzed Gouzenko Monday for five hours, was quoted Wednesday as saying that he doubts the Canadian government will agree to release the transcript of the secret interview.

One of Canada's conditions for a meeting between Gouzenko and representatives of the United States Senate internal security subcommittee was that it must approve any testimony before it could be made public.

Two Canadians Executed At Sing Sing

OSSINING, N.Y. (AP) — Two Canadians, the first foreign residents to die in Sing Sing prison's electric chair, were executed Thursday night for the slaying of a Buffalo, N.Y., jeweler.

Griffen, 27, both of Hamilton, Ont., were arrested in Hamilton and extradited to the United States two days after the slaying of jeweler Donald Hurd during a $40,000 robbery of his store Dec. 9, 1952.

Aliens who resided in the U.S. have died in Sing Sing's electric chair, but not residents of another country.

There was no immediate word after the execution on the disposition of Griffen's eyes, which he had donated before his death to the Buffalo Eye Bank and Research Society. The society announced Wednesday that the condemned man had authorized the use of his eyes to restore someone else's sight. A cornea transplant operation can cure certain types of blindness.

There were no patients in Buffalo awaiting transplants, so the society said Griffen's eyes would be used in New York City.

NEW EXECUTIONER

Pulling the switch for the double execution was a new executioner—whose name has not been made public. Sing Sing's previous executioner, Joseph Francell, resigned last summer after 14 years on the job.

First to die was O'Dell.

As he approached the chair, O'Dell turned to the Rev. Luther K. Hannum, Protestant prison chaplain, and said:

O'Dell last was visited by relatives three weeks ago. A sister visited Griffen last week.

Griffen entered the chamber with the Roman Catholic chaplain, Rev. Thomas J. Donovan. Griffen said nothing, but kissed Father Donovan's cross on his way to the chair.

EXPRESSES REMORSE

In Buffalo, Griffen's lawyers disclosed he had written a letter to them expressing sorrow and remorse for the slaying of Hurd.

Griffen wrote:

"I cannot even make an attempt to try and tell you the remorse, sorrow and heart-felt pity I have for Mrs. Hurd.

"If there is some possible way for her to have some happiness, then from the bottom of my heart I hope she obtains it

"This leaves me speechless, but maybe some day, somehow, she can forget it. I honestly hope so."

O'Dell and Griffen both ate hearty luncheons Thursday, including pie, ice cream and candy. For his last evening meal, O'Dell ate steak, french fried potatoes, green peas and more candy. Griffen's last meal consisted of bacon, fried eggs, toast and coffee.

Three New Members Appointed To Board

TORONTO (CP)—Lands Minister Gemmell of Ontario said today three new members have been appointed to his eight-man advisory board.

The men, prominent in Ontario industrial circles, are George Rayner of Toronto and Fred Donegan and Donald Milne, both of North Bay. They replace three retiring members—Robert Drummond of Toronto, Archibald Freeman of North Bay and D. A. Gillies of Braeside—who have been on the board since its inception in 1950.

The board studies lands and forests problems and advises the minister.

1948 attempt on the life of CIO president Walter Reuther.

O'Brien discounted previous reports that gamblers had made Reuther a shotgun target because of his successful campaign to cut down gambling by workers in auto plants.

The prosecutor, top man in police investigation of the attempted assassination, said racketeers came within an eyelash of gaining control of the UAW prior to Reuther's election as president of the union in 1947.

REVEALS OFFICIAL LINE

The prosecutor aired his views at a press conference. It was the first official revelation of the line the prosecution will take in its efforts to convict the accused would-be assassins.

O'Brien reported the mass of evidence gathered painstakingly since the shooting, April 20, 1948, indicated that the gambling issue merely served to bring together labor leaders and racketeers and set the stage for ensuing events.

The real objective, O'Brien said, was to get the power to force management to agree to deals that would be far more profitable and respectable than gambling operations.

she entered the laboratory. They conjectured she struck her forehead on a protruding table corner, then crashed backwards to the floor.

But they didn't rule out the possibility she was bludgeoned from behind by a prowler, possibly someone searching for narcotics.

KEPT VAIN WATCH

Hospital attendants kept a constant watch at the bedside in the hope she would regain consciousness at least long enough to say what happened. She was semi-conscious for a few minutes but did not speak any intelligible words. She died while her father, Thomas Boyle of Cobourg, was rushing to her bedside.

Miss Boyle, employed at the hospital eight years, was on the night shift this week. She would have finished duty at 10 p. m.—15 minutes after Dr. Gerladine Arthur went to the laboratory with a specimen to be tested and found her stretched senseless on her back on the floor.

There was no evidence of any struggle in the laboratory. Elevator attendants said no one apart from doctors or nurses went to the sixth floor during the hour before Miss Boyle was found in a pool of blood.

Conference Held In Secret

SYDNEY, Australia—(Reuters)—President Eisenhower's call for a freer trade system in the Free World may well summarize the sense of the Commonwealth finance minister's conference, Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies said at the opening of the conference here today. Menzies spoke to the delegates of nine Commonwealth countries in a 55-minute ceremony in a hotel ballroom. The ministers then adjourned for closed-door discussions.

All delegates at the ceremonies expressed their confidence in the future of the sterling area. Britain's delegate, Richard A. Butler, chancellor of the exchequer, gave the conference a watchword: "Expansion and hope," adding: "We must throw good money after goods."

A warning note was struck by Sir Oliver Senetilleke, Ceylon's finance minister, who said that the work of the conference could only be translated to millions in Asia in terms of houses, jobs and food.

SECURITY SCRUTINY

All 150 official delegates, as well as newspaper representatives, technicians and camera men, were scrutinized by security officers on entering the lobby adjoining the conference room.

Finance Minister Abbott leads the Canadian delegation, which includes Fred Bull, deputy trade minister; J. J. Deutsch, assistant deputy finance minister; Louis Rasminsky, executive assistant to the governors of the Bank of Canada, and Doris Bentley, Abbott's private secretary.

Abbott said before leaving Canada that the Canadian role "will be that of an interested observer." Canada, a dollar country, will not be involved directly in the phase of the conference dealing with sterling problems.

Parks Committee Suggests Rink Supervision

Preliminary to becoming acquainted with the work and properties of his department, he has made tours of [illegible] week, and young people are making use of the neighborhood recreation places.

Ald. Knox said he was disappointed at Turner Park, High St. Some windows have been broken, and there was other evidence that boys do not appreciate the accommodation provided for them.

He hopes to develop community interest in the playgrounds, and at Turner Park to enlist the cooperation of parents and also of the youngsters. It has been reported that the Police Athletic Association may take a hand in supervision there. The question of supervision generally, for the safety of smaller children at the skating rinks, is receiving early attention.

With time at his disposal, it is the intention of Ald. Knox to keep the properties of his committee under rounds of his own supervising. Aldermen Burrows, McBride and Powell attended Thursday with Mayor Graham.

Canada Plans Attend Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will take part in any full-scale negotiations on President Eisenhower's proposal for an international pool for peaceful development of atomic energy, officials said Thursday.

They added that ever since the President outlined his plan to the United Nations last month, Canada and the United States have been exchanging views on the subject. This process will continue.

At Washington, the U.S. state department said the U.S. and Russia will soon start preliminary talks on Eisenhower's atomic pool proposal.

The U.S. was already acquainted with Canada's views and could advance them if required. It was unlikely Canada would be represented at these preliminary discussions but the outcome would be relayed to the Canadian government.

CNR Conditions Reject Old Union

MONTREAL (CP)—A majority of 2,000 Canadian National Railways conductors has rejected its present union, the Order of Railway Conductors, in favor of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, it was announced Thursday night.

A. J. Kelly of Ottawa, international vice-president and Canadian head of the brotherhood, said he understands the brotherhood has won a representation vote in both eastern and western Canada, although no figures of the count were available. The count was held Thursday in Ottawa by the national labor relations board.

Mr. Kelly said: "My information is that in both eastern and western regions a majority of conductors clearly supported the brotherhood."

The western region starts at Armstrong, Ont., and runs to the west coast. The eastern region runs from Armstrong to Sydney, N.S.

The labor relations board authorized the vote last fall when the brotherhood claimed it had a majority of CNR conductors.

Canadian Pacific Railway conductors were not involved. They voted for brotherhood in a similar issue two years ago.

Police Association Demands 40-Hr. Week

SUDBURY (CP)—The Sudbury police commission is studying new demands by the police association for a 40-hour week and higher wages.

Application for the 40-hour week and a 15 per cent salary increase were turned down by an arbitration board last year.

In refusing the applications the board said that only six southern Ontario police forces work a 40-hour week and the Sudbury force's 44 hours was "better than most other cities."

The police association said 90 per cent of labor in Sudbury was on a 40-hour week.

Criticize Gov't For Fire Trap

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto District Trades and Labor Council Thursday night criticized the Ontario government and the University of Toronto for permitting the headquarters for cancer research in Ontario to be "buried in a fire trap."

A recent fire in a downtown building housing cancer research set back cancer experiments about five years, university officials said. About 8,000 laboratory mice were killed.

"It is a disgrace to the university and to the province that research, which is so vital to the well-being of our citizens, should be buried in a fire trap for headquarters," said a report endorsed by the council which represents some 60,000 workers in the greater Toronto area.

The council urged free diagnosis and treatment of cancer in Ontario "just as has been provided in other and poorer provinces."

Stock Market Activity Takes Swing Upward

Papers showed the only industrial loss. Utilities, steels, refining oils, liquors, foods and banks were higher in light trading. Motors and manufactures were steady.

Western oils led the afternoon recovery with Anglo-Canadian, Bailey-Selburne and several others showing gains ranging to 15 cents after 10- and 15-cent losses in the forenoon.

Base metals were also stronger. Uraniums were strong with a majority of penny gains. Bathurst-area base metals showed an unbroken list of gains, ranging to United Montauban's 10 cents.

Would Extend Lindsay's Planning Area

LINDSAY (ENS) — Lindsay council has taken the first step in implementing a recommendation in Mayor Bert Hick's inaugural address that the council consider annexation of parts of Ops Township during 1954. A recommendation was brought in asking that a mile and a half area of the township surrounding the [illegible] be added to Lindsay's [illegible] under the jurisdiction of the town planning board.

The move was made at the suggestion of aldermen J. A. McQuarrie, chairman of the town planning board, who said the area involved would not probably be totally annexed, but would take care of the town's needs in the future and insure proper developments of the highway approaches.

Ops township was asked last year to send representatives to the town planning body which was then being formed but the township did not do so.

The motion for the additional planning area will be passed on to the dept of planning and development.

The new council also took up an old problem which began last year with the refusal of the 1953 council to pay the high school area board the extra mill payment which had been paid since the formation of the board in 1950. The board had submitted a bill to the council for $4,419 as payment of the mill.

The council refused to be bound by any demands made on the 1953 council, and informed the high school board that another re estimate for payment would have to be made.

DISCUSS WAGES

Wages of town employees were also discussed. Representations had been received from the firemen and police associations asking for new salary schedules. Aldermen felt that a new schedule could not be drawn up since arbitration was still in process on the 1953 demands of the firemen. A committee was appointed to report to council.

Clerk Allely informed council that Judge Kennedy, of Peterborough, the arbitrator in the firemen's dispute was awaiting word whether the 1954 council would honour an award made against the 1953 body. Council decided to seek legal advice on this point.

Council finally passed the agreement for servicing the Maryknoll building co-operative project at the east end of the town. Previous confusion over the amount the town would pay for the services was cleared up in a recent meeting with representatives of the department of planning and development and council were told by the co-op that it would recover one hundred percent of the cost of services it installs inside the limits of the housing project. A motion was passed authorizing the signing of the agreement.

The various appointments to town committees were also made in most cases re-appointing citizens whose terms had expired.

City Forced To Act If Rent Controls Gone

HAMILTON (CP)—City of Hamilton will have to establish "some form of rent controls" if Premier Frost refuses a Toronto plea that the province continue the controls after the March 2 deadline, Ald. John Lewington, chairman of a special city council committee studying the question, declared today.

"If Toronto's appeal is turned down, we will have to proceed, and in a hurry," Ald. Lewington said. "It seems to me that the committee is very nearly unanimous that something should be done to prevent profiteering which may be attempted by some unscrupulous landlords."

Regina Girl In Fry Play

LONDON (CP)—Frances Hyland, up-and-coming actress from Regina, will play a leading role in Christopher Fry's new play, "The Darkness Is Light Enough."

The blonde Canadian, regarded by critics as one of the most talented younger dramatic performers in London, will appear with Dame Edith Evans, Montrealer James Donald and others when the play opens in the provinces early in March. The Fry production, characteristically written in verse, is a costume romantic melodrama-comedy three years in the writing.

Miss Hyland, 24, said today she regards her role as the "best yet" in a series of good ones. The play is expected to reach London early in April.

Miss Hyland said she was offered a chance to play opposite James Mason at the Stratford, Ont., Shakespearean festival this summer. She had to turn it down because of the Fry play.

However, she hopes to appear at Stratford next year, commitments permitting.

Malenkov Observes His 52nd Birthday

LONDON (Reuters) — Moon-faced Georgi Malenkov today celebrated his 52nd birthday and his first as Russian premier. In conformity with Soviet practice, it went unmentioned in almost all the Communist press and radio.

The only exception was the Romanian news agency, which got its wires to the Kremlin crossed and published a long article to celebrate the occasion.

Soon after, all editors in the Communist satellite state were ordered to "kill" the story, according to reports reaching here. No explanation was given.

Workman Lost Toes In Hydraulic Press

CAMPBELLFORD —(ENS) — Arthur Bertrand, 35, and Roger Lain, 65, employees of the Gair Company of Canada at the pulp plant here suffered injuries to their feet while at work on Thursday.

The two men were straightening out a load of pulpwood which had been placed on the hydraulic press. They apparently were standing too close to a lifting table and their toes became caught in the press.

Both men were taken to the Campbellford Memorial hospital by plant superintendent G. W. Dickson. There x-rays revealed that Lain had only suffered bruises and was allowed to go home.

Bertrand was more seriously injured. Several toes were so badly crushed they had to be removed. His condition today was reported as satisfactory.

Building Collapses

CHARLESTON, W. Va. (AP)—A two-storey brick building at a busy downtown intersection swayed, cracked open and collapsed in a cloud of dust during the noon rush Thursday. Luckily there was about 20 minutes' warning and nobody was injured.

Brother Stuck To Land In West, Son Reaps Oil

When the ice and snow begin to chill you and you feel like pulling stakes and heading for a warmer clime, take a tip from antoher man who may have bypassed a fortune for doing just that.

Tom Skinner, 535 Park St., and [illegible] present Brinton-Peterborough Carpet Co., was being reconverted from an old sugar beet factory. Three years later, William decided to go west and seek his fortune. He settled in Virden, Manitoba, and began farming the land, consequently keeping up a running battle with the ice and snow seven months of the year.

Two years later, in 1911, Tom Skinner made the trip west.

"When I reached Brandon the snow and slush was getting me down, but I went as far as Calgary—and was fed up."

RETURNED HOME

Tom returned to Peterborough and continued his work as a carpenter, while his brother William made his living fighting the land. Eventually William died after a hard, but fulfilling life, and left the land in Virden to his son William Jr., who carried on in his father's footsetps.

In August of 1953 oil was discovered in the Virden-Roselea area, and no one is sure yet how much of it is on the Skinner farm. A letter received by Tom at Christmas from another brother, Harry, who is employed by the CNR in the Virden area, tells of five wells producing and three more ready to be drilled on the 320 acre farm. Considering that Bill Skinner is receiving a 6¼ percent share of the daily flow, and each barrel is worth about $2.60, the daily income is comparable with the average weekly wage.

"Yes, if I had stayed on out there I might have hit it too", said Tom Skinner.

But there was no discontent in his voice.

Family Arguments Now Over Get Two Things On TV At Once

NEW YORK (CP)—A new "duoscopic" television receiver, demonstrated for the first time Thursday by the Allen B. Du Mont Laboratories, Inc., is designed to eliminate family arguments over which TV show to turn on.

The manufacturers assert the invention makes it possible to see and hear two different programs on the same TV receiver at the same time.

By wearing special polarized glasses, and earphones, the demonstrators said, a husband can watch the fights and his wife a romantic drama at the same time. Or children can follow their cowboy favorite while mom and dad watch more sophisticated fare.

DEPENDS ON GLASSES

The new receiver is actually like two sets in one. The receiver can tune in on any two television programs simultaneously, and to the naked eye the two pictures appear to be superimposed. With special glasses, however, a viewer sees only one of the programs. By reversing the glasses the other program can also be seen clearly.

The set can be turned into a one-program-only set with a flick of a switch—no glasses, no earphones.

A dusty, shrewd-looking man slowly got out of his car and looked around in front of a farmer's house and said, "Fine piece of land you got here."

"It's worth every penny of $300 an acre," replied the farmer, with an eye to business. "Were you thinking of buying and settling here?" he continued.

"Nope," replied the stranger as he made some notes in his book, "I'm the new tax assessor."—Capper's Weekly.

The Wheel And The Hub

The population of Canada is now large enough to grow by osmosis—a more apt metaphor at this time of the year might be 'snowballing'. In 1900, when there were 5,371,000 people in Canada, a five per cent increase meant only 268,500 additional heads. Now, when the population is fifteen millions, a five per cent. increase means an addition of three quarters of a million people. When the June 1951 census was taken the first figures released disappointingly showed fewer than fourteen million people in Canada; some insistent revision later brought the figure just over fourteen million. Two and a half years later—now—the population is in excess of fifteen millions. The rate of increase is less than five per cent annually; the striking thing is that the population has grown by a million in the short time since the last census.

* * *

Snowballing affects even a small city of Peterborough's size. When the 1951 census was taken the place had 38,272 people. Now highway signs at the entrance to the city show its population variously as 41,500 and 42,000. Acutally, there are still not quite 40,000 people in the city proper. (The Department of Highways is obviously making up—by leaps and bounds—for its former minimizing of Peterborough's size, shamefully parading old figures like 35,000 when actually there were 38,272 people.)

* * *

The wheel of the vast, newly big Canada is Ontario and its hub is Toronto. Both reflect the aggrandizement of the country as a whole, and actually contain much of it. On New Year's Day Toronto became a metropolis on the pattern of London, England, and New York, with a supra-Toronto council, and even a subway being made ready for the end of March to demonstrate that the new Toronto is indeed metropolitan. Ontario has made Toronto great, for that city is the focus of the energy, productivity and expansion in numbers and wealth of the Province. Ontario itself, as the leading manufacturing province of Canada, equals the combined strength of the other nine provinces and contributes half of the total for all Canada in value of goods produced, employment and payrolls. (Since 1946 manufacturing production in Ontario has increased from $3,700,000,000 to $8,900,000,000 annually—a dizzy array of zeros, we add parenthetically.)

* * *

The geographical position of Ontario should not be ignored as an influence in this superior economic and industrial position. Not only does the Province lie midway across Canada, drawing from and giving to other provinces; not only is it bordered by a great inland waterway destined to become a great sea-lane; it is also across the way from six American states which have a combined population of 65,000,000. This is a rich market, a special asset to Ontario. Peterborough people have cause to know the value of the proximity of these millions of American people; not primarily to this district's manufacturing and agricultural industries it is true, but to the Peterborough tourist industry.

Few Resignations

Last year was pretty stable, insofar as elected and salaried officials of the city were concerned. However there were a few resignations of importance which were reflections on or of the state of affairs in Peterborough. The chief of the Fire Department resigned. So did the Sanitary Inspector, Mr. Ronald Macpherson. The Recreation Commissioner, Alex Sinclair, gave his notice. Mr. Norman Graham gave up his seat as alderman (to heed the call to a higher state of usefulness). Dr. G. R. Langley of the Utilities Commission resigned, feeling that his usefulness as a member of the Commission was so circumscribed as to be reduced to nothing.

The reasons for withdrawing from the city's service were various. Whatever they were the fact remains that the experience of these men in their offices must be a loss (except in the case of Mayor Graham) to the community, and that a turn-over of officers inevitably is at least a jolt, good or bad. The loss to the city's operation of Dr. Langley, the only electrical engineering expert on the Utilities Commission, is somewhat mitigated by the legacy of his two years on the Commission and of his questions and recommendations made as he resigned.

The Canada Foundation, formed to promote culture in this country, reports an end-of-year surplus. Not of culture, we hasten to add, but of cash.

Trade Is Not A Matter of Sentiment

The Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of Trade and Commerce, says that Canada is willing to trade with Soviet Russia "in a limited list of commodities, non-strategic goods".

There is no harm in such trade, for the persons you do business with are not necessarily your friends, nor are you influenced by their ideas merely because you sell to them or buy from them. Canada has a lively trade with the Argen[illegible] dictatorship. This has [illegible] Britain does a limited amount of business with Russia, a business which has even been extended under the Conservative Churchill government. This has not made Britain Communist nor Churchill a Red.

Australia and other Commonwealth countries are increasing their trade with Soviet Russia. Australia has recently contracted to buy Russian canned salmon and crab meat. Why should Canada not do business with Russia? This country needs markets. Trade between the two countries is now almost non-existent. It is not likely to become large, because the exportable products of both countries are similar, not complementary although one suspects that Russia would buy Canadian steel and machines, which can be considered "strategic". However, there must be some manufactured Canadian goods not in this category which Russia wants and needs. She has the gold to pay for them, and Canada could import with some advantage to her palate certain characteristic Russian food and drink. If the trade were not on a barter basis, it could be three or four sided, with intermediary markets in Britain and Europe.

The resumption of trade with Russia would, as the Ottawa Journal remarks, "do more to ease tension and to break down the Iron Curtain than any amount of diplomatic talk and disputation".

It is foolish and futile to allow sentiment any place in trade. Sentiment is merely icing to the cake. If it is a choice between cake without icing and no cake, let us take the cake.

High Costs Diminish The Fleet

Canada has 62 ships in her deep-sea fleet. This year the merchant fleet is likely to be cut in half. The reasons are that the ship-owners are in financial difficulties and wish to transfer the vessels from Canadian to British registry. In most cases the proprietors would continue thier ownership, but the Canadian seamen would be replaced by British seamen. The whole purpose of the change in registry is to be able to man the ships with outsiders, who work for smaller wages. Under Canadian registry the Canadian ships cannot compete with other merchant marines because their operating costs are too high. It seems to be a case of either change the registry or go out of business. Some forty ships are said to be losing money and the Government has already begun to approve the transfer of registry so as to keep the ships afloat.

For a country bounded on three sides by three oceans Canada's merchant marine is very small. That it should dwindle to twenty or thirty ships is not a calamity, but it is a poor showing. A result will be that only a few hundred Canadian mariners will remain of the proud and daring race of seafarers who once made our maritime people notable. (It is rather shaming to them that plans must now be made by Ottawa to "rehabilitate" the seamen who will be laid off because of the transfers.)

What a wry situation this is at a time when Canada's fourth boundary, the southern, will for a third of its total length soon become a deep-sea route. The St. Lawrence navigational developments will be completed so that vessels from the Atlantic will be able to sail inland as far as Port Arthur and Duluth, but few will be sailed by Canadian mariners. The high cost of Canadian labour (at docks, onships, in port installations) is making seamanship too expensive for Canada. The sea is at her gates, her gates both east and west (and north and south), but the commerce through them will be done by others than Canadians.

Imperfect Arithmetic

To obviate readers' further inquiries about the mathematical wizardry which divided the Arabian sheik's camels so well among his sons, we hereby make an explanation. The story, as reprinted on this page Wednesday from the Fort William Times-Journal ran as follows:

At the sheik's death, he left his property, 17 camels to his three sons, stating that the eldest son was to receive one-half of them, the second son a third and the youngest a ninth. Since fractions of camels are almost worthless, an elder of the tribe solved the difficulty of the three sons; he added a camel of his own to make 18. Then the camels were divided among the sons, one received nine, as half the total, the second received six, the youngest two. The one camel that remained was returned to the elder of the tribe; it had served its purpose.

The trick in the arithmetic is of course this: the original testamentary disposition did not account for all the herd, since one-half, one third and one-ninth do not add up to a whole. They make seventeen-eighteenths; hence the eighteenth camel, thrown in to make the division simple, reverted to its owner.

LONDON LETTER

Slack Defence And Wine Taste

By ROBERT MILLER

THERE HAS been a good deal of speculation as to why Mr. Anthony Eden asked five Conservative members of Parliament who were going to Egypt during the Christmas parliamentary recess to cancel their visit. The five members had, I understand, taken [illegible] invitation and had been told that there was no reason why they should not go to Cairo. On the contrary, the Foreign Office, I am told, took the view that the visit was a friendly gesture and could do nothing but good.

Why, then, did Mr. Eden so suddenly change his mind? One explanation is that Ministers have now become thoroughly alarmed by the large number of Conservative M.P.s who want the Government to break off the Anglo-Egyptian talks on the Suez Canal Zone. Some of them would like to defy General Neguib and believe that after a few months the Egyptians would get tired of the struggle and give up. Others would like the British to retire to a strip of Egyptian territory, which, they argue, could be held by a mere brigade. In genral, the two views are not so very different: on no account, the critics say, should the British leave Egypt.

The revolt is a serious one — far more serious than anything of its kind that has happened in the Conservative Party for many years. All the same I find it difficult to believe that Mr. Eden will now draw back and break off the negotiations. Both the Foreign Office and the defence chiefs are convinced that the Canal Zone base is useless unless the troops there have the goodwill of the local population and that the British should evacuate the Zone under an agreement with Egypt for the maintenance and reactivation of the base.

A COMMITTEE of 36 M.Ps has just issued a scathing report on the state of Britain's civil defence. "It was made clear in evidence," says the report, "that the policy is not to prepare for an immediate war or even for a fairly early probable war but only 'to prepare for war'."

What then, has been happening all these years? According to the report, recruiting for civil defence services has been very bad. Even those people who enrol sometimes do not mean what they say. "Many people," the document says, "are persuaded to enrol only to get rid of the canvasser." Apparently between 20 to 25 per cent of those who join do not turn up for their training. As for the instructors, many of them are incompetent and people have left the civil defence service because the training was so dull and bad.

Here are some other points in the report:-

The National Hospital Service Reserve has only about 2,000 members who were not already in voluntary aid societies.

There was practically no co-operation between the local authorities and hospital boards.

Although the original plan proposed in 1948 envisaged the development of a number of mobile columns to go to the help of areas overwhelmed by an atomic attack, the first skeleton column was not formed until 1952.

There seems to have been continual overestimating in nearly every department. In the first four years of the civil defence programme, the four departments concerned over-estimated their expenditure, by 110 per cent., 200 per cent., 200 per cent., and 146 per cent. respectively. In fact the Committee was "shocked" to find that although estimates were put in for more than £73 millions, only about half of that sum was spent.

In 1948 it was proposed to get 51,000 new fire engines but in fact nothing like that number have been bought.

Ministers have been scandously slack. "Your Committee," the report says, "were amazed to learn that nearly five years after the passing of the Civil Defence Act, which made it obligatory for the designated Ministers to lay regulations before Parliament for approval, not one of these statutory instruments authorising grants has been laid. For five years, therefore, various Ministries have been making grants without statutory authority."

THERE have been some novel Christmas cards this year. We have had a 3-D card, with the right spectacles attached, and even a talking card. Apparently the talking card is made to speak by running a plastic strip at the back through finger and thumb. The sounds that come out, I am told, are weird and wonderful, though they are supposed to form the name of the firm that sent the card.

There has been a tremendous change of fashion in these things since I was a boy. In those days the Christmas card concentrated on the traditional ideas of Christmas. Bright, friendly robins hopped across the snowy landscape, the windows of a house gleamed in welcome, and the picture was framed in mistletoe and holly. In modern times the designers of the more fashionable cards have abandoned these simple associations and their pictures and drawings rarely have anything to do with Christmas. Looking round my room as I write, I cannot spot one card that shows a robin or holly or snow. An aeroplane alights on the water, a horse stands gazing into the distance, a flower girl passes by with her basket. Even the Christian significance of the season is rarely referred to; indeed I have had only one card that shows the Virgin and her child. For many people Christmas is just a bank holiday — a time for eating and drinking, for giving presents, and seeing one's friends. It remains, however a family affair which is celebrated in the home. I cannot think off-hand of anybody who ate this Christmas turkey and plum pudding in a restaurant.

ONE OF THE general changes that has taken place in this country during the last two or three years has been the improvement in the British hotel and restaurant. Britain, I think, still suffers from not having the equivalent of a French Michelin Guide — really dependable reference book that would tell the traveller where he can expect a good meal in a strange town. The result is that he must depend on the Automobile Association, whose judgement in these matters is not very reliable, or his luck. Although the wanderer will come across poor cooking and indifferent service, he will also discover hotels and restaurants that are as good as anything he will find on the Continent of Europe. This year, for instance, I stayed at a hotel in Worcestershire where for seven-and-a-half guineas a week I ate better than I could have done in France for the same price. I also gratefully remember a hotel in Perth (Scotland) where, for five shillings, I had a lunch that was certainly the best I have had for a long time.

This country's taste in drinking is also changing. Just after the war the Jeremiahs often used to lament that the youth of today had lost its taste for wine — the connoisseur would soon cease to exist. How wrong they have been! The latest figures show that people in Britain drank more wine this year than they did in 1952. To my surprise Spain supplied us with more wine than anybody else during the first eleven months — at least in quantity. The figures also show some interesting changes. Since April trade in wine has steadily improved all round except for champagne. There was a burst of champagne sales during the Coronation but since then the sale of champagne has fallen off again, largely no doubt because the French have made it so expensive. All the same Britain still drinks only about two-thirds of the wine she drank before the war, while the consumption of whiskey has gone down by 50 per cent.

WILL ONE-EYE CRASH?

Yours very truly,
D. R. Morrison.

BAN ON FILM ANNOYS

SIR: I was sorry to see that your Editorial of Tuesday condones the banning in Quebec Province of the film "Martin Luther."

Your argument that the showing of this film might cause trouble is unworthy, and would seem to suggest that the rights of minorities may be ignored or suppressed if they are likely to cause disturbance. No person who is conscious of the great contribution made by minorities to the growth of humanity and freedom can feel easy in his mind about this latest ban.

You say that ban does not surprise or annoy you. It annoys me, but does not surprise me, as it is merely part of a pattern with which we are now, unfortunately, familiar. The censorship and suppression of books, many of them the works of outstanding scientists, philosophers and historians, the interference with the right of religious minorities to preach, and the many other manifestations of intolerance of which we hear daily in Quebec must cause deep concern to all who care about Civil Liberties.

Perhaps it might be well if we took our eyes from the Police States of the U.S.S.R. and Europe and the antics of Senator McCarthy and asked ourselves if we have not a problem of political and religious freedom on our own doorstep.

Yours truly,
ROSA DARTLE.

OUR HUNGER WRANGLED

Sir:—Referring to your recent editorial, "No Luther for Quebec," I view with disfavor your misconception of Alexis Gagnon and the Quebec film censorships board's decision towards this film.

It was clearly stated by a leading Presbyterian Toronto paper, that the distributors could appeal the board's decision. Mr. Gagnon who heads the board, stated why the film was rejected, because it exhibits the Pope in a bad light, and that if you want people to respect each other, you can't hold things they respect up to ridicule.

The Examiner editorial staff's hunger for debatable material wrangled this article into a critical and amusing discussion.

I myself and perhaps others, were greatly astonished at the editorial staff's insinuation that the Roman Catholic church has made clever use of Bing Crosby for PROPAGANDA PURPOSES, as a missionary priest incognito as an AGENT for the Pope as an actor. THIS terminology is likely to be found in the editorial columns of Communist periodicals, but to be found in such an esteemable daily as the Examiner completely baffles me.

I greatly admire Martin Luther as a reformer, and church leader in history gone by, but does the film give fair justice to the greatest spiritual leader of the world, the Pope? It will be clearly seen when the film comes to this city, that Martin Luther's personal weaknesses are not exhibited, as they are in history, much to the favour of the Lutheran church. This film shows the Pope in a bad light, whereas the Pope of this period was one of the church's greatest leaders, and fulfilled his duty by excommunicating anyone who did not profess his doctrines concerning religion.

Thanking you for the space in your excellent paper:

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

Now before the feast of the passover, when Jesus knew that his hour was come that he should depart out of this world unto the Father, having loved his own which were in the world, he loved them unto the end . . . Jesus knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands, and that he was come from God, and went to God; he riseth from supper, and laid aside his garments; and took a towel, and girded himself. After that he poureth water into a basin, and began to wash the disciples' feet, and to wipe them with the towel wherewith he was girded . . .

So after he had washed their feet and taken his garments, and was set down again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you? Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you. (John 13:1, 3-5, 12-15.)

Newfoundland Doctor Paid Well

(St John's Telegram)

There are no more outspoken opponents of socialized medicine than members of the medical profession. Nobody likes to be changed from a free agent to a civil servant. Yet, strange to tell, doctors earn more in Newfoundland than they do in any other part of Canada. In Newfoundland we have a form of semi-socialized medicine, and most doctors are civil servants, or somewhere half way between a civil servant and an independent practitioner.

A British Opinion

Geologists Believe Canada Has Great Oil Reservoir 800 Miles From North Pole

By DAVE McINTOSH
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian government geologists believe they have found a huge reservoir of oil in the Arctic archipelago north of the North Pole which some day may surpass the oil wealth of Alberta.

The discovery comprises "salt domes" far north of the Arctic circle in a 90,000-square-mile area of the Arctic archipelago. Under the treeless stretch of tundra may lie one of the biggest reservoirs of oil in the world.

Officials here are excited about the find, made last summer after some peculiar rock formations showed on aerial photographs taken by the RCAF for Canada's map-makers.

CENTRE OF NORTH

The region covered by the discovery lies roughly 2,000 miles north of Winnipeg. It takes in the northern part of Melville island, Ellef Ringnes island, Amund Ringnes island and the west coast of Axel Heiberg island, all approximately in the centre of the Arctic archipelago.

The actual find was made by W. W. (Bill) Heywood, 31, of Cowichan Station, B.C., and D. W. Bolyard, 21, of Oklahoma City, Okla., who investigated a dome on Ellef Ringnes island.

The domes are similar to those which led to discovery of oil fields in Texas and Louisiana, Rumania, Mexico, Germany and Russia. In those countries, the [illegible] dome on Ellef Ringnes island.

has proved even more prolific in oil than the oil-bearing strata such as found in Alberta. More than 5,000,000,000 barrels of oil have flowed from wells drilled at some 150 "domes" in Texas and Louisiana.

The peculiar dome structure was first spotted about five years ago in aerial photographs.

GIANT LANDMARKS

Dr. I. C. Brown of the geological survey of Canada advanced several theories after close study of the photographs. But it was not until 1953 that a two-man field team was able to reach one and make geological observations.

Government geologists caution that presence of oil cannot be definitely determined until a hole has been drilled. But they do say: "It is recognized that the domes are exceptionally favorable prospects for oil."

The dome on Ellef Ringnes island is egg-shaped and measures 4½ by 3½ miles. In comparison, the Ungava meteoric crater found two years ago is about two miles in diameter.

The dome which rises 600 feet above the surrounding plain results from a mass of salt within the earth's crust punching its way up through layers of rock, as if it had been squeezed out of a tube. In the case of the domes on the Gulf of Mexico coast, the rising salt funnels trapped lake of oil beneath the surface, where the drills found them.

Exact number of domes in Canada's far north is not yet known, but the geological survey men say there are "many." Domes with ruptured rock showing above the earth's surface are rare in other regions. Most of those found on the gulf coast were covered with earth, so that they appeared merely as gentle rises in the ground.

WEALTH FOR FUTURE

The obvious question is: If there is oil under the domes, who will drill for it and how could it be moved out of the Arctic?

Dr. Yves Fortier, a member of the geological survey and a veteran of arctic expeditions, answers:

"Fifty years ago, it was known there was iron in Labrador but nobody thought then it could ever be mined or moved out of the wilderness. It was known for years there was uranium at Great Bear lake before it was mined. Who can say there might not be a great oil field in the Arctic 50 years from now?"

Dr. John F. Caley, chief of the fuels resources division, says "Today it would not be economic. But tomorrow it might be."

No claims have yet been staked in the area. Government officials are not permitted to do so, and until now only government geologists were aware of the discovery.

There isn't likely to be any stampede to the region. An oil staker must have substantial financial backing. Even if he has this, or if oil companies wished to stake claims, the area is almost inaccessible. Heywood and Bolyard are the only two white men who have

BIGGEST DOME

The dome visited last summer, the only one yet investigated, is 35 miles from the Isachsen weather station on the west coast of Ellef Ringnes island. It now is known as the Isachsen salt dome. It is the biggest and most symmetrical of the many so far spotted on aerial photographs.

Heywood failed in his first try to reach the dome from the Isachsen weather station. Working alone in the summer of 1952, he became mired in arctic mud and could cover only a mile after hours of struggling knee-deep through the quagmire. He was unable to carry enough provisions to reach the dome 35 miles away.

Heywood asked for a chance to make another stab at it. He was accompanied last summer by Bolyard, who came to Canada to help fill the shortage of geologists for summer field surveys. Bolyard now is attending the University of Colorado.

CACHED PROVISIONS

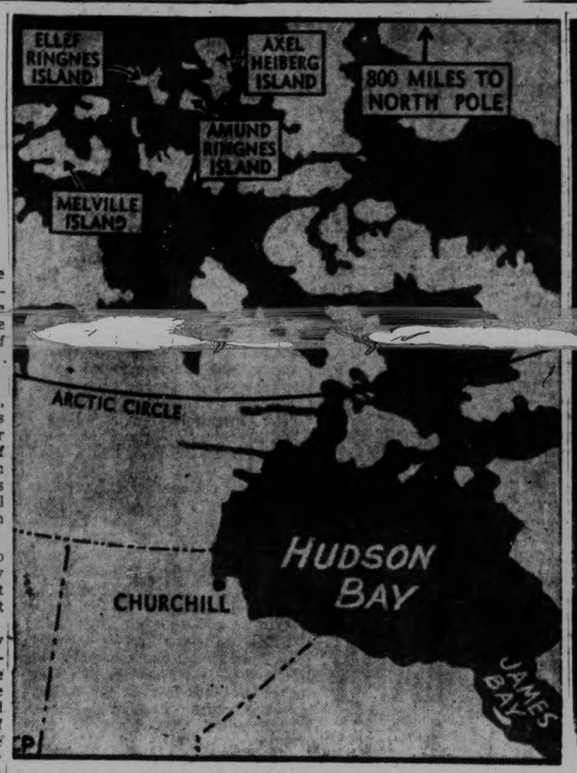
Heywood and Bolyard flew with the RCAF to Isachsen on the spring supply in April. They established provision caches before the ground thawed. They had to wait until the snow was gone before they could make geological observations.

Without the handicap of heavy loads on their backs, they reached the dome in three days, encountering musk oxen on the way, and spent 12 days there.

They found that rocks in the centre of the dome had pierced previously overlying rock layers, producing conditions favorable for the accumulation of petroleum.

This is not the first time evidence of oil has been found in the Arctic. Early in 1953, the mines department announced that geological conditions "highly favorable" for the accumulation of oil had been found on Cornwallis island, south of the site of the latest find. But no domes were found in Cornwallis.

Domes are mentioned in the journals of the arctic search party which tried to find some trace of Sir John Franklin in 1853. The searchers noted the peculiarities of the rock structure but it was not until 100 years later that the real meaning was discovered.



MAKE OIL DISCOVERY—Canadian government geologists have made a discovery only 800 miles from the North Pole which some day may outdo the oil wealth of Alberta. This map shows the group of islands in the Arctic archipelago where indications are oil may be found. The region takes in the northern part of Melville Island, Ellef Ringnes Island, Amund Ringnes Island and the west coast of Axel Heiberg Island.

OIL NEAR NORTH POLE—Under the treeless stretch of tundra in a group of Canadian islands only 800 miles from the North Pole may lie one of the biggest reservoirs of oil in the world. This is an aerial view of a "salt dome," which geological exploration has shown is good evidence of oil. It is on Ellef Ringnes Island in the Arctic archipelago.

MAKES FIND — D. W. Bolyard, 21, of Oklahoma City, Okla., was associated in the discovery of "salt domes," in the Canadian Arctic, similar to those which, in other countries, have indicated vast oil deposits. The discovery lies in a 40,000-square-mile area of the Arctic archipelago, 2,000 miles north of Winnipeg.

Province-Wide Hunt For Boy Cancelled

TORONTO (CP)—Police of suburban Etobicoke township called off a province-wide hunt for an eight-year-old boy today after learning he spent Wednesday night asleep under his back verandah.

Parents of Cecil Courtney reported him missing when he failed to come home from a scout meeting at a nearby church Wednesday night. Sixteen officers searched ravines near his home during the night and police of Ontario centres were asked to watch for him in the belief he might have boarded a train.

Police quoted him as saying he'd slept under the porch with a Christmas tree over him because he was afraid his parents would "beat him" for a misdemeanor if he went inside.

Bonus In Salaries

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario civil servants are to have $300 of their annual $420 cost-of-living bonus incorporated in their salaries, Premier Frost said today. The change will be made April 1.

Plan All-Night Phone Battle

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Officers of nine southwestern Ontario reserve army units will fight an all-night "telephone battle" this week-end.

Brigade and battalion headquarters will fight the battle by issuing commands by telephone and radio. They will receive situational reports from platoons and companies "in the field."

Busiest group will be some 20 officers from western Ontario headquarters who will be enemy, division headquarters and platoons in action. They will set up enemy attacks, issue orders to brigade and battalion chiefs from divisional headquarters and send in reports from the "fighting platoons."

Taking part will be officers from these units:

Elgin Regiment, St. Thomas; Essex Scottish, Windsor; Kent Regiment, Chatham; 31st Field Regiment, Sarnia; 21st Anti-tank Regiment, Wingham; 7th Medium Regiment, Canadian Fusiliers, London; and the Windsor Regiment.

Police are looking for a man who escaped in the darkness when three others were caught.

Your Children's Aid Society

A Weekly Column Written in the Interest of the Peterborough Children's Aid Society

Not all the visits and interviews conducted by the Children's Aid Society are as pleasant or successful as the Andersons and Douglas'. Not all parents are as interested in their homes and their children as those we have already discussed. Therefore it is the responsibility of some authorized organization to see that these children are protected from their parent's negligence.

The Children's Aid Society is such an organization and because of this aspect of their work they are not always a welcome sight to some families. These families feel that the Society is bargain in where they have no right to be. They feel that the Society asks too much of them and is never satisfied.

Mr. and Mrs. Cook felt this way and were often very upset and a little angry when the staff worker visited them. They would agree that two small rooms were inadequate for two adults and four children, but they reasoned that Mr. Cook's irregular employment prevented them from finding more suitable accommodation. They found it difficult, however, to excuse the complete lack of interest Mrs. Cook showed in the care of their home. The floor was always littered with discarded food and waste. Uncovered leftovers and dirty dishes attracted numerous flies and other insects. These conditions were unsatisfactory but were of less importance than the lack or care shown toward the children.

The neighbours considered the three boys and young girl as potential deinquents. They ran the streets at all hours of the day and night. They were rowdy and coarse in their language, and they settled every dispute with their fists. Nothing was proven but there was some question as to their honesty. Whenever costly misdeeds were discovered the Cook children were usually in the middle of them.

The school principal and teachers were almost frantic. No approach or type of discipline seemed to make any impression upon the children. Nor were the children popular with their classmates. Their fighting, aggressive manners gained them some respect and fear but no companionship. Their grades were poor, but they didn't care, nor did their parents.

Mrs. Cook complained to the worker that she couldn't keep track of her children because they wouldn't come home. Frankly, she didn't blame them too much because if she had any other place to go she wouldn't stay at home either. She claimed that she really did love her children but they got on her nerves. All their screaming and yelling would get anyone down. Why should she slave to keep their cramped quarters clean when in five minutes the children turned it into a shamble.

As time goes on, the Cook home is improving. The children are less destructive and the home is less of a refuse dump. The parents are a little less upset and angry when they see the Children's Aid worker and they are making a little bit more of an effort. They wonder if the day will ever come when things will be right and the Children's Aid Society won't have to visit anymore. They hope so, and so does the Children's Aid Society, but until that day arrives, the worker will continue to call on the Cooks.

BBC Sticks To Its Guns Will Televise Leeds Mass

LONDON (Reuters) — The BBC stuck to its guns and continued plans to televise a Roman Catholic mass despite Protestant protests that the mass was "abolished at the Reformation" and could not legally be shown.

Britain's first televised mass is scheduled for noon Sunday from Leeds cathedral, with Bishop John Heenan singing the high mass for the feast of the Holy Family.

The 50,000-strong national union of Protestants—lay and clerical organization which fights "Roman Catholic practices" in the Church of England—has been fighting the program since it was first announced two weeks ago.

SAID "OFFENSE"

Thursday it sent a telegram to the BBC, declaring the mass was "condemned by the law of the land" and "a grave offence to the conscience of Her Majesty's loyal Protestant subjects."

When the BBC rebuffed its charges, the Protestant Union sent strongly-worded protest letters to Prime Minister Churchill and Home Secretary Sir David Maxwell-Fyfe.

The BBC pointed out that the Church of England—with all other major religious denominations—is represented on the central religious advisory committee, which guides BBC religious broadcasting policy.

The committee recommnded several years ago that the mass be included in broadcast services, the BBC said.

Leaders of Britain's 3,900,000 Roman Catholics have refused to comment.

Roy Thomson Leaves For Britain By Plane

NEW YORK (CP) — Canadian publisher Roy H. Thomson left by plane for London late Thursday, en route to Edinburgh to take over his new duties as chairman of the board of The Scotsman, a daily newspaper which he purchased recently.

Thomson said he expects to spend most of his time in Scotland but will return to Canada in the spring to attend a meeting of The Canadian Press.

Norwood Loses And Draws In Juvenile Tilts

Norwood juveniles tied and lost in PMHA action last night at Civic Arena, drawing 4-4 with Oddfellows but losing 7-2 to the Aces. In midget play, Aces blanked Norwood 10-0 and then fell before Shamrocks 4-2. The only bantam game saw Aces win 5-3 over Optimists in a tilt that saw Optimists' goalie [illegible] receiving [illegible] in the first period. He didn't return to action.

In their 7-2 juvenile win, Aces had a 3-2 edge in the first as Floyd got two goals and Ferren one, Kane helping on a pair and Chambers on one. For Norwood, Chase and Mainland counted, with Rooney and Rusaw getting an assist each. Next period, McFadden, Chambers and Kane tallied for Aces, Ferren getting an assist. The latter also scored in the third.

The Norwood win had Millen scoring in the first from Chase, and the latter getting one in the second as Heron scored from Gray for IOOF. Smith got two for Norwood in the third, Patterson helping once. For Oddfellows, Renwick, Gray and Lang counted, with Hunt and Heron each having an assist. Both juve jousts were quite clean.

AN EASY ONE

Aces had no trouble with Norwood midgets. They got six in the first, Heffernan getting two and Garvey, Towns, Murphy and Naish one apiece, as McArthur, O'Connell and Murphy each earned an assist. Next heat, Heffernan and Ferguson scored, Brown aiding on one. In the third, Parnell and Kinlin lit the lamp, Ferguson and Garvey having one assist apiece.

Shamrocks led 1-0 in the first, Mahoney from Darling. They added three next time out, Baker getting a pair and Armstrong one, as Darling, Pace and Mahoney were chalked up with an assist each. Towns tallied from McArthur. In the third, Towns hit the hemp once more. Both midget melees were clean.

The bantam battle was rougher and quite close. Trude for Optimists and Finney of Aces were the scorers in the first. Finney and Allen put Aces up in the second, as Trude got one for the other side from Cain and Heffernan. Allen clinched it with two in the third as Finney helped on one. Ruttan notched one for Optomists. Drummond and Billingsley drew misconducts for fighting after the game ended, with the referee recommending punishment. Aces drew four of the six roughing penalties. Referees were W. Flint, J. Hawthorne, W. Post, L. Williams, B. Romhanyi and E. Woodcock.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT — Provincial policemen George Louth, Jack Gray and Bob Lamb were caught unawares by the Examiner camera this week as they prepare for a practice of the district headquarters hockey team. The district OPP and a few city police are entered in a challenge trophy league this season, playing Belleville, Whitby and Etobicoke in Eastern Ontario. The victors will play the Western Ontario champions. The Peterborough team will see action Saturday night in an exhibition game in Apsley.—(Examiner Staff Photo).

Sugar Ray Enjoys Night Club Job

By WALTER GRAY

TORONTO (CP) — Sugar Ray Robinson eats a pound of chocolates a day and is still in fighting trim. He's burning up his energy in a new medium—night club entertaining and "socializing."

"I don't have a chance to gain or lose any weight," he says. "I can eat a pound of chocolates and other candy each day and still weigh 157."

The colorful former middleweight boxing champion goes through a song-and-dance routine twice nightly and picks up a cheque varying from $5,000 to $15,000 a week.

THIS IS THE LIFE

In his dressing room between his two half-hour shows at a Toronto night club, 32-year-old Sugar Ray gave every appearance of just finishing another title fight. Slumped in front of his dressing table, perspiration dripping from his forehead, Robinson chuckled as his valet wrapped another towel around his shoulders and quipped: "we have to take good care of the goose that lays the golden egg."

"Man, this is the life," the slick Harlem Dandy sighed. "In show business you finish your work for the day and then have time to socialize a bit."

LIKES TRAVEL, MONEY

"Travelling, I like," he says. "There's no better way to get an education."

Robinson and his sidekick Joey Scott race through a half-hour of slapstick and music in the night club act. Robinson is the butt of Scott's jokes and Sugar Ray draws laughs with his theatrical grimaces and threatening fistic gestures.

Sugar Ray says he has no regrets over leaving the ring.

Skiing Reported Good At Seven Centres

TORONTO (CP)—Skiing was reported excellent today both on the tow hills and in the bush at seven Ontario centres — Bracebridge, Huntsville, Midland, North Bay, Owen Sound, Sinclair township (Muskoka) and Sundridge.

Good conditions are reported at eight points—Barrie (excellent in the bush), Collingwood, Flesherton-Markdale (excellent on the tow hill), Gravenhurst, Haileybury, Kirkland Lake (excellent on the tow hil), Orangeville and Sudbury-Levack (excellent on the tow hill).

Skiing was fair at Cedar Springs, Dagmar (good in the bush) and Larder Lake (good in the bush) and poor at Cobourg, Peterborough (fair in the bush) and Toronto Summit.

There was no skiing at all other points due to lack of snow.

Miller, Bertoia Sign 1954 Tiger Contracts

DETROIT (AP)—Detroit Tigers bonus rookies Bob Miller and Reno Bertoia signed 1954 contracts Thursday bringing the total to three players secured.

Miller, a left-handed pitcher from Chicago had a 1-2 record with Detroit last season. Bertoia, of Windsor, Ont., saw little service. Both were signed last season.

SPORTS SHOW WINDOW

By CEC. PERDUE, Sports Editor

There's been a bit of basketball off and on here for a month but the hoop season really swings into high gear in January. A raft of cage teams hit heavy action from here until well into the spring, tra la — still quite some distance away. YW lasses resume their schedule tonight with Black's playing Collis, as Nurses meet Lindsay, first fray at 7:30. Up at the Collegiate tonight, St. Peter's bantams, juniors and seniors go 'gainst three PCVS squads in exhibitions. Tomorrow eve at 8:30 in St. Peter's gym, the local Regents take on Toronto Central "Y" seniors in an exhibition. YM house loop goes again next Tuesday p.m. Yes, plenty of cage activity from now on.

Scribe Rodden writes: "With the collapse of the ill-fated Eastern Ontario hockey league junior "B" group series now conceded, Kingston's undefeated Vics will have to look elsewhere for competition before entering OHA playdowns. Pembroke failure to ice a team and the weak aggregations that represented Smiths Falls and Brockville brought chaos to this newly-formed organization. Vics won eight consecutive games, and Max Jackson now plans exhibitions against strong opponents. The breakup of last year's OHA group of Lindsay, Petes, Oshawa, Cobourg, Belleville and Kingston, left the Vics adrift." Not so, Mike, as Belleville was the only 'B" team to really pull out. Petes, Lindsay and Oshawa (in Port Perry) are back now, along with Collingwood and Midland. The Vics have come back, too.

Tackle Tough Truckers

Perturbed at their letdown in Orillia where their winning streak was snapped night before last, the TPT Petes promise to resume their winning ways against the leading Oshawa Truckers here tonight. They'll have to be in top form again to down the Truckers, but a local win would pull the Redmond men back into second place in the standing. They're just a point behind the Pontiacs now. Oshawa have a pretty fair lead now and appear to be the club to beat for group honors, unless they run into internal trouble. Of course, you can't write off any squad in this good group, not even the cellar-dwelling Belleville Memos. Each club in turn seems to have its hot streak.

* * * * * *

Petes' leading scorer, Chum Fryia, was one of the forwards who had an off-night in Orillia. He should snap back to form here this eve. Chum leads the league in goals scored by a goodly margin, with 30 markers, and his nine assists makes for a total of 39, putting him next to Erwin Duncan of Belleville, who leads the group in total points. Last game in Kingston, Fryia racked up a loop record with five goals. On two other occasions this semester he has pulled the hat trick of three tallies in a tilt. Five other times he scored two goals in a game. That's not counting assists. Other local forwards in the top 10 group scoring race are Gus Leonard and Toodie Greenlaw.

Provincial police puckists of this city and district—winners of the OPP title in Eastern Ontario last winter—are practising now for another campaign in their spare time. Coach Bob Lamb is lining up his 1954 squad and getting their ice legs in shape with the hope of having the eastern winners this year playoff comes spring against the western victors. Local squad opens its exhibition season Saturday night in Apsley against the EPHL entry of that northern village. Norm Nisbett is sponsoring the law-enforcement team and says they'll be strong again. Plenty of good athletes on the provincial force in these parts.

A well-deserved honor comes to Mrs. Pansy Forbes, who has been chosen citizen of the year 1953. The hard-working coach of the Peterborough Ornamental Swimming Club has been tutoring the lasses a long time with considerable success. The past year saw the girls bringing an international and a USA championship to this borough, and it was real good publicity. B'Nai B'rith will honor Mrs. Forbes at a dinner on Jan. 23 when Mel Allen will be the main speaker. The guy can talk, being an outstanding sportscaster in the States. Probably the top baseball commentator in that country and well-known in Canada to casual baseball listeners at World Series time.

Tennis Queen Chosen Athlete Of Year

NEW YORK (AP)—For the third straight year, Maureen Connolly, the world's tennis queen, was chosen U.S. female athlete of the year for 1953 in the 23rd annual Associated Press year-end poll.

Little Mo, who holds all the world's major tennis titles and [illegible] the U.S. [illegible] rankings for the third consecutive year in 1953, ran up a heavy margin in a poll of sports writers and sportscasters.

She beat out another famous San Diego athlete, channel swimmer Florence Chadwick, who had 21 first-place votes and 152 votes. Third, and the only other woman athlete in the first 10 to receive as many as 100 points, was Babe Didrikson Zaharias. The Babe got 13 firsts, and an even 100 points.

Little Mo began 1953 by winning the Australian championship at Melbourne last January. She was upset by Doris Hart in the Italian international tournament at Rome, but defeated Miss Hart in the French, Wimbledon and U.S. Nationals at Forest Hills.

CHANNEL SWIMMER

Miss Chadwick had four major channel conquests in five weeks last fall. She swam from England to France in 14 hours, 42 minutes, record time for the English channel crossing. Two weeks later she broke all records for swimming the straits of Gibraltar, Europe to Africa. She followed by swimming the tricky Bosporus, Europe to Asia, and back again.

Two days later she swam the Turkish Dardanelles both ways, Turkey to Greece.

Mrs. Zaharias, rated the world's greatest female athlete of the last half century, won two golf tournaments early in 1952, but in April underwent a major operation for cancer. Three months later she was back in tournament golf, but was out of the money in the Tam O'Shanter at Chicago.

The Babe has been voted female athlete of the year more than any other woman—five times.

KID LINE REUNITED—The fabled Kid Line of the Toronto Maple Leafs in the 1930s take a breather between periods of th Quebec-Ontario National Hockey League old-timers' game at Montreal in aid of charity. Charley Conacher (left), Joe Primeau (centre) and Harvey (Busher) Jackson played for Ontario in the exhibition game which Quebec won 11-9.

U.S. College Coaches Annoyed At Canadian Hockey Infiltration

BOSTON (AP)—Harvard hockey coach Ralph (Cooney) Weiland's charges that Colorado colleges have imported Canadian players just for playing hockey have been supported by John Kelley, Boston College hockey coach.

"The Colorado teams are making a farce of the college hockey tournament scheduled for Colorado Springs next March," Weiland—a former Canadian himself—said. "It no longer is an American college championship between the East and the West but simply Canadian teams against American teams for a U.S. title."

Weiland said that Denver has a group of 23-year-old Canadians who are attending college for the first time and are classified as sophomores.

Kelley called upon the National Collegiate Athletic Association to take immediate action.

NO TRANSFER STUDENTS

"The importation of Canadian boys just for hockey should be stopped and no punches pulled," Kelley said. "Let's make transfer students stay out of hockey for 12 months. We abide by the NCAA rules here and we shouldn't stand for 'tramp' hockey players in college competition."

Kelley said his remarks were not aimed at legitimate Canadian students enrolled in American colleges.

"I wouldn't bar the Canadian boys if they honestly want an education," Kelley explained. "For instance, Princeton has two Canadian players, Dick Court and Pete Gail. But they are legitimate students. Let's stop the importation of boys just for college hockey."

LOST WESTERN TOUR

Weiland, former National Hockey League all-star centre and Boston Bruins coach, saw his Harvard team lose all six games during its recent western tour. But he pointed out that Minnesota, which has no Canadian players, was the best team he played during its trip.

In Denver Thursday night, coach Neil Celley of Denver University called the eastern remarks "the same old criticism we hear every year."

"If they win it's fine," he said. "If they lose, then they always have something to say about our Canadian boys."

He said his Canadian players are all "bona fide students and have to meet scholastic requirements." His team has 11 Canadian players and four from the U.S.

Shamrocks Triumph

Shamrocks defeated Aces 7-5 in a bantam PMHA fixture at Civic Arena, a keen contest. McCormack scored from Meagher in the first for Shamrocks, but Aces got three, McIntosh clicking twice and Fitzgerald once, as Barber aided on one. Finney added one for Aces in the second but the other squad roared back for four, McCormack getting two and an assist, as McFadden and Doughty scored one each. In the third, Copping counted from Nichols, as McCormack got another for Shamrocks. Allen notched a marker for Aces in the third. Each side drew four penalties in a lively tilt refereed by Bill Flint and Bill Post.

Ontario Bonspiel Arrangements Made

TORONTO (CP)—Arrangements for the 27th annual bonspiel of the Ontario Curling Association were completed Thursday night. The week-long spiel starts Feb. 15.

Two changes have been made in the method of play. The grand aggregate has been enlarged to 32 rinks, those reaching the 16s in the Royal York and Birks Trophy events, and all rinks that enter are guaranteed at least six games.

Grey Cup Tickets Given Fairly Sports Writers Vote

By JACK SULLIVAN

TORONTO (CP) — Grey Cup tickets are being distributed fairly in the opinion of a majority of Canadian sports observers.

Sports editors and sportscasters gave the Canadian Rugby Union's present method of distribution a 33-16 vote of confidence in the annual Canadian Press year-end poll. Many said the CRU is doing its best with an impossible job others were too far removed from the scene to voice an opinion.

There was more unanimity among the voters on another CP poll question about the fastest-growing sport in Canada. Forty-three voted for football and the rest of the sports were nowhere.

Curling collected nine votes, golf got seven and bowling, baseball, hockey, skiing and stock-car racing two each. Wrestling, harness-racing, horse racing and little league baseball were also mentioned, possibly because of regional growth.

One voter plumped for "watching TV."

In the Grey Cup ticket poll, the sports authorities supported the CRU plan under which the various affiliated members of the union are apportioned tickets.

DISTRIBUTION DETAILS

Here's how the tickets are distributed: The Big Four, Western Conference and CRU each receive 30 per cent of the 27,500 tickets. The Ontario Rugby Football Union gets the other 10 per cent.

From the CRU allotment, Montreal, Ottawa and Hamilton receive an additional 1,000 each and Toronto, locale of the game, gets 2,000. The Western Interprovincial Football Union also receives an extra 1,000. "This situation would be reversed if the Grey Cup final were played in the West," said Harry McBrie, of Toronto, secretary-treasurer of the CRU.

The CRU also distributes tickets from its allotment to the Quebec Rugby Football Union, Senior Intercollegiate Union, the junior and intermediate sections of the CRU, press, radio, television, camera men, photographers and other agencies in connection with the Grey Cup parade and so on.

By JIM BASTABLE, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Maurice Richard, idolized and hated, is back in the headlines to [illegible] there as far as Montreal fans are concerned. Richard, who has showed color and destructive scoring power since he broke into professional hockey 11 years ago, scored three goals and two assists Thursday night to lead Montreal Canadiens to a 7-3 victory over the third-place Toronto Maple Leafs.

To the 14,452 fans in Montreal, Richard was back in shape and once more the scowling, chips-down rightwinger who rates high with such greats as Eddie Shore and King Clancy.

While the 32-year-old Richard was boosting his season's goal total to 25, the league-leading Detroit Red Wings broke out with two goals in the third period to beat the fourth-place Boston Bruins 3-1 in Detroit.

CANADIENS SECOND

The Montreal victory left Canadiens in second place with 49 points, one off the Detroit pace. The Leafs are five points behind Canadiens.

Richard, who took over second place in the individual scoring race with his 25 goals and 15 assists, started his scoring by putting Canadiens into a 1-0 lead at 2:26 of the first period.

Before he was finished he had beaten goalkeeper Harry Lumley, the best in the business so far this year, again in the second and third periods.

The second-period goal was a dandy. Richard poked the puck from Toronto defenceman Jim Thomson and was falling to the ice with a Leaf player on his back when he slashed it past Lumley.

Richard's point output left him behind Detroit's Gordie Howe in the scoring race. Howe has 16 goals and 28 assists.

SCORES TWO

Rightwinger Bernie Geoffrion tallied two goals and boosted his total this season to 20. The other Montreal goals were supplied by Eddie Mazur and Ken Mosdell.

Tod Sloan, Ron Stewart and Eric Nesterenko tallied for Leafs, who tied the score at 2-2 early in the second period but wilted under Montreal's late drive.

Richard's first goal snapped a long shutout streak by Lumley. It ended after 145 minutes and 35 seconds. Lumley was last scored on Dec. 30, when Canadiens played in Toronto. He held the Chicago Black Hawks and Detroit scoreless through two games after that.

Two fights brought four major penalties. Bob Bailey of Leafs and Bert Olmstead of Montreal slugged it out in the second period and Toronto's Rudy Migay and Paul Masnick of Canadiens threw punches in the third.

At Detroit, Marty Pavelich and Metro Prystai scored within two minutes in the third period to give the Red Wings victory.

TAKE LEAD

The Wings went ahead 1-0 in the first period on a lone rush by defenceman Marcel Pronovost. He beat goaltender Sugar Jim Henry at 18:16.

Boston came back at 4:48 of the second period when rookie winger Doug Mohns scored on a 20-foot screened shot. Midway in the third period, Pavelich scored his sixth goal of the season at 9:50. Prystai counted on a rebound at 11:35 to wind it up.

No games are scheduled tonight. In two games Saturday night the Canadiens play host to the Black Hawks and the Bruins travel to Toronto.

Kitchener Drops 6-4 Tilt To St. Catharines

KITCHENER (CP) — Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts missed a chance to climb into a virtual third-place tie with Toronto Marlboros in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A standings Thursday night when they dropped a 6-4 decision to St. Catharines TeePees before 1,041 fans.

The Shirts were gunning for their third straight victory and held the TeePees within a 3-2 edge until the third period when Graham Joyce rapped in two quick goals to give the home side a 4-3 edge.

The TeePees bounced right back with three straight goals as Barry Cullen checked Greig Hicks in front of the K-W net and fired home the tying marker.

Chester Worchol scored the winner on a three-way play with Hank Ciesla and Ian Cushenan at 14:07 and Brian Cullen sewed it up when he scored in an empty Kitchener net with six seconds remaining.

Goalies Marcel Pronovost of the Greenshirts and Bruce Edwards of the visitors both turned in outstanding performances.

Landy Switches To 2-Mile Race

MELBOURNE (AP)—Australia's John Landy, fastest miler in action today, will switch from the mile to two miles when the track season is resumed here Saturday after the Christmas break.

Landy has applied to the Victorian Amateur Athletic Association for a special two-mile event to be placed on the program.

Running in bare feet in a training run at central park Tuesday night, he was unofficially timed at eight minutes, 52.2 seconds, for the distance.

The world record for the distance is 8:40.4, held by Gaston Reiff of Belgium. The British Empire record, 8:48.4, is held by Gordon Pirie of England, and the Australian record is held by Landy himself—9:01.6.

"Don't bill me for a world record attempt on Saturday," Landy said. "However, I think I will do well and should get inside the Australian record easily, at least.

Pirie Intends To Compete At Vancouver

LONDON (CP) — Gordon Pirie, Britain's sensational young runner, said Thursday he'll "definitely" go to Vancouver for the British Empire Games this summer, [illegible] ship others.

Pirie, probably the main threat to Czechoslovakia's Emil Zatopek, said in an interview that he is counting on trying the mile distance at Vancouver. That would mean passing up the longer races in which the record-breaker built his reputation.

"Look at it this way," he said. "You've got to remember that these long distance things can't be crammed together. While England may want me to run more than one event at Vancouver I'd rather sharpen myself on the mile—and I think I might get down to 4.2 or lower—and be ready for the European games later in August."

STILL UNDECIDED

The lean-limbed ledger-keeper, chatting at his bank in suburban Croydon, said he still is undecided about possible American scholarships. When news of the offers broke last week there was something of an uproar. Britain doesn't want to lose her No. 1 athlete.

Whatever happens Pirie says it won't change his plans for the Empire Games and the European games at Bern, Switzerland. He expects to meet Zatopek in the three- and six-mile events at Bern.

Bishop Beverly Opens Parish Hall In Lakefield

LAKEFIELD (ENS) — "It is a great pleasure for me to share in the happiness that is yours in the completion of this building. I offer my sincere congratulations on the accomplishment", said the Rt. Rev. A. R. Beverly, Bishop of [illegible] dedication services which officially opened the new parish hall of St. John the Baptist Anglican Church Wednesday evening.

"This hall will add greatly to the facilities for the work of the church in this community. You have provided accommodations for your Sunday School and this is most important. It is a wonderful thing to have equipment for this work and here you have it in the latest fashion".

His Lordship spoke of the generosity of Col. A. T. Le Fevre whose gift of money, in memory of his late wife, Gwynneth Wallis Tudor LeFevre, made the building possible. He also spoke of the sacrifice he knew had been made by many in the parish in adding to the building fund. "However", said Bishop Beverly, "No one is the loser who gives to the work of the Lord".

Tracing the history of the church in its early years he noted that the first service was conducted in 1837 by the Rev. C. T. Wade and held in the home of the late Samuel Strickland. In 1841 an English clergyman by the name of Woolsey held services in his own home for several years.

Christ Church, which has been used recently as a parish hall, was opened in 1854, just one hundred years ago, by the first bishop of Toronto, the Rt. Rev. John Strachan. Twelve years later the present church was built, the congregation having quite outgrown the first one.

Bishop Beverly congratulated the parish on its progress during the last few years and paid a special tribute to the present rector, the Rev. L. J. Delaney for his leadership and his untiring efforts in the building of the hall. He noted too, with evident pleasure, that the missionary contributions had increased considerably and pronounced this a mark of progress in any church.

"At this time we think of our responsibility to fulfil His last command, 'Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel'. The only hope of world stability today is not to be found in United Nations or anywhere else, but in bringing into our lives and into the lives of others the love of the King of Kings and the Lord of Lords", concluded Bishop Beverly.

KEYS PRESENTED

The keys of the building were then presented by the architect, W. R. L. Blackwell to Bishop Beverly, who, in turn, presented them to church warden, Clair Sisson.

The members of the building committee were presented by Mr. Delaney and were Kenneth Slater, Harold Deeth, Ron Burgess, A. R. Gariepy, Earl Robinson, Clair Sisson, Fred Remnant, and Mrs. H. E. Gastle, who is in charge of furnishings.

Prior to the ceremony in the hall a service of worship was held in the church, conducted by the rector. The first lesson was read by Archdeacon W. P. Robertson of Peterborough, the second lesson by Canon Walter Giling of Peterborough and prayers by the Rev. J. L. Cranston of The Grove. Bishop Beverly closed the service with prayer.

Present also were Rev. F. Ongley of St. John's Church, Peterborough, the Rev. A. Smith of Christ Church, Omemee, the Rev. G. Boddy of Apsley, the Rev. H. Kaye of St. Andrew's Church, the Rev. H. C. Wolfraim of the United Church and the Rev. G. E. Downing of the Baptist Church, Lakefield.

A reception followed the services.

Woman Jailed Seven Days On Drunk Driving

TORONTO (CP)—Bertha Rickey, 39-year-old Toronto brunette, Thursday was sentenced to seven days in jail on a drunk driving charge.

Miss Rickey, who pleaded not guilty, also had her licence suspended for three months and her car impounded for the same period.

Police testified she volunteered for a "drunkometer" test which showed 1.75 parts to 1,000 of alcohol "which would be about 10 pints of beer."

NOT BINDING YET

Magistrate J. L. Prentice commented that the "balloon test is not binding yet."

Miss Rickey admitted having "a few drinks" before leaving an office party but denied volunteering for the "drunkometer" test which is not compulsory. It involves blowing into a balloon after which the air in the balloon is analyzed for alcoholic content.

Its acceptance as court evidence has not yet been established here.

Undue Pressure Used Labor Board Says

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario labor relations board said Thursday in announcing certification of United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) as bargaining agent for employees of Link Manufacturing Co., Ltd., Gananoque, that undue pressure was used in an effort to create opposition to a union.

The Board decided to ignore a petition circulated against the union.

It said employee Alex Irwin circulated the petition and that George Funnel, "who exercised a degree of authority which could and did reasonably induce employees to believe he possessed power to affect their employment," accompanied Irwin when he approached employees.

Family Left Homeless In Kent Twp. Fire

CHATHAM (CP)—Kent county's first major fire of the year left the Austin McEachran family of Harwich township homeless Wednesday night.

An oil-stove explosion caused the blaze which razed the farm house in less than an hour. Mr. McEachran and son Ralph fled uninjured. Mrs. McEachran, a second son and a small daughter were visiting in Chatham at the time.

Neighbors have begun collecting funds to assist the homeless family.

Border Traffic Up

OTTAWA (CP) — Traffic across the Canada-United States border continued to rise in November. The bureau of statistics reported there were 879,600 crossings, compared with 836,700 for November, 1952, bringing the 11-month total to 12,973,802, as against 11,864,990 for the corresponding period last year.

Thousands Wave To Queen On Royal Train

PALMERSTON NORTH, N. Z. (Reuters)—Queen Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh started out from here today on their second day's "whistle stop" rail tour of New Zealand's north island rural interior.

[illegible] strawberry-colored straw bonnet, the Queen waved to several thousand persons from the observation car as the gleaming red-and-white royal train pulled out.

Big crowds also had gathered earlier outside the Grand hotel, where the royal couple had stayed the night, to watch them drive to join the royal train.

Today's journey of 160 miles, following Thursday's 100-mile run from Hastings, is through pastoral and agricultural country to New Plymouth, coastal capital of Taranaki province, "the garden of New Zealand."

Saturday the royal couple fly to Wellington, the capital, for a week's stay before beginning their tour of the south island.

BREAK CORDON

When the train stopped at Stratford today, enthusiastic New Zealanders broke through a police cordon and pressed to within 10 feet of the Queen.

The Queen and the duke were returning to the train after receiving an informal welcome to the town, named after Stratford-on-Avon in England.

The whole town had turned out to greet them. They walked from the train to a dais in the main street 50 yards from the train.

A mass of people packed into stands on both sides of the street cheered the Queen, who stood on the dais acknowledging the welcome.

CALLS TO QUEEN

Then the Queen and the duke walked up the centre of the road. A Maiori youth called out: "Hullo, Queen."

Marching girls in scarlet uniforms and wearing medals attracted the duke's attention, and he stopped to talk to them.

The Queen and the duke lunched aboard the train as it travelled through bush-clad gorges and green farmland.

Still Trying To Rescue Russian Wife

TORONTO (CP)—Patrick Henderson said Thursday he still is trying to bring about a reunion with his Russian-born wife whom he last saw when he left Moscow in November, 1947.

Henderson [illegible] man in Moscow from 1945 to 1947, now is an inspector-stockkeeper for the Ontario hydro commission at Niagara Falls.

A recent report from Germany quoted a repatriated German war prisoner, Richard Zahn, as saying he saw a woman who claimed to be Rosa Henderson scrubbing a floor in a Siberian jail.

STILL TRYING

Henderson married Rosa Kugochova, then a 19-year-old secretary for a Moscow firm, in 1946. In 1947, he and several other Britons who had married Russians left Russia at the suggestion of British officials and after that he tried to arrange for his wife to join him.

He said she was reported to have been taken prisoner Jan. 27, 1951. He has continued to try to get her out of Russia.

"I'm still very hopeful, especially since the new regime has made things look a little better," he said in an interview.

Delay Starting Cheese Market Monopoly

TORONTO — A move which might have ended in the Ontario Cheese Producers Association having a monopoly on Ontario's cheese sales was delayed for another year Thursday.

The 21st annual convention of the association at the Royal York Hotel gave the hoist to a resolution to study the possibility of closing the cheese exchanges.

At present, Ontario cheese is wholesaled through six district exchanges. The resolution suggested:

"That the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board study very thoroughly the closing of cheese exchanges and having all Ontario cheese sold through the association's marketing office."

Liberal MPP for Stormont, one of the heavy cheese producing areas, Peter Manley, moved an amendment to have the study made, but to have the results reported back to next year's convention. The amendment passed.

Hastings county representative, E. K. Whiteman, suggested that the association's marketing office now had the responsibility for making such deals as the 10,000,000-pound British export last year. But the office does not have the full authority to go with the responsibility, he said. Mr. Whiteman said the time had come for a firm policy of full control of the product.

Strongly opposed was Walter McCrae of Stormont, who said the present system allowed for a selective market. Another delegate opposed closing the exchanges because he felt the trade buyers would be able to offer whatever they felt like, instead of facing the current competition.

Stanley Sanderson, a Grenville buyer, warned the meeting that if they passed the original resolution, they were making it a recommendation for action. The trade, he said, likes the local exchanges.

The central organization would remove the local contact, he said. Several producers agreed that they wanted to maintain the personal touch with their own cheese factory and their own district agency.

A study was approved of allotting voting power according to amount of cheese produced per county. This would give some counties which produce 6,000,000 pounds annually, as much as 10 times the voting strength of smaller producing counties.

THANKED FOR ASSISTANCE

Another resolution thanked Ontario for "its assistance and consideration." The government provided $293,000 to make up the deficit on the spring cheese export deal with Britain. The fall deal deficit was made up by increasing the association license fee from five cents per hundredweight, to two cents per pound. Last year, the association had 15,000,000 pounds of cheese in storage and a $4,000,000 bank debt. This year, the surplus has been eliminated and the bank debt greatly reduced. The convention, without discussion supported the two cent license fee.

A Buy British resolution passed unanimously, although one member questioned whether such items as British trucks would stand up to farm use. He asked that reports be made on the suitability for use on Ontario farms of certain types of British farm equipment.

ELECT OFFICERS

Ontario Cheese Producers Association wound up by re-electing W. O. Coon of Elgin president. Other officers are: Vice-president, H. C. Arnold of Campbellford; directors, R. J. Kelso of Spencerville; A. E. Hicks of Kinburn and Harry Hadcock of Salford.

NEW CHAIRMAN of the Board of Education for 1954 is Chares H. Huffman who is starting his second term on the board. Last year he was chairman of the property committee. His election took place Thursday night at the first meeting of the 1954 board. —(Examiner Staff Photo)

Charles Huffman Elected To Head Bd. Of Education

Charles H. Huffman, 45-year-old Peterborough building contractor, on Thursday night was elected chairman of the Peterborough Board of Education for 1954. He succeeds Stanley R. Adamson who resigned as trustee at the end of his 1953 term. Mrs. Anne Rowell, beginning her third consecutive two-year of office, was re-elected vice-chairman. Before the balloting began Mrs. Rowell said she would not be a candidate because in her four years as a trustee she had never held the chairmanship of a senior committee. This was inadequate experience for a chairman of the board, she said.

The election for chairman and choosing of committees took place at the first meeting of the 1954 board.

Here is the way the six candidates finished in the December elections, according to official city figures (only five were elected):

Mrs. Anne Rowell	7,735
Clarence Corbett	6,598
Charles H. Huffman	6,414
G. Wilson Craw	6,244
Ernest J. McWilliam	5,362
Arthur Pitchford	4,988

Mr. Pitchford, a trustee from 1945 to 1949 and again in 1952-53, was defeated. The two newcomers are Messrs. Corbett and McWilliam.

Mrs. Rowell's refusal to run for the chairmanship of the board paved the way for Mr. Huffman who is only beginning his second term of office this third year.

HEADED PROPERTY

In 1953 he was chairman of the property committee and helped to reduce the backlog of maintenance work that has built up, particularly during the war years. Under his urging the property committee are drawing up a systematic plan for maintenance work and renovations to the schools which will be carried out over a number of years.

Mr. Huffman was born in Peterborough and was educated in the city's public school system and at Peterborough Collegiate Institute. He attended Peterborough Business College and then joined his father and grandfather in the contracting firm, now known as Charles Huffman Ltd.

His professional experience was also of great assistance to his fellow trustees on the board's accommodation committee which looks after the choosing of school sites and construction of the school buildings.

"I'm sorry that Mrs. Rowell can't carry on this year," said Mr. Huffman after assuming the chair, "but I hope she can in the near future . . . It's a great honor to hold this office which has been held by a number of distinguished citizens."

The new chairman said that he will be relying on the other trustees for their assistance in getting the board's work done this year.

PREPARED STATEMENT

Mrs. Rowell, who is beginning her third term of office, read a prepared statement before a vote was taken on the board chairmanship. As the vice-chairman in 1953 she was in line for the higher office in 1954:

"It is with regret that I feel called upon to say that I have decided not to allow my name to stand for the chairmanship of the board.

"This decision was reached, not because of any desire to avoid either work or responsibility, both of which would be welcome, but because in my four years as a member of this board I have served as chairman of the supervision committee only, and never as chairman of any senior committee.

"This experience, in my opinion, is inadequate preparation for the position of chairman of the board of education.

"The office of vice-chairman which I held last year added nothing to my knowledge of board work. If, this year, I have the privilege of being elected chairman of a senior committee I shall be only too glad to accept the responsibilities of the chairmanship of the board next year, if the members so desire."

COMMITTEES

Following are the standing committees for 1954: Mr. Huffman is a member of all committees.

Health—Same as supervision.

The vocational committee will elect a chairman after their first meeting of the new year.

Car Robbed Of Clothes In Daylight

Theft Coincides With Incident

Montreal salesmen are beginning to wonder just what kind of bogey Peterborough holds for them and in particular, the month of January.

On January 22, 1953, a thief broke into a salesman's car and removed 33 articles of clothing valued at $600. Thursday, January 7, 1954, exactly the same misfortune befell another salesman.

But there are a few things about the two cases that don't just breath coincidence. (1) Both men are clothing salesmen. (2) Both come from Montreal. (3) The thefts occurred at approximately the same time of day, about the early afternoon. (4) On each occasion the cars were parked at the same meter, No. 99, one car length south of the east door of the Empress hotel. (5) No passers-by reported having seen anyone taking the goods.

AIR VENT BROKEN

The more recent victim is Morton Braunstein of 2085 Clark St., Montreal. He parked his car license number Quebec 149-144 at meter 99 at about 1:15 p.m. Thursday and went into the Empress coffee shop. Coming out at 2 p.m. he discovered the right air vent window had been smashed and the right front and rear doors open.

Missing from the back seat of the car were 45 ladies' and children's spring coats. The thief also took a fancy to Braunstein's navy blue overcoat and pin striped suit. There was a brown colored portable radio on the front seat, but evidently the light-fingered gent is too busy to listen to music.

Detective Doug Farthing, who is investigating, said this morning that the clothes were manufactured by the Montreal firm known as Belle Grace Inc.

Both he and inspector of detectives William Clarke consider that some of the many pedestrians who passed that way between 1 and 2 o'clock, must have seen somebody either transferring the clothing to another car, or carrying it away, a seemingly unsuspicious move in broad daylight. Police would appreciate any information in that respect. So far only one man has volunteered the information that he noticed the smashed air vent window.

The salesman has offered a reward of $25 to any person with information which will lead to the recovery of the clothes or to the arrest and conviction of the thief.

New Director Of Recreation For City Named

Kenneth Robinson, 42, presently of Toronto, has been chosen new recreation director for Peterborough. He will fill the post to be vacated by Alec Sinclair, who will leave for St. Catharines on January 15.

Mr. Robinson was selected by the commission from four applicants who appeared for personal interviews, Thursday night. His starting salary will be $4,000, an increase of $400 over previous salaries, but deemed necessary in view of the rising scale of payment in other similar cities.

His recreational experience includes the position of directorship at Barrie and Renfrew, Ont. During the war he was sports director at Camp Borden and commanding sports officer at Kingston. Previous to the war he spent six years in England in which part of the time was in giving boxing exhibitions both in the British Isles and on the Continent.

Worked In Lindsay Bank

FORT ERIE (CP)—Archibald Baird has retired after 43 years service with the Canadian Bank of Commerce and has been succeeded here by Lorne H. Eyres, manager at Cobalt for the past five years.

Addition To Grove School Estimated To Cost $85,000

Cost of the four-room addition to Grove school at Crawford's Grove has been tentatively estimated at $85,000. To keep city council abreast of developments, the board of education decided Thursday night at their inaugural meeting to inform council that they will probably need about $85,000 by midsummer. This is not a request for money: just a memo to council—who have to raise it through taxation—of what is expected.

The plans have been discussed with the architect and approved. And they have now been referred to the department of education for approval.

BREAKDOWN OF COSTS

Until tenders have been received the accommodation committee won't know the cost per square foot. The estimated area of the addition is 5,732 square feet. Assuming the cost is $12.50 a square foot, the cost will be:

Construction	$71,650
Architect's fees	4,299
Furniture	4,000
Lands and Improvements	5,000
Total	$84,949

City council were informed in October that the board were going ahead with plans for the school. Now they will be informed that the project will likely cost in the neighborhood of $85,000.

Building In Smith $365,000 For 1953

Estimated value of Smith township building permits last year was $365,600, Wm. Telford, building inspector, reported this week.

This new taxable property included 37 dwellings and 35 summer cottages. There were also one school, one service station and one store.

Most of the residential construction was between Peterborough and Lakefield and around Bridgenorth. Proximity of a school is an attraction determining the location of many of the dwellings. Three new houses were built on the middle line of the township in 1953.

Safety Patrols Stick To Frosty Posts Of Duty

It was cold this morning—four below zero—and many of us were very smart in getting into the security of warm offices. But cold or not, the school safety patrols were still on the job round about 9 a.m.

They shivered, they shook and their teeth did a tango, but they stuck at it and once again the city's 7,000 lower grade children had a safe walk to school. Altogether there were 128 patrol officers on duty.

John McPhee New President Trades Council

John McPhee, a member of Local 248, International Typographical Union (AFL-TLC), has been elected president of the Peterborough Trades and Labor Council (TLC) for 1954.

He succeeds a fellow union member, Glenn Price, who is leaving the city to take up another business offer. Mr. McPhee edged out Cam Wasson, of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (AFL-TLC) for the office.

Peter McCombe, of Local 248, ITU, replaces Mr. McPhee on the labor council's executive committee.

The new president finished his printing apprenticeship in Oshawa and moved to Peterborough five years ago. He has been on the executive committee of the labor council since it began. And he was chairman of the legislative committee. Interested in sports, he is secretary of the Men's City Softball League and on the executive of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association.

SHORT COURSE

Henry Nokes, secretary, reported on the Trades and Labor Congress' educational short course that will be held in Peterborough February 5 to 7. Some subjects that will be covered in the three-day school are explanations of the Compensation Act, Unemployment Insurance Act, Labor Relations Act; also discussion on subjects such as the shop steward, local union administration, preparation for collective bargaining, parliamentary procedure, and grievance procedure.

Among instructors will be officials from the unemployment insurance commission, the Ontario department of labor, workmen's compensation board, Max Swerdlow, director of education, and Arthur Heinrich, director of public relations and research, both of the TLC.

Klondike Gold Brown of Smith township and his three sons and two daughters are in an arbitration case with the city over the price the city is prepared to pay for 20.04 acres of land expropriated more than five [illegible] by the city so the [illegible] mission could expand their waterworks system to the west side of Highway 28 on the northern outskirts of Peterborough. The PUC haven't the power to expropriate land on their own; it must be done through the city.

How much the city have offered, and how much the Browns are prepared to settle for, have not been revealed. The arbitration case, now in the second day, before Judge John de N. Kennedy, has been brewing for more than five years.

COMPLICATED

The arbitration is complicated because the city claim annexation of 17.7 acres only; although they originally wanted the 20.04. However, the department of highways, wanting a strip of the land for a slight change in the highway route, expropriated 2.341 acres.

It is a matter of dispute between T. J. Carley, QC, representing Mr Brown, and Alex Elliott, QC, counsel for the city, whether the city took possession of it. Mr. Carley says the city did. Mr. Elliott says neither city officials nor PUC officials tampered with Mr. Brown's property before the department took over their 2.341 acres.

DELAYED ARBITRATION

On May 20, 1949, the late Judge Smoke ordered the city to pay $9,000 into court when arbitration proceedings began. The death of Judge Smoke and other difficulties have delayed the arbitration until now.

The land was originally part of 64 acres left by the estate of Elizabeth Brown, Klondike Brown's mother. She died in September, 1945, and in her will she left the land to Mr. Brown "and upon his death, equally to such of his children as survive him."

This provision in the will gives Mr. Brown, who is 56 years old, a life interest in the property, and his children a "remainder" interest.

Three sons and one daughter live in the Peterborough district: Reginald D. Brown, Norman A. Brown, Wilfred G. Brown and Mrs. Isabel Finnie; another daughter, Mrs. F. Elizabeth James, lives in Lindsay. Their counsel is W. B. Gordon.

Both the city and the Browns have collected a number of expert evaluators to bolster their cases.

Minor Damage Results From City Accidents

Two motor accidents were reported in the city Thursday. In each case fairly minor damage was reported.

Miss Eileen M. Morley, 521 Chamberlain Rd., and Mrs. Mildred McFadden, RRR 3, Peterborough, were driving cars which collided on Aylmer St. At Park and McKellar Sts., cars driven by Horace E. Naish, 638 Chester St., and Albert E. Pace, 653 Park St., collided.

Thursday morning a collision occurred between vehicles driven by Gordon J. Bigelow, 238 Burnham St., and Robert Outram, 728 Stewart St. This accident occurred at Brock and Sheridan Sts.

110 Fox Pelts Turned In For Bounties

There were 110 fox and two wolf pelts turned in on Thursday, bounty day, at the office of county clerk and treasurer Mrs. Jennie Spurway. Ted Watson, of Havelock, topped the list of fox hunters with 18 pelts, Dow Taylor of Curve Lake turned in 13 and Gordon and Harris Taylor, also of Curve Lake, had seven and six respectively.

John Jacobs, of the Reserve, trapped six in Ennismore township and four hunters totalled five pelts each. Three hunters brought in four each and there were several with three pelts.

Vincent Dunford, of R.R. 2, Lakefield, was the only wolf hunter. He shot two timber wolves, of good size and dark pelts, on lot 25, concession 1, Dummer township. His bounties, when skins have been examined by the department of lands and forests in Toronto, will net him a total of $70.

The pelts this year, for the first time, were presented in the garage back of the court house instead of the clerk's office. There they were counted and examined and fox hunters were given slips for presentation to Mrs. Spurway for payment.

The productivity of the various townships tells of the likeliest fox populations and are according to a breakdown of the total kill of 110 animals:

Harvey, 35; Belmont and Dummer, 18 each; Ennismore, 16; Otonabee, 13; Smith, 9; North Monaghan, 6; Asphodel, 5; and Douro 3 pelts.

The next fox and wolf bounty day will be on February 2.

Girl, Five, Has Wanderlust, Disappeared Downtown Two Days In a Row, Unconcerned

For better or worse, there is one little lady in the city who apparently has made a New Year's resolution to head for parts unknown.

Twice this week, five-year-old Joan Markwick, who lives with her parents at 343½ George St., has managed to lose herself. She was first reported missing at 9.30 a.m. Tuesday. After repeated broadcasts police eventually located her asleep and quite unconcerned in a drugstore at George and Simcoe Streets.

Thursday she failed to turn up when expected at 11.30 a.m. Once again search machinery was set in motion.

CHEX broadcast details of the missing girl and police were besieged with phone calls. Evidently Joan had been transformed into a will-o'-the-wisp, for dozens of people simultaneously claimed to have seen her in all east, west, north and south parts of the city.

But Joan had them all fooled—that is, all except Leo Gerard. He spotted her as soon as she entered his barber shop on Simcoe St. at 4.30. He gave her a candy and phoned the police. For the second time in as many days Joan was escorted home by Constable John Williams.

This year Joan is sticking to local territory, but next year it might be China. Who knows?

County Farm Notes

By HARRY THEOBALD

Lakefield 4-H Forestry Club Musters 96 Boys and Girls For 1954 Membership . . . R. H. (Dick) Graham Here Tuesday Afternoon for Brucellosis Meeting . . . Tom Dickinson Says Barns Are "Monstrosities."

The 4-H Club year started with a bang of enthusiasm and promise for Ken Best at Lakefield High School Wednesday afternoon.

Ninety-six boys and girls of the Lakefield 4-H Forestry Club. Many of them are from Smith township homes, others from Dummer, Harvey, Douro, Burleigh and even from the farther fringes of the county in Methuen, Chandos and Cavendish.

Mr. Best returned to the agricultural office late Wednesday with a sheaf of membership forms, all signed.

The Forestry Club at the High School got under way a year ago with 51 members, and their main work was the planting in the early spring of approximately 15,000 seedling pines on the CGE property at Nassau.

Mr. Best is assistant agricultural representative to whom F. C. Paterson deputes, among others, duties and chores, the promotive and co-operative effort with Junior Farmers and 4-H Club work. He had hardly recovered from the thrill of the re-organization meeting at Lakefield when he arrived back at the office with the forms and signatures testifying to the increased membership of the 4-H Forestry Club of nearly 100%. With him at the meeting was John Bell, Lakefield, district forester.

"If Bob McMorran (CGE) had only been with us to see what he helped to start a year ago," Mr. Best said.

There was a reference to the arrangements by which the CGE Co. went into partnership with the Department and Lakefield student 4-H Club for the reforestation project at Nassau — over the hill from No. 28 Highway and across the flat land to the river.

CLUB OFFICERS

The club elected the following officers for this year:

President, Arthur Hamilton of Dummer township, succeeding his brother Harry

Vice-president, John Guthrie of Rockcroft, Harvey township.

Secretary-treasurer: John Weiss, Harvey.

The forestry team of Best and Bell were not so effervescent on their way to Lakefield Wednesday as on their return. The 1953 experience had left a shadow of doubt for '54. Of the 51 original members, only 12 completed the project term.

After that lapse toward the end of the club year, but not discounting the industrious performance of the seeding job at Nassau, Bell and Best were almost amazed in walking into a meeting of 100 students, boys and girls 12 to 15 or 16 years.

PERSEVERANCE ESSENTIAL

When the business of the meeting was finished, the young prospective members were told, respectfully:

"If you are not genuinely interested in this 4-H Forestry Club please don't bother putting in a membership form."

The ideal of the project is to remain actively in it to the end of the club year.

None of the young people flunked at that mild challenge. Ninety-six forms were signed. They put their signatures to an undertaking in 4-H Club work that is not simply of Lakefield High School. They are again in the ranks of more than 60,000 young Canadians like themselves across the nation who pledge Head, Heart, Health and Hand to the objectives of the 4-H organization.

This club has the Principal of L.H.S., J. E. Stephens, and Gordon Hunt, a teacher of the staff, is the Club Leader.

CONFIDENCE RENEWED

"We are off to a grand start," Mr. Best said on his return to the office, "and I believe the spirit shown by the boys and girls will continue all year. We noticed that the percentage of girls in this club is higher than last year's group. The 1953 club left one fine record behind them, the first year's tree planting at Nassau. The total will be 150,000 trees spread over ten years.

This year we hope to set out 20,000, and we may have a tree planter, and give the young people a chance to operate it."

Collection of twigs is to be completed by March 1, and of leaves by June 1. There should be a bus or field trip for the club, possibly both. The top two in the year's project will be eligible for the 4-H Club competitions at O.A.C. They must be over 16 years of age.

The first result and promise is that Lakefield 4-H Forestry Club has set a new local club record.

13 In Grain Club

Norwood 4-H Grain Club is likely to adopt a spring grain for their 1954 project. It may be oats, Ken Best reports from Thursday afternoon's meeting.

The club has 13 members, two more than last year. Officers are: President, Mac Danford, Warsaw, R.R. 1; vice-president, Eddie Heffernan, Norwood, R.R 3; secretary, Shirley Whitney, Havelock, R.R. 4. The club leader is John Auckland, teacher of agriculture at Norwood High School.

Barns "Monstrosities"?

The farm barn is a "monstrosity" in the opinion of Tom Dickinson of Ottawa, expressed in a panel discussion at Kemptville Tuesday. He deplored the action of some farmers "in replacing their old monstrosities of barns with even greater monstrosities" which he would dismiss as monuments of a bygone day.

Mr. Dickinson, manager of Borden Dairy at City View, was one of the speakers at the Central Ontario Spring Show here last March. He is a convinced advocate of the modern loose housing arrangement and contends that every study points out the advisability of cutting expense to a minimum.

"And, there is no better way of doing this than by loose housing and self-feeding."

Dr. H. L. Patterson, head of the economics branch at OAC, Guelph, agreed with Mr. Dickinson that labor requirements in pen type barns was far lower than with the conventional stabling, and that, other factors being equal production was higher.

Essentials of effective farm management, Dr. Patterson said, were high production, efficient use of labor and machinery, proper use of capital, and integration of two or three separate enterprises.

The panel subjects were: "cleaner land for higher yields," and "what's new in varieties?"

More than 350 farmers attended the eastern Ontario crop and soils association annual meeting. Mr. Dickinson and Robert Sparrow of Kinburn declared that planning could be applied to farming with greater degree of success than to many other lines of endeavor.

Weed inspector in a district of 14 counties, J. W. McRae said that according to seed drill survey very little attention was being paid to the quality of seed planted by the average farmer.

Only 41 percent graded No. 1 of the 1,102 samples taken last year. Rejects were 37 per cent. The best of the counties, Prince Edward, sowed only 63 percent No. 1 seed.

Widely Separated Parents

Science has developed cattle breeding to the point where it is now practical for calves to be born from a mother living on one continent and a father on another. Illustrating this is the first shipment of frozen semen to leave North America for another continent. It was flown from the Ontario Veterinary College, Guelph, Ont., January 5, to the Milk Marketing Board, Thames Ditton, England. Within the day the package would be safely under refrigeration again at the Milk Marketing Board artificial breeding centre at Beccles, England, where it would provide 225 services for the herd of purebred Canadian Holsteins maintained by James Alston at nearby Norwich. This would take care of the requirements of the Alston head for a year.

Canadian Artificial breeding units supplied the two sires involved. One, Glenafton Milestone, is owned by the Waterloo Cattle Breeding Association, Waterloo, and the other, Pabst Roburke Lad, owned by the Oxford and District Cattle Breeding Association, Woodstock. The Ontario Veterinary College is the only place in Canada where the necessary refrigeration equipment is available to freeze and keep the semen at the very low temperature required, 135 degrees below zero fahrenheit. Similar equipment is available at Beccles. The chief problem involved was that of maintaining the extreme low temperature of the package during shipment. This was solved by packing the box with dry ice, which has a temperature of minus 135 degrees fahrenheit, and lining it with a special foam plastic that has a high insulating value.

Brucellosis Meeting

R. H. Graham of the livestock branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture is coming to Peterborough Tuesday, January 12 to talk about the Brucellosis legislation.

To the meeting at 2 p.m. in the office of the Department, municipal officers are being invited. They are the reeves, deputy reeves, councillors and township clerks of North Monaghan, Otonabee, Asphodel, Dummer, Douro, Smith and Ennismore. Any others will be welcomed if they are interested.

Adoption of the Brucellosis Act is optional with the municipalities. This meeting will discuss steps to be taken by the ratepayers and their councils in the preliminaries of having a vote taken on the question of making use of the legislation in the cause of health of animals.

"Dick" Graham is much like Vivian Milburn. When he gets back in the home county it is actually a case of revisiting friends and talking freely with them. The new Act is already in operation in quite a number of sections of Ontario.

REPORTS TOUR—W. A. Stewart, 39, Canadian Press bureau chief at Montreal, will travel with Prime Minister St. Laurent to report for Canadian newspapers the prime minister's journey to Asia in February and March. Stewart, bilingual native of Riviere du Loup and veteran for 20 years with CP, was Far East correspondent for the newsgathering co-operative 1945-47 after serving as war correspondent in Italy and Northwest Europe.

Globe Manager F. J. Wilson Dies In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Frederick James Wilson, 68, former Ontario newspaper man and Montreal advertising manager of the Toronto Globe and Mail, died here Thursday.

A native of Kingston, Mr. Wilson started his journalistic career with the Kingston Whig-Standard, later joining the staff of the old Toronto Globe. A year later he was transferred to Montreal as manager of the Globe's office here.

He was associated with the Globe, and its successor, the Globe and Mail, for 29 years.

Survivors include his widow, the former Edna May McWatters of Kingston; a son, Clifford, of Montreal; four daughters, Mrs. James Edwards, Kingston, Mrs. Harold Willis, Toronto, Mrs. Reginald Graham and Patricia Wilson, both of Montreal.

New Model Pastures, Too

Two blades of grass where one grew!!

Two, and even more, species or varieties—not single blades—where one used to grow! That is more like the fullness of modern forage practice.

The dairy cows in this photograph are grazing in plush pastorage as compared with the [illegible] of their ancestors [illegible]

Then, contentment had to come in ruminating a lean mixture of Canada blue grass, white Dutch and red clover, timothy, and not much else. Nature supplied it, and the barnyard furnished the fertilizer.

Instead of that dull dish, the dairy cow today lives in the luxury of appetizing fields of legumes and grasses. Farmers no longer think merely of timothy, but of its developed varieties—Medon or Climax. They have to do so, to keep up with what they know as improved pasture programs.

Elders recall the gradual acceptance of alfalfa. Today it is a common component of pasture mixtures. Alfalfa and brome grass, orchard grass and Ladino clover; reed canary grass for damp areas; meadow fescue and brome another palatable combination.

Those cows knee deep in pasture signify little to the passing consumer. Apparently the fields are unchanging, red clover and common grass, not so much of the heavy perfume of white Dutch clover. But progressive farmers of the Peterborough district have been keeping pace with this branch of crop im[illegible]

What is the purpose and end of all the experimenting work that has been done, and will continue to be done?

Just what the consumer is doing in his own work, increasing production to maintain income and keep down costs—more milk, more dairy products.

Everybody notices new models of cars, TV sets, refrigerators. But how many even see the new model pastures, an accomplishment in agriculture few people recognize?

If the consumer understood the extent and effect of it, the farmer says, he'd have more appreciation of the food job that has been done for him.

Westwood Forum Dubious Of Automatic Membership

Discussing the "ideal farm organization" Monday night, Westwood Forum, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. Graham, drafted this report of opinion:

"It should be financed at the individual member level, so that membership is a realized and a real fact. Indirect or automatic membership, such as we have now, is not conducive to great activity or pride on the part of members. Perhaps some inducement could be offered such as a subscription to an all-round good farm magazine. We suggest that the Rural Co-operator could be used to better advantage if set up in the form of the attractive commercial magazine—such as Farmer's.

"We think a more unified position could be realized if commodity groups were organized as committees of the Federation of Agriculture. And, we particularly recommend that the words Federation of Agriculture should appear on all publications of such groups. For example: Ontario Milk Producer, produced jointly by the Ontario Whole Milk Producers' League, the Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers' Association, etc. . . . Committees of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture . . ." William Mood was discussion leader.

Twenty-two members were present at Stewart Hall Forum, meeting at the home of W. W. Dawson and Son. Discussion leader was William Chambers.

PREFERS FEE PLAN

They proposed that the Federation should be financed by farmers paying a compulsory membership fee, instead of a levy being placed on assessment by county or township. By this method urban members would not be required to contribute to farm organizations. Local commodity groups should be financed by a levy deducted from sale of products.

Contributions should proceed from the local to the provincial group and thence to the national.

"We believe the system used by our federation is superior to the English and U.S. Farm Bureau systems because commodity groups affiliated with a parent organization make a strong organization, and is better than several smaller ones."

Stewart Hall and Westwood are not in agreement about the value of commodity group membership. Westwood termed it "automatic membership."

Coldsprings Forum met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Carter, with 14 present. They favored continuance of the tax levy in the local unit. "It could be increased slightly when necessary." Producer groups should be "part of the federation . . . the small local unit can take ideas or grievances to the larger organization, which in turn can present them to government, and with accummulating support."

APPROVES TAX

Eddie Bulmer was leader at the Central Smith Forum meeting (15) at his home. "We think that farm organization should be financed by a tax levy on each farm, this to go to our local organization, which in turn can contribute to the provincial and national organizations . . . Producer organizations should be part of or belong to the Federation of Agriculture. As far as finances go, we think the substantial sums of money already held by different groups should be put to work."

Tax levy was the financing method favored by Lily Lake Forum at the school house. Nine were present. Archie Ackison was leader.

Maple Row Forum met at the residence of Gordon Robinson. They approved the tax levy "as Federation is financed in Peterborough county . . . Producer associations should be part of the farm organization as they are in the CFA."

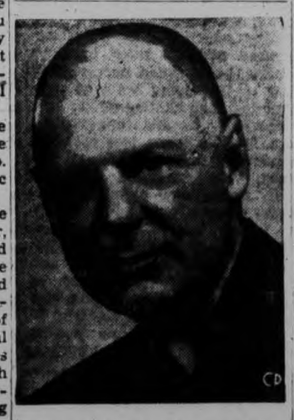
DRAMA EXPERT — Graham Suter, 34-year-old drama expert, who will adjudicate regional competitions of the Dominion Drama Festival, has arrived at Ottawa. He is an experienced actor, director and lecturer and a member of the British Guild of Drama Adjudicators.



ON FARM BOARD—Frank L. Chester, 52, of Winnipeg has been appointed chairman of the Canadian Farm Loan Board to succeed J. C. Murray who is retiring. Mr. Chester is a former member of the Winnipeg city council and was a Liberal-Progressive member of the Manitoba legislature from 1949 to 1953.

CHARGED WITH MURDER—Pte. George Mitchell of Winnipeg has been charged with murder of a 56-year-old German woman at Iserlohn, Germany. Mitchell, a member of the 2nd Battalion of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry with the 27th Brigade in Germany, will face a general court martial for the murder of Frau Elizabeth. Details of the slaying were not announced.

Modern Dairy Cow Noses In Richer Pastures More Variety Of Plants

Probably Frank Paterson didn't say: "The dairy cow never had it so good," but that is what he meant.

The agricultural representative was looking at a photograph of Holsteins knee-deep in flowering forage of summer, an illustration [illegible] Ontario Department [illegible] culture bulletin entitled "Conservation Services."

That page recounted briefly the improved pasture programs of the last ten years or more, particularly in the broad introduction of forage plants, that have greatly altered the dairy cow's grazing fare.

One of the results of a thousand or more demonstration fields, established by the Department in co-operation with Soil and Crop Improvement Associations, has been the extension of pasture period from 121 to 179 days.

Progressive farmers know the story of good pasture management but it is a subject Mr. Paterson is always ready to discuss, especially linked with care of the soil, seeding mixtures, fertility, and the rest of the program.

RECALLS T. T. MILBURN

"I'll always remember the experiment that the late T. T. Milburn of Smith carried out. Even in his later years he was keenly interested in farm affairs and new ideas.

I think it was in 1940 that Mr. Milburn decided to break up an old field that hadn't been plowed in many years. It was rather low in places, unsuitable for regular rotation planning. He rooted out some of the willows, removed stones here and there, and did a fine job of putting the field in shape for seeding. He even found a wet spot, developed it into a well, and I understand it hasn't gone dry since then.

Mr. Milburn had thorough preparation done, even to testing the soil, and selecting forage plants seed that should be best adapted to the conditions as they existed.

He applied fertilizer equivalent to 4-12-10, around 400 pounds to the acre. That was two or three times as much as most people were using in their pasture work.

My recollection is that the field produced when it was established nine or ten times more forage than in any previous year.

RESEEDING PLANNED

That pasture field has now run [illegible] no such thing. [illegible] pasture. We should stick to the descriptive phrase, long-term pasture. Until about two years ago it continued to be fairly productive, although it was top-dressed from time to time. But, the odd buttercup and daisy were coming back again in the field.

Well, Tom Milburn is gone, and he lived to a grand old age. His son Elmer and grandson Don have laid out a new seeding program, again including soil tests.

That brings us back to the steady development in pasture practice. I think I have a record of T. T. Milburn's seed mixture, but it did not include some of the plants which will be in the new seeding.

Mr. Paterson recalled the new prescription from memory: Ladino clover 1½ pounds, white Dutch 1½ pounds, alsike 3 pounds, timothy 5 pounds, brome grass 6 pounds, meadow fescue 4 pounds, reed canary grass 4 pounds, a total of 25 pounds of seed to the acre.

"Application of fertilizer will be adequate to supply those plants for good rank growth. The amount may be up to 600 pounds or more to the acre. This is the kind of memory I like to think of in one family's forage planning."

PROVIDES NUTRIENTS

The advantages of this soil management: Utilizing of land that is not best adapted for crop rotation; it builds up fertility to grow nutritious pasture; it provides a great improvement and and increase in economical grazing; it calls for a selection of suitable plants for the environment, in this case moderately low land.

And so, the fact stands out—the dairy cow never had it so good. Pastures are richer in nutrients, the land is fortified against the usual midsummer dry spell, forage plants are included in mixtures for their ability to thrive when moisture runs short, as in some seasons.

One of the rewards Mr. Paterson mentions now and then is the number of Peterborough farmers who have put into practice these improved pasture programs, and have demonstrated their value in their own experience both with dairy and beef cattle, and other stock.

Week After Losing Both Legs Editor Plans To Resume Career

LOCK HAVEN, Pa. (AP)—One week after the accident in which she lost both legs, Rebecca Gross is planning to resume her active newspaper career.

The 48-year-old editor of the Lock Haven Express is looking forward to learning to walk with the aid of artificial limbs as the first step in h[illegible]rn.

What will she write about? The smiling, brunette woman known to editors across the United States as "Becky" [illegible]

"I'm going [illegible] highway safety.

The grim statistics of highway safety will not be a new topic for Becky. The Express of last Thursday published her lead editorial: "How not to start a new year."

"No one needs to be one of those New Year accident victims," she wrote. "Who wants to start the New Year in a hospital or a morgue?"

At 5:15 p.m. while the newspaper was being delivered, Miss Gross was driving through an intersection. Her car and another collided. She was thrown to the street and pinned against a pole.

At the hospital, doctors decided that amputation of the right leg below the knee and the left above the knee was unavoidable.

Becky was told of the operation next day. Her publisher, Frank D. O'Reilly, said later the surgeon told him Becky "winced but immediately asked that a radio, typewriter and founta[illegible] be sent to her room."

With them she began the rehabilitation that is her unwavering aim today.

"A little later I expect to write again for the paper, perhaps on an irregular schedule at first. When I have learned to walk again I expect to go back to The Express on a full-time permanent basis."

Miss Gross joined The Express staff as a reporter in 1925, was made managing editor in 193[illegible] and editor a few years later. She was one of the first two U.S. newspaper women selected for a Nieman Fellowship at Harvard. Last year she was one of seven U.S. editors who made an unprecedented trip to Russia, and later reported extensively on the trip for The Associated Press.

He is a member of the bureau management and advertising policy committees of the Canadian Daily Newspapers Association.

Good Theatre Not Plays Interests Suter

OTTAWA (CP) — The English actor and director who will adjudicate 13 regional drama festivals across Canada within the next three [illegible]onths is looking forward to the job.

"In the sphere of adjudication it's regarded as the best job going," [illegible] Suter, who

Mr. Suter told the press Thursday, he isn't here "to award prizes or give arbitrary remarks."

ACTING COMES FIRST

However, in selecting winning regional plays, and those which will compete in the Dominion Drama Festival in Hamilton May 10-15, he said he'll be looking for "good theatre" instead of well-written plays.

Mr. Suter, who has adjudicated British drama festivals for five years, said he has awarded prizes to plays, although he disliked the scripts, "on the grounds that what the actors did with the material was remarkable."

"I'm not bothered with the scripts. It's the producer and the actors coping with their jobs—that's what I'm concerned with."

He will see 55 three-act plays and about a dozen one-act productions in his travels across Canada.

MEET THE GOVERNOR—Victoria junkman Harry Haigh is all dressed up as he prepared to attend the New Year's reception of his neighbor, Lieutenant-Governor Clarence Wallace. Then he announced he was giving his neighbors a present, he was moving from his present house to the "other side of the tracks."

Merchants Oppose Federal Loans To Assist Small Retailers

VANCOUVER (CP)—A proposal by a retail merchants association for a federal government loan fund for independent merchants got a cool reception in British Columbia.

It is claimed that such a fund would place the smaller merchant in a better position to compete against large department and chain stores.

"The smaller merchan[illegible] greater problems to [illegible] getting money to compete against the larger firms," said Grant Deachman, secretary, B.C. division, retail merchants' Association of Canada. "B.C. geography and distances, excise taxes, and tariff are more pressing at the moment."

Retailers here agreed the loan fund may be necessary in Ontario and Quebec, but not in B.C.

The RMA put the proposal before Prime Minister St. Laurent in Ottawa earlier this week. The government was asked to establish a revolving fund similar to those set up by the Industrial Bank Act, the Farm Improvement Act and the National Housing Act.

DEPARTMENT URGED

The RMA has also proposed that the government establish a separ[illegible] of retailing under [illegible] of trade and commerce at Ottawa.

"Merchants here would not only like to see a department of retailing," said Mr. Deachman, "but one under the department of trade and industry at Victoria, too."

Some merchants thought a federal loan plan would be useful in developing new commercial areas and smart shopping centres. But others felt government subsidization would be bad for business.

Ontario, Quebec Residents More Talkative Have Record Increase Of 150,000 Phones

MONTREAL (CP) — The Bell Telephone Company today announced a record increase of 150,000 telephones in Quebec and Ontario in 1953, bringing the number of telephones in service to more than 2,120,000.

Thomas W. Eadie, Bell president, said in a review of the year that long-distance calls continued to increase steadily. An average of 250,000 long-distance calls were placed daily, nearly double the figure eight years ago.

The company sent a record total of $86,000,000 on new construction and planned an expenditure of more than $100,000,000 to expand and improve facilities this year.

The opening of a microwave radio relay chain which carries television programs between Toronto, Ottawa and Montreal was one of the highlights of the year, Mr. Eadie said.

A further link between Montreal and Quebec was being built and a plan to join Toronto with Winnipeg via North Bay, Ont., was under active study.

Charge Flier Drinking

BOSTON (AP)—A man identified by police as Howard W. Thornley, 53, of Barrington, R.I., was arrested Thursday on a charge of operating an airplane while under the influence of liquor. Veteran officers could not recall another case in which a pilot was arrested on this charge. The man was arrested after his two-seater airplane nose-dived while taxiing preparatory to taking off.

Windsor Dairy Goes On Strike

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Purity Dairies Limited workers, members of Local 440, Retail, Wholesale Dairy Workers Union, (CIO-CCL) went on strike this morning for higher wages.

Picketing of the plant started promptly.

The union contends the company has reneged on a verbal agreement in late December under under which operations would continue and an interim 2½ cents an hour wage boost would be given along with other concessions agreed to by the company and granted in a conciliation board report.

The company insists that an agreement be signed on this basis but the union has refused to sign, insisting that previously the company agreed to carry on with a verbal agreement until wages were renegotiated on Feb. 1.

300 In U.K. Join Canadian Army

An official spokesman said Thursday this number included 212 technicians, 50 bandsmen, and 26 former members of British civil or military police forces. The latter were enrolled in the Canadian Army Provost Corps.

"We are interested mainly in technicians, and musicians," the spokesman said, "but we are not running any recruiting campaign over there."

He said the Canadian Army is looking for men who have completed their tours of military duty with British forces and who want to come to Canada. He emphasized that only Britons without any military obligation in the United Kingdom are considered.

State police said main routes in the mountains are drifted but open.

Penology Problems Belong To Individuals Too—Foote

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Reforms Minister Foote of Ontario told the Ontario Chamber of Commerce Thursday night the problems of penology belong to individuals as much as to government.

"They are not problems that can be pushed on to anyone, they belong to all of us," said Major Foote at the organization's annual dinner.

He said the greatest reform work can be done by churches, schools and social workers.

A greatly improved pro[illegible]am of training and rehabilitation is under way in Ontario, the minister said. It includes treatment for alcoholics and training for young men in the best workshop schools in the country.

RECOGNIZE STRIKE RIGHT

A statement of policy on labor relations was adopted by the general meeting of the Chamber earlier in the day. It recognized the right of labor to strike but sugested a government-supervised strike vote should be taken after a suitable cooling-off period before a strike would be legal.

The chamber recognized the right of a worker to pursue the vocation of his choice regardless of union membership "except insofar as this right is abridged by a free collective bargaining."

The Guelph delegation tried to have the quoted phrase removed on the grounds that it limited the worker's freedom. E. L. A. Whitaker, secretary of the Guelph chamber, said if a man has the right to work without paying blackmail or submitting to coercion, the chamber should say so. The phrase was left in.

The statement supported collective bargaining but said both parties should have equal responsibility. It deplored the framing of labor demands in other countries, such as the United States, as an infringement of Canadian sovereignty.

The chamber plans next year to recommend to the provincial government that the municipal act be revised to allow the council-manager form of municipal government.

The meeting heard a report from a committee formed last year to study the method and provide information to chambers and boards of trade throughout the province. It was decided the committee should continue its work with a view to asking the government next year to alter the act.

The Sarnia chamber had presented a resolution suggesting the government pass the enabling legislation this year but it was superseded.

The 150 delegates reversed a decision by their policy committee and supported a resolution by the Ottawa Board of Trade recommending a change in Remembrance Day ritual. The board felt the day had degenerated to a mere school holiday.

SUGGEST NO HOLIDAY

The resolution urged the Ontario department of education suggest certain forms of service to be observed in the schools on that day and that it not be made a holiday for school children.

The policy committee had ruled that the resolution did not properly come under the jurisdiction of the provincial chamber. The meeting felt the proper approach to the problem was through suggestions to the provincial department of education.

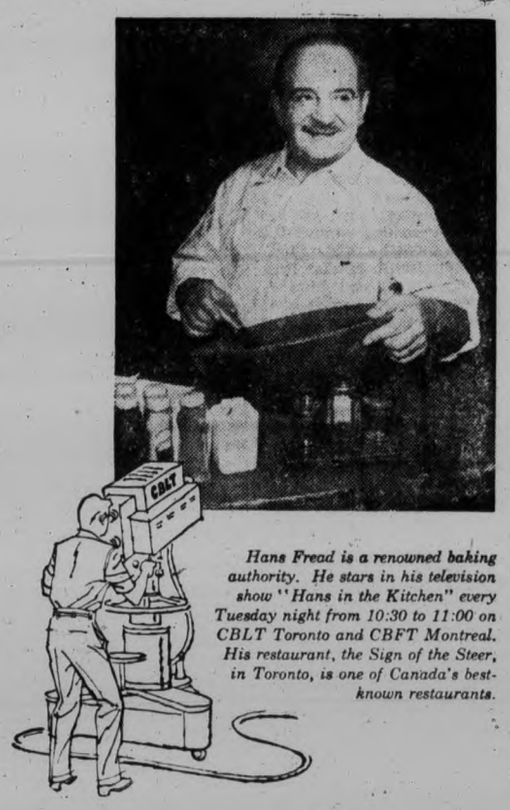
Other officers: Second vice-president, George F. Clark, Hamilton; third vice-president, Joseph Jeffery, London; honorary treasurer, Lieutenant-Colonel R. A. Harris, Windsor (also director-at-large).



Hans Fread is a renowned baking authority. He stars in his television show "Hans in the Kitchen" every Tuesday night from 10:30 to 11:00 on CBLT Toronto and CBFT Montreal. His restaurant, the Sign of the Steer, in Toronto, is one of Canada's best-known restaurants.

Hans Fread says-

"At the Sign of the Steer we always bake with MONARCH FLOUR"

"People keep coming back for our Pastries and Cakes Because Monarch Flour Makes Them Deliciously Light and Tender.

"We meet all kinds of people at the Sign of the Steer. It's our job to keep them all well-fed and happy. Often it's a rewarding job. For instance:

'Your order, sir?' asked one of our waitresses.
'Just sirloin steak and plenty of it,' came the gruff reply.
'Any dessert, sir?'
'No.'

"But when he had finished his sirloin steak he called the waitress and ordered Viennese pastry.

"He liked it. In fact, he ordered more! Later, he explained his abrupt behaviour. He was a travelling salesman who had developed an intense dislike toward the flat taste and soggy texture of what he called 'Restaurant Baking'. He knew we were famous for beef—but he didn't know we baked pastries and cakes that 'taste as though they came from home.'

"We've received many favourable comments on our baking. And we feel much of the credit is due to Monarch Cake and Pastry Flour. We've found that Monarch is a consistently fine flour—specially milled from soft Ontario Wheat. This makes it perfectly suited to get the best out of all non-yeast recipes. People enjoy light, tender cakes, and smooth, flaky pastries at the Sign of the Steer—because we always bake with Monarch Flour!"

You too will find in your kitchen Monarch Cake and Pastry Flour is perfect for all non-yeast baking. Buy a bag next time you're shopping.

Tells Of Life In China

"No matter what Communism does to China, the Christians in that land are true to Christ, and Christianity has not failed," said Miss Greta Clark, speaking to the Mary Nicholls Missian Circle on Tuesday evening. Having spent 34 years in China under the Anglican Mission Board, Miss Clark gave a most inspiring address for the first meeting of the New Year. She lived there during so many of China's changing periods, and told of some terrifying experiences during the Japanese war and later when the Communists arrived, taking over all the schools, hospitals and public buildings. "So many of the Chinese people were to confess various sins of their past, only to be tried later and executed." Miss Clark said Communist propaganda begins in pre-nursery school and continues through to university. The speaker asked for prayers for the people of China who are remaining faithful and true to Christ. Miss Clark was introduced by Mrs. Horace Wells and thanked by Miss Isabel Scott.

Mrs. S Malsch presided for the meeting with the devotional being taken by Mrs. A. Haddow and prayer offered by Mrs. Howard Frise. Mrs. H. H. Graham gave highlights of the board meeting recently held in Toronto.

Fashion Flashes

Fitted but unmarked is the word on the waistline for many new pre-spring fashions. A blurry print in blue and violet silk, with the blue tones dominating, makes up into a pretty resort dress: A band of solid blue silk curves directly under the bust and then makes a narrow panel at each side. Natural waistline is fitted, but beltless, and the skirt is full in back and narrow in front, making an interesting line.

✧ ✧ ✧

Getting together to create a handsome theatre outfit is a full-length coat, a skirt and a blouse. Skirt and coat are of woolen in a black and pink lined in pink taffeta. The pink jersey top has a deep, curved V neckline, cuffed and rhinestone-trimmed.

1954 Home Sewers Almanac

Plan your home sewing, now, for the whole of 1954, if you really want to save. Here are some of the essentials sewing centers suggest you include:

January:— Make an inventory of your own and the family's clothe's and home furnishings. Shop early sales for remnants for repairs, get bargain fabric length for new items. You will discard less, if you mend wtih your sewing-machine.

February — Watch fashion changes for spring. Plan and begin Easter wardrobes. About the new princess line, sewing centres say it is easier to sew, trickier to fit; they suggest using a dress form for fitting.

March:— Cast an eye on bedspreads, drapes and slipcovers. Did you know that a slipcover is considered by many beginners in home decoraiton courses to be easier to sew than a dress? You save a surprising amount by sewing your own, too.

April:— Join the Easter parade in your beautifuly made new outfit. Begin planning another summer's clothes. Stitching the new synthetic easy wash, no iron materials is easier on the new sewing-machines particularly a slant-needle model that lets you see more as you work.

May:— Most of us have a bride, baby or girl graduate to sew for this month. Ever try sewing machine embroidery? Fashion stitches are a technique that add a dainty beauty to bridal things. Bathing-suits are easy to sew, too.

June:— Here's where father comes in for a sports shirt or beach coat. Make crisp sheer for daughter to wear to summer resort dances. Better still, give her a sewing book, and let her make her own, when school is over.

July:— Take your portable machine to the cottage. Handy for mending junior's jeans, stitching up jiffy cottons for yourself and baby. Summer is a good time to sew fall favors for bazaar, church, bridge prizes and birthdays.

August:— New school clothes. New street dress or dinner frock for yourself.

October:— Drapes and slipcovers again. Winter weight this time. 'Ever try a slipcover for Dad's car? Mend frayed blanket edges with sateen. Time you had a new evening dress.

November: — Plan and begin sewing Xmas gifts. Check your sewing equipment. Dad may like the idea of a new sewing-machine for you, perhaps a sewing cabinet or basket. Maybe a steam-iron for pressing.

December: — Help daughter with Christmas gift sewing. Sew felt and glitter tree decorations. Tote up your year's budget and count the pennies you have saved.

DOROTHY DIX

Complains Of Neighbors Foisting Children On Her

DEAR MISS DIX: I am always amazed—as I guess most of your readers are — by the occasional letters from super-efficient housewives who can manage a big house and a good-sized family, yet have time left for outside activities.

I wonder if they are all like a few in our neighborhood who keep their homes immaculate by the simple process of having their children stay outside their house all day. The youngsters play in other children's homes, but no one is ever allowed in [illegible] if you can keep [illegible] long enough to set a wedding date.

tertain and frequently feed the offspring of those excellent managers. I'm the mother of three boys. We have a six-room house, which I keep in reasonable order, but if my children want attention, or if they're not up to par and need some extra affection, they get it, regardless of neglecting housework.

Then, of course, I have all the little playmates whose mothers are supposed to be working so hard—but probably are taking naps. Don't misunderstand me! I love all children and like having them with us, but sometimes I think we forbearing mothers are put to disadvantage by the self-praise of pseudo efficiency experts. I hope you don't mind my sounding off, but I think it has relieved me. Thank you.

Mrs. W.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You letter was so interesting that I wish I could have printed it in full. Your neighborhood seems to have about the same proportion of efficiency experts and true homemakers as any other. It cannot be denied that there are some women, but not many, who are able to manage every facet of homemaking with patience and skill. They seem to be able to run up a pair of draperies with one hand while putting a batch of pies into the oven with the other. Their children are always nicely dressed and well-behaved. These women would inspire envy in anyone. They happen to be born with a talent for homemaking just as some people are born opera singers. It's a gift, and those who possess it don't gloat over their accomplishments. Self-praise, apparently, is the trade-mark of those particular women who irk you—and me. They tell us constantly what wonderful housekeepers they are—and bar their door to all children, including their own, most of the day. They are devoting time to polishing and scrubbing that would be better spent in getting to know their own children. Youngsters are small for so short a time that it's tragic to waste their childhood. Yours is the better course.

DEAR MISS DIX: I am becoming disillusioned over the attitude of my fiancee. He spends most of the time golfing, bowling or fishing, and when he visits me he's tired out. We aren't youngsters—he's 46 and I'm 48, but I would like a little more attention than he gives me. An occasional movie is the extent of our social life, though he comes here to dinner several evenings a week.

H. M.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Your fiancee must at least be given credit for recognizing a good cook when he meets one. Your job, apparently, is to provide the energy that keeps him active in sports. Lower the quality and quantity of food served [illegible] if you can keep [illegible]

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Our neighborhood is a nice one, and our block, situated on a hillside, commands a beautiful view. Two homes below ours have tall trees, and the owners refuse to top them. Everyone else in the neighborhood keeps trees trimmed in order to ensure thtt all may enjoy the view. To us, stealing our view is as bad as stealing our property.

Bee.

ANSWER: It is certainly the height of selfishness for people to block your view. Your uncooperative neighbors probably are oblivious to the satisfaction of others—hence appeals to their good nature would be futile. Perhaps there's a city ordinance concerning the trimming of trees. Have a lawyer investigate this angle for you.

THE EXPERTS SAY:

1-Way Viewer Handy to Spy On Nursery

By JOAN BARBERIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A device that could be useful for children's nurseries, among other places, has been put on the market with other new household gadgts.

This is a one-way viewer with a shatterproof lens which fits into any door up to two inches thick. The American manufacturers rec[illegible] may want to look into waiting rooms unobserved." They also suggest it for nurseries.

Toronto hardware men said they did not think there would be much demand for one-way viewers. They said householders also are not particularly interested in fancy locks or door knockers. But they report a steady sale for door chains, whereby doors can only be opened from the inside.

Architect Dan Dunlop of Toronto says Canadians appear interested in more colorful front doors. Better paints have been developed, which do not fade or become weather beaten as easily as the older types.

Mr. Dunlop says there also seems more interest in fancy door knobs for interior doors. Really fancy, hand-painted ones are imported.

Some hardware salesmen say that with the increased number of colored doors on modern homes, the sale of large door knockers may increase.

William Spence, a Toronto department store hardware expert, has noticed a demand for small brass door knockers, especially since Christmas. "They were mostly bought by elderly persons, and were the type best suited to apartment or bedroom doors," he said.

A lot of brass knockers are found in England, particularly on the colorful doors of Bohemian Chelsea in London. Many brass door knockers now are made in Canada.

Polished brass knockers are most popular, said one expert, with ornamental iron next in favor. Another salesman said large-type aluminum knockers were finding many buyers.

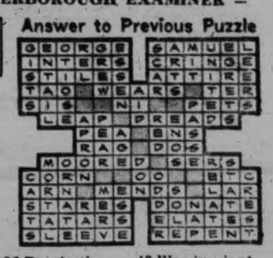
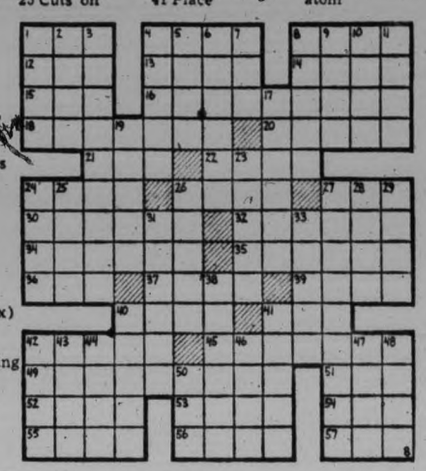
Answer to Previous Puzzle





Readers' Friday Column By Mary Moore

QUESTION: There is a delicious type of small cake which my sister used to make a number of years ago, but recipe for which she has since lost. It contained rice flour and ground almonds blanched, among many other things and was baked in one cake about 1 inch thick, then was cut into oblong pieces about 3 inch by 1 inch and rolled in fruit sugar. They were not as rich as shortbread but had somewhat the same texture. I have read many recipes in the hope of running across this one—for surely someone has it! Violet E. R.

ANSWER: I have two recipes, which nearly meet your requirements but neither is exactly right. Your sister might be able to make the small adjustments necessary if she had two recipes to look at.

ALMOND CAKES

One-quarter cup shortening, 4 eggs, 1½ cups sugar, 1 teaspoon mixed grated orange and lemon rind, 1½ cups almonds ground very fine, 2½ cups flour—this may be white or rice flour, ½ teaspoon salt. Cream shortening, stir in unbeaten eggs, sugar, rind and nuts. Beat for 15 minutes, then gradually stir in the flour. Make into balls the size of a hickory nut by rolling bits of dough between palms and drop on waxed paper. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. until light brown. Or spread in buttered pan to depths of ¼ to ¾ inch and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. When cold, cut in oblong strips ¾ by 4 inches. Ice with white icing or roll in powdered sugar.

ALMOND COOKIES

One-half cup butter, 1 egg, 1-3 cup almonds blanched and finely chopped, ½ cup sugar, ½ tablespoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon each cloves and nutmeg, grated rind ½ lemon, 2 tablespoons cooking brandy, 2 cups flour or 1 cup white flour and 1 cup rice flour. Cream the butter, add egg well beaten, almonds, sugar, brandy and spices sifted with flour. Roll out dough to one-fourth inch thickness, shape with round or oblong cutter first dipped in flour and bake at 325 deg. Fahr. If any of our readers know exactly what Violet is referring to I would be glad if they would send me the recipe so I could print it here.

QUESTION: .... we have bushels of beets and carrots from our own garden have you recipes for different ways of cooking beets and carrots GERTRUDE ANSWER: Gertrude I have printed only the part of your letter containing a request, but want to take this opportunity of thanking you for the lovely gift. I am writing to you privately but hope you will have a Happy New Year.

HARVARD BEETS

Use small beets for this. Scrub them, boil in skins until tender, rinse in cold water, slip off skins and cut into ¼-inch dice. Make Harvard sauce by mixing together for each 4 cups beets ½ cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch and when well mixed stir in ½ cup each vinegar and water until thick. Add cooked cut up beets, and keep hot in double boiler over simmering water for 30 minutes, to help sauce flavor penetrate.

SHREDDED CARROTS

Shred raw carrots on your finest shredded. To 4 cups of them in top of double boiler add 4 tablespoons each margarine and boiling water and ¾ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. Cook in double boiler over boiling water until carrots are tender,—this takes about 30 to 35 minutes. Just before serving add 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley and 1 teaspoon sugar.

GLAZED CARROTS

Scrub carrots and scrape them if necessary and cut into halves lengthwise and then into halves crosswise. Grease a baking dish generously with butter or margarine and lay carrots in. Since your family is large you will need at least 12 carrots. Over them sprinkle 1½ cups brown sugar, ¼ teaspoon salt. Pour around sides 1½ cups cold water. Dot top with margarine or butter and ½ lemon sliced very thin, including the skin. Cover and bake at 375 deg. Fahr. for about 40 to 50 minutes. Turn the carrots once during baking period. I hope these recipes help you and that your children like their vegetables prepared this way.

NOMINATIONS CLOSED

LONDON (CP)—Fifty six nominations were accepted Thursday for the 108th Grand National steeplechase—a field loaded with quality jumpers but woefully short on quantity.

With two other acceptance lists to be announced before the March 27 gallop over Aintree's fences and brooks, the field is almost certain to be whittled to about 30 starters.

That would be a weak turnout for a National. The January acceptance list before last year's National carried 73 horses. In 1952 the list was 84 strong and in 1950 it [illegible].

Slumping figures on the steeplechase, which carries Irish sweepstakes interest, is reflected in the small number of long distance chasers in training in England and Ireland. The high cost of training and bringing up a hunter to Grand National calibre is the main factor.

YID NOT ENTERED

Biggest shocker this year is the absence of Little Yid, part time favorite before the 1953 run and a standby on British courses for several years. No reason was given by Yid's owners, but the absence probably is due to the horse's better showing in two- and three-mile chases.

The National is a four-mile 856-yard killer which winds twice around Aintree's course. Thirty-two water, wood, brush and rail jumps make the national the world's toughest.

With 2½ months to go and weights and jockeys not yet assigned, the favorites include the 1953 winner, Early Mist, M'As-Tu-Vu, Flen Fire, Wot No Sun, Halloween, Whispering Steel, Ordnance, Mont Tremblant, Irish Lizard, Royal Tan and Legal Joy.

ASK DEADLINE EXTENSION

VANCOUVER (CP)—The executive board of British Empire Games Society Thursday asked the British Empire Games Federation to extend its deadline for track and field entries.

The present deadline is July 9 and the games society seeks extension until July 12. The scheduled national trials have been set for July 9-10 here.

The request was made to accommodate the Canadian Track and Field Association, which scheduled the trials. Unless the deadline is altered, officials said, the trials would have to be moved ahead several days with "considerable extra cost" to the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

Chairman Stan Smith said he had been informed India was reconsidering its refusal to attend the games and that Ceylon may send a token representation.

If so, he said, it would be the first time all 26 members of the Commonwealth have participated at one time. Previous high was 13.

GIARDELLO FAVORED

NEW YORK (AP) — Joey Giardello, consistent Philadelphia middleweight who now ranks No. 3 among champion Bobo Olson's challengers, boxes strong-jawed Garth Panter of Salt Lake City tonight at Madison Square Garden. Giardello is a 2½-to-1 favorite.

Panter in 66 professional bouts has won 52, lost 12 and drawn two. With 36 knockouts among his victories, he has a better KO record than Giardello.

Since Giardello started boxing in 1948 his record for 61 scraps is 46-10-5.

SKI MET ANNOUNCED

EDMONTON (CP) — The annual international collegiate ski meet, biggest of its kind on the continent will be held Feb. 6-7 at Mount Norquay, Banff.

The Alberta government and the University of Alberta, co-sponsors, said Thursday that invitations have been extended to 10 American and Canadian universities.

FIGHTER SICK

EDMONTON (CP)—Boxing promoter Jack Berry announced Thursday that heavyweight Joe Kahut of Portland, Ore., has contracted hemlock poisoning and will be unable to fight former Canadian champion Vern Escoe here Jan. 16. In Kahut's place Berry hopes to sign either Rex Layne, Freddie Beshore or Dave Whitlock, all veteran American boxers.

A medical authority said hemlock poisoning, apparently suffered by Kahut through eating contaminated food, results in a form of muscular paralysis and convulsions.

Despair Sounds In Korean Note

SEOUL (AP) — South Korea today issued a statement of its problems with both the Communists and the Japanese that bristled with criticism of the United Nations and ended on a note of despair.

The statement, prepared by the office of public information, was described in its preface as the first of a series that "presents a highly authoritative point of view and is a true expression of popular sentiments."

The article said:

"The United Nations statesmen have been busily and futilely chasing the will o' the wisp of peace with an aggressor that does not even understand the concept.

"President Rhee now faces repeated criticism for failing to 'cooperate' and for not modifying his position, but he cannot accept an appeasement of communism that would doom his country.

"Also terribly dissillusioning to Koreans is the United States attitude toward Korean-Japan relations.

"It is this blind attitude toward Japan that . . . has led the United States to side against Korea, a country occupied by Japan for 40 years, in its temperate claims against the former enemy."

Have No Comment On Seaway Speech

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian government officials had no immediate comment on President Eisenhower's remarks to Congress Thursday regarding United States participation in the St. Lawrence seaway.

But earlier this week a cabinet informant said Canada will go ahead on her own if current litigation is cleared up before Congress moves.

Eisenhower, in his state of the union message, urged Congress "promptly to approve our participation" in the seaway's construction.

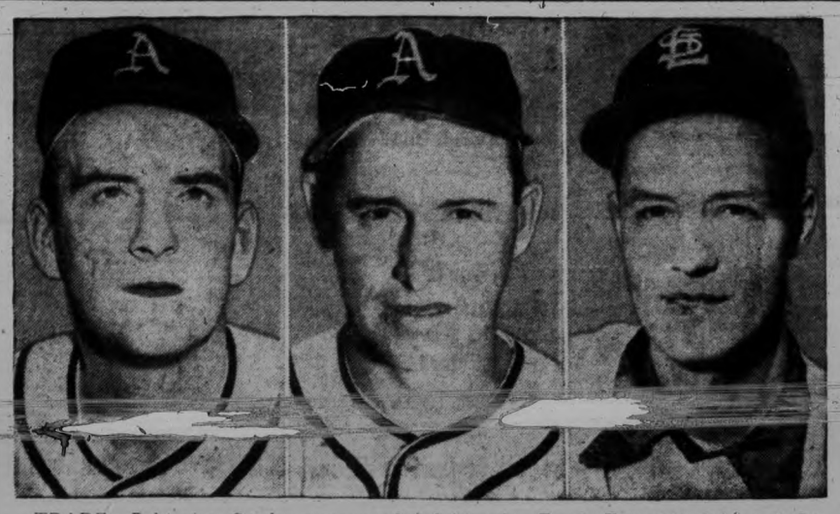
The Canadian government has been prepared for two years to move alone on the $300,000,000 navigation phase of the seaway-power project. The start has been held up by still-pending court action in the U.S.

'Most Wanted' Captured

FAIRFIELD, Calif. (AP)—Chester Lee Davenport, cattle rustler, escape artist and one of the FBI's 10 most wanted men, is in jail again after nearly six months of "behaving like a very normal citizen." The 31-year-old Wichita Falls, Tex., fugitive was surprised by a posse Thursday as he milked a cow at a dairy in nearby Dixon. He had worked there since shortly after his escape from the state reformatory at Grantie, Okla., July 4.

Search Abandoned

TOKYO (Reuters)—United States Navy headquarters today announced it has called off the search for a navy Neptune patrol aircraft missing since last Monday with 10 men. It said two bodies in an inflated rubber boat and other debris believed to be from the plane were found off the south Japanese coast.



TRADE—Baltimore Orioles announced the trade of pitcher Bob Cain, right, a southpaw, for two Philadelphia Athletics' hurlers, lefthander Frank Fanovich, left, and Joe Coleman, centre, a righthander. The Orioles said it was a straight swap with no money involved.

55 Lives Lost Oil Stove Fires

BOSTON (AP) — Fires starting from improperly handled or defective oil stoves are causing heavy loss of life in homes this winter, preliminary reports to the U.S. National Fire Protection Association show.

The association's flammable liquids engineer, Miles E. Woodworth, further reports that a new study of thousands of fire deaths from known causes in homes reveals oil stove-oil range fires as the largest single killer. He urged utmost care in the choosing and use of such equipment.

Woodworth emphasized he was not speaking of the oil-fired furnace, which has one of the safest records of any kind of heating apparatus.

Police Try To Locate Home Of Indian Boy

LEAMINGTON, Ont. (CP) — Ontario provincial police are trying to locate the home of an Indian boy who wandered into the farm of Clifford Preston, east of here, last summer.

Jace Pearson, 18, has only a vague idea of where he comes from and is partly deaf. He speaks of an automobile accident after which the car burned.

He moved in with Archie Vermeulen, next door to the Preston family. They learned he came from the Canadian west and went to school in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. Mr. Vermeulen wants to sell his farm and appealed to the Children's Aid Society to find the boy's home.

Godfrey Sponsor Drops Radio-TV Programs

NEW YORK (AP)—One of Arthur Godfrey's chief sponsors, the Liggett and Myers Tobacco Co., has dropped its participation in his radio and television programs.

"We were unable to arrive at a satisfactory agreement," the company announced Thursday through its advertising agency.

Published reports here said the company was unwilling to accept financial terms asked by the network for a continuation of the association which had lasted seven years.

EXPENSIVE PARCHMENT

Parchment diplomas awarded in U.S. high schools and colleges cost more than $1,000,000 annually.

Fire Routs 40

OSWEGO, N.Y. (AP)—A fire that routed about 40 guests of Oswego's largest hotel, the Pontiac, in subfreezing weather was checked early today after gutting two fourth-floor rooms. Firemen helped two unidentified men down ladders from the top floor of the four-storey stucco building in the heart of this Lake Ontario port city's business district. No one was hurt.

Rose, Hartwig Win Doubles Crown

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP)—Mervyn Rose and Rex Hartwig today won the South Australian doubles tennis championship, downing the defending champions, Lewis Hoad and Ken Rosewall, 6-2, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4 in the all-Australian final.

After the match Hoad complained of a slight recurrence of "tennis arm," a soreness which has bothered him intermittently this season.

Feature of the doubles final was Rose's reversal of his recent poor form. He served strongly and volleyed accurately. He did not drop his service at any time and made many brilliant interceptions at the net.

Saturday Hoad meets Tony Trabert of the United States in the singles final, billed as a replay of their brilliant Davis Cup match in December.

Segura Wins $4,000 In Tennis Tourney

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Francisco Pancho Segura won first prize of $4,000 in the Inquirer masters tennis tournament here Thursday night after being picked out of a three-way tie on the strength of sets won.

Segura defeated Don Budge 6-0, 6-2 and Richard Pancho Gonzales defeated Frank Sedgman 6-4, 18-16 in the final night of a three-night round-robin tournament.

The results left Segura, Gonzales and Sedgman in a three-way tie for first place with two victories and one loss each. Officials decided the winner would be the man winning the most sets percentage-wise in the round robin.

New Windsor Local Proposed At Chrysler

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A new Windsor local of the United Automobile Workers (CIO) was proposed Thursday as Chrysler Corporation of Canada workers decided to vote on breaking away from their parent union.

The 3,500 men at Chrysler are members of Local 195, which has 13,000 members in 61 plants in the Windsor district.

A two-thirds vote is needed to carry the referendum in the plant, if it is held.

Storms Strike Italy Hardest

LONDON (AP)—Central Europe and Italy were being buried deeper as snow storms continued today.

Wintry weather was worst in Italy, where in northern regions transportation was paralyzed and at least one hamlet, the little town of Montemezzano near Modena, was isolated for the fourth day. Rescue teams, fearing the villagers may be suffering, bucked a blizzard in trying to reach the community with lorry loads of provisions.

Since the storms began five days ago at least 10 lives have been lost in northern Italy.

There were heavy snowfalls in Austria and parts of Switzerland and southern Germany today. Temperatures were low and biting winds whistled over much of the continent.

Roads were icy everywhere, especially in Britain where there were many road accidents.

Remember When—

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Syl Apps, then a star leftwinger with the Senior Hamilton Tigers, scored three goals and three assists as Tigers beat Oakville 10-2 in a game at Toronto 18 years ago today. Apps turned pro with Toronto Maple Leafs the next season and became the first winner of the Calder Trophy for best rookie in the 1936-37 campaign. He was also voted by sports writers Canada's outstanding athlete of 1937.

NEW RANGERS COACH—Murray (Muzz) Patrick, member of the famous hockey family, has been signed as coach of New York Rangers of the National Hockey League. Patrick, now coaching Seattle Bombers of the Western Hockey League, will take over coaching chores from Frank Boucher who found his double-job of manager-coach too burdensome. He is shown in the uniform he wore as a player with the Rangers for three seasons after 1938. Murray's father, Lester, was the first coach of the Rangers. His brother, Lynn, also coached New York for two years and now coaches Boston Bruins of the same league.

New Battalions Policing Red River Delta

HANOI, Indo-China (Reuters)—New light battalions of Viet Namese, being rapidly formed here to police the Red river delta, have won one of the biggest successes in their 12-month history, the French high command announced today.

It said that two light battalions, with only "light losses" Thursday [illegible] rebel soldiers in the battle for control of the northern end of Buichu province near the mouth of the Red river.

Part of the plan of Gen. Henri Navarre, French commander-in-chief, is the formation of 108 of these light battalions of young peasants, lightly armed with automatics, by the end of this year.

Their job is to police the rice-rich Red river delta and free heavier and better trained French battalions for battles against the main Vietminh divisions outside the delta.

POLITICAL TROUBLES

SAIGON, Indo-China (AP)—New political troubles are bothering France in Indo-China. Thailand, next door, is making overtures to the Indo-China kingdoms of Cambodia and Laos, and the Cambodians at least are reported receptive.

A spokesman for Thailand's diplomatic mission in Phom Penh, the Cambodian capital, said his government has proposed that "the group of Buddhist countries, including Laos and Cambodia," join Thailand in an alliance against Indo-China's Communist-led Vietminh rebels.

FRENCH ANNOYED

French sources in Saigon show annoyance at the suggestion, viewing it as a possible step toward breaking Cambodia away from the French Union. The Indo-China war landed abrputly on Thailand's frontier at Christmas, when a Vietminh column knifed across Laos to the frontier Mekong river.

The 4,000,000 Cambodians, fearful of domination by the 22,000,000 population in the coastal Indo-Chinese state of Viet Nam, already look askance at their links with France and Viet Nam.

France, one official in Saigon said, sees "no inconvenience" in any accord between Thailand, Cambodia and Laos—but only so long as it doesn't affect their membership in the French Union.

STIRLING BEATS COE HILL

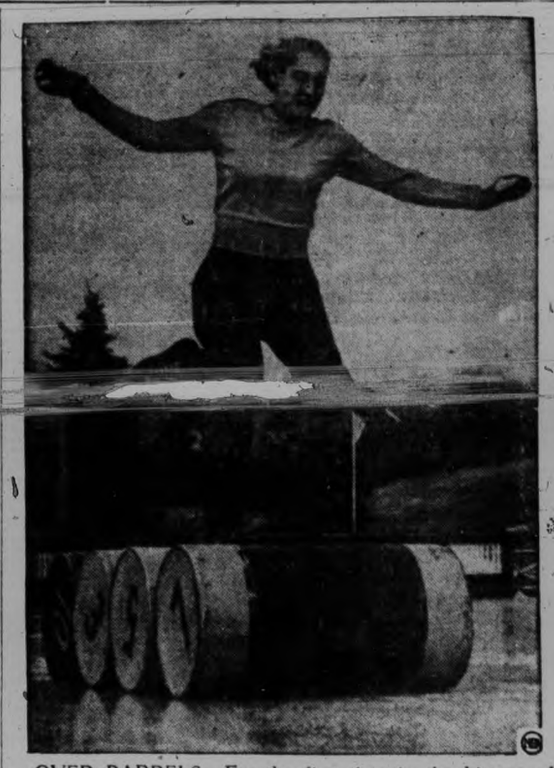
McMurray led the scoring with four goals. Bailey, Hermiston and McGee two each and Knapton, Parks, Wood and Palmer one each.

Stirling will play hosts to Norwood on Friday night at 8.15.



OVER BARRELS—For the first time in the history of barrel-jumping, women competed in a world championship contest. Jean Sakovich, of Shenandoah, Pa., got into the swing of it on the Grossinger, N.Y., Country Club rink.

Wants Police Protection At Barrie

HAMILTON (CP) — Ken Soble, owner of Hamilton Cubs, said Thursday he would ask for "normal police protection" the next time the Cubs play in Barrie but denied newspaper reports that he would "hire strongarm men" to do the job.

"My understanding is that police protection in Barrie has not been the best for visiting hockey teams and sometimes has been biased. Our coach Jimmy Skinner was arrested in Barrie once at the rink and Toronto Marlboros had the same trouble this year," he said.

"I say the next time Hamilton plays in Barrie we want normal police protection and we want the Barrie arena to sell seats in the arena—particularly behind the Hamilton bench—to Hamilton fans who would make the trip, not as hired thugs but as Cub supporters.

Soble's blast against Barrie started over the problems of the interlocking junior A hockey schedule. He said the plan was "costly" and the folly of men who were good hockey men but obviously "poor business men."

Hap Emms at Barrie countered by telling Soble "to stick to his amateur hour" because junior hockey got along without him in the past and probably could do so in the future.

Reuther Shooting Inquiry Dangerous Business

DETROIT (AP)—New disclosures, including reported wary tipster contacts with police, shed light today on the method of operation in the drive to crack the Walter Reuther shooting mystery.

The new details came out as the search for suspect Santo (Sam) Perrone, one of four men accused of plotting to kill the CIO leader in 1948, apparently ran up against a blank wal.

The 56-year-old convicted labor terrorist has been missing since before the filing of conspiracy and assault charges early Wednesday. One of those charged is Clarence Jacobs, 48, of Tecumseh, Ont.

DANGEROUS PARLEY

Prosecutor Gerald K. O'Brien told of a late-night meeting with an informer who called his home about two weeks ago and which, he said, turned out to be the "big break."

The veteran prosecutor said, "Yes, there was" when asked if danger existed in meeting the informer.

"My family," he said, "could have very easily collected on my insurance."

He refused to go into extensive detail, but said he met the unnamed man in a "strange place" and obtained "a good deal of information."

O'Brien said he had "no knowledge" of Perrone's whereabouts and had "heard nothing about a surrender."

Named along with Perrone on the felony charges were his son-in-law, Carl Renda, 35; Peter Lombardo, 51, inmate of Leavenworth penitentiary, and Jacobs.

Order Inquiry Into Death Of Doctor's Wife

VANCOUVER (CP) — Doctors, some living and others "dead 200 years," figured in evidence being compiled by police.

An inquiry was ordered by the attorney-general's department after a coroner's jury Thursday accused a Vancouver physician guilty of [illegible]

The jury said Dr. Raymond D. Rush failed to provide "proper hospital and medical care" for his spiritualist wife in the final hours of her life, Nov. 30.

Mrs. Margaret Rush, 39, died of natural causes, "the results of ulcerated colitis with terminal aspiration of stomach contents while in a coma," the jury found.

RECEIVED SPIRITUALISM

One of several doctors testifying at the inquest, Dr. Thomas Dalrymple said he treated Mrs. Rush from 1949 to 1952. He said Dr. Rush told him his wife was receiving spiritualism in the form of faith-healing.

She was being treated by three German doctors who had been "dead for 200 years," Dr. Dalrymple said Dr. Rush told him.

Five doctors, two insurance company executives, an undertaker, the city analyst and two detectives testified.

BARBITURATES FOUND

Dr. T. R. Harmon said the dead woman's organs showed a large content of barbiturates. Dr. Rush was quoted as saying his wife fell down stairs and suffered a cerebral haemorrhage. Other doctors testified no signs of head injuries could be found.

The associates said they advised the doctor to get his wife to hospital immediately. However, Dr. Rush refused to do so and asked his fellow doctors to sign a certificate of death before his wife died, listing cerebral haemorrhage as cause of death.

Dr. Rush was quoted by detective C. W. McKay as saying he knew his wife was going to die and refused because of religious beliefs to put her in hospital.

"We are soulmates," the doctor was quoted as saying.

"When I told him his wife's body had been taken in for an autopsy . . . he pleaded that we wait at least 24 hours," McKay said.

Asked for a reason, Dr. Rush was quoted:

"You wouldn't understand. We believe in spiritualism. My wife and I are soulmates."

Children Help To Paint Mural In London Hospital

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—William O. Moore, a London artist, wanted to do something for the children in War Memorial Hospital here. And the children helped him do it.

He decided to paint a woodland nursery mural in a corridor of the hospital. Tiny patient milled about his feet as he worked and he asked if they would like to help. They would.

As fast as brushes could be supplied the children set to work under his guidance.

In "odd moments" over a three-week period, Mr. Moore completed the mural, nine feet high and 22 feet long. It was the biggest job he had attempted.

"But then, on this job I had lots of help," he said.

Jean Simmons Has Strange Filmland Deal

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Jean Simmons is coming down the home stretch of one of the strangest deals ever [illegible] in Hollywood.

Miss Simmons is the bright, young British star who played Ophelia to Sir Laurence Olivier's "Hamlet." She was under contract to J. Arthur Rank, the British film magnate who appeared set for big operations after the war. When the Rank fortunes floundered, he sold some of his properties.

One of these was Miss Simmons. Rank and Gabriel Pascal, who owned a portion of her services, handed her over for a sizable sum to Howard Hughes.

"I didn't know what I was getting into," sighs Miss Simmons.

The eccentric millionaire kept her idle for months at a time. Then, to beat a legal deadline, he thrust her into three fast pictures in a row. After a well-publicized court battle, she won certain concessions. She was allowed to do three pictures away from RKO—"The Robe," "Young Bess" and "The Actress."

THE ONLY WOMAN

With her contract coming to a close, Hughes sold her services to producer Howard Welsch. Again she was required to make three fast pictures.

"I had never even heard of this man Welsch," remarked Miss Simmons. "And when they handed me the first script, 'A Bullet is Waiting,' I thought it was all joke. It was unbelievably bad."

But now she is making the picture and seems fairly happy about it. She said the script has received an overhaul and she is pleased with the way director John Farrow is handling it.

One thing she should be happy with: She is the only woman in the picture. Others in the cast are Rory Calhoun, Steven McNally. That's all, brother. No extras or anything.

Her plans after she is free from Hughes?

"I suppose I shall have to start my career all over again," she remarked. "I want to do some stage work as well as pictures. I also want to get to work on starting a family."

Suggest New Method Of Religious Teaching

KITCHENER (CP) — A new method of religious teaching may be adopted by Kitchener separate schools following the three-day conference here of separate school teachers.

Nearly 300 delegates from Hamilton, London, Brantford, Guelph, Walkerton, Stratford, Elora, Fergus and Kitchener and Waterloo district, attended the conference which ended Thursday.

They heard Sister Rosalie of the Congregation of the Mission of Helpers of the Sacred Heart, Washington, D.C., lecture on a teaching method, developed by the order, which stresses the necessity of teaching the "whole child," by building the supernatural life on the natural one.

Immediate response to the sister's lecture was the formation of a religious-doctrine study-group by Kitchener separate schools.

Succumbs To Injuries

TILLSONBURG (CP)—Mrs. Peter Burwell of nearby New England died Thursday as a result of injuries suffered in an accident Wednesday night when the truck in which she was riding rolled over into a ditch. Alice Genders, 17, suffered a possible broken spine in the crash.

Picked Wrong Steel

TORONTO (CP)—Wesley Baumhaur, 43, a Fisher Steel Company employee, pleaded guilty Thursday to stealing $300 worth of steel beams and learned that police had a special interest in the steel. Testimony showed the beams which were recovered, are to be used in the building of a new police station. Baumhaur was remanded to Jan. 13 for sentence

Big Parking Program

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto parking authority is expected to ask the civic administration to approve a multi-million-dollar program next week. Ralph Day, chairman of the authority, said "more than $10,000,000" is needed to solve the parking problem. The authority proposes a program of parking garages and parking lots.

Lost Sleep-Walker

ADELAIDE, Australia (Reuters) Heather MacGowan, 9, who often walks in her sleep, strolled off a slow-moving train Wednesday without waking up and found herself in the middle of a field. She wandered about until she found a railroad worker who sent a message to her mother, still asleep with two other children on the train. Her family later drove back to pick her up, none the worse for her experience.

Hesitant Hitch-Hikers Sure They're Leaving For East

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C. (CP)—Joe and Margaret Bell, the hesitant hitch-hikers, are definitely, finally, irrevocably going home to Lunenburg, N.S.

And it looks as though it might have to be by thumb after all.

"We're packed and ready to start hitch-hiking for Nova Scotia in the morning," Bell said Thursday. "And this time it's for sure."

He added:

"We've had nothing but bad luck since we came to B.C. Even the offer of a job was no good."

Last week, when the Bells and their two children—Wayne, 3, and Jay, 2—were preparing to travel east by thumb, Joe was offered a job at Quatsino, on the west coast of Vancouver island, at $300 a month.

NOT SO GOOD

"But it's not as good as it looks" he said. "My wife would also have to cook for and feed three other men out of this wage and I would be working all hours for seven days a week."

The Bells may run into some difficulty with the child welfare department if they take their two sons with them hitch-hiking.

"A welfare worker warned us they would take our children away from us if we took them hitch-hiking," Bell said.

ASK ABOUT AID

The Bells, down to their "last 76 cents," were wondering about "all those donations sent in to us."

"We haven't received a nickel and would like to know what is being done with funds for charitable causes."

Mrs. Bell wired radio station CJCH in Halifax which had undertaken a fund-raising campaign for them. She asked for "any help it can provide!"

However, all donations received by the station were turned back after Joe had announced he had a job and wouldn't be leaving.

"Help or no help, we're setting out at 9 sharp in the morning," Bell said.

"I am taking my guitar and should be able to make enough playing and singing to pay expenses."

HOSPITAL NURSES SEEK PROTECTION

Biggest Explosion Expected To Rock Pacific Area Soon

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States may be about to rock the peaceful mid-Pacific with the most thunderous man-made explosion in world history.

An Atomic Energy Commission announcement Friday night roused speculation that government scientists may be planning to detonate a hydrogen bomb with a blast power mightier than the combined force of all the conventional bombs dropped by U. S. planes in the Second World War.

The AEC said men and equipment will begin moving this month to its Pacific proving grounds in the Marshall islands for "a further phase of a continuing series of weapons tests."

The three-paragraph announcement made no mention of specific types to be tested, but a reference to "all categories" of weapons touched off the H-bomb speculation.

IT has been estimated that U. S. air forces in the Second World War, unloaded the bomb equivalent of slightly more than 2,000,000 tons of TNT.

A super-atomic bomb dropped over the Nevada desert last June was a popgun by comparison. It was believed to contain a power equivalent of 50,000 tons of TNT, and its flash could be seen 500 miles away.

This bomb, in turn, was about 2½ times as powerful as the one that all but wiped out the Japanese city of Hiroshima.

NO OBSERVERS

There will be no observers of the new Pacific tests other than the American officials concerned, the AEC said. This was another indication that important new developments in the field of atomic warfare will be tried out.

Thomas E. Murray, an atomic energy commissioner, suggested last November that foreigners, presumably including Russians, should be permitted to witness the explosion of an American hydrogen bomb as a demonstration of the alternative to world peace.

Murray said first-hand observation of an H-bomb blast "is an essential qualification for future negotiators of the great survival issues in the years ahead."

The secrecy surrounding the coming tests indicated that the AEC is not inclined yet to put on an H-bomb show for the rest of the world.

It was reported last July that the AEC had entered into large-scale production of material for hydrogen bombs. One of the shots in last fall's series of tests in the Pacific was of a hydrogen device.

Say Witness Bought Car In Chatham

Had Few Drinks, Dismissed Cab Then Trail Vanished

WINDSOR (CP)—Don Ritchie, 33, the key witness in Detroit's Reuther shooting case, bought a car in Chatham late Friday, a few hours after he had eluded three guards and vanished from a Detroit hotel room, it was learned today.

Ritchie, a former Riverside resident, is believed to have come directly to Windsor after quitting the hotel room.

He chartered a cab here and was taken to the Majestic Hotel on Ottawa street, where he had a few drinks. The same cab took him to Chatham.

About 5 p.m. he bought a car. There his trail ended.

Ontario provincial police have a description of the car and are on the watch for him.

KNOWN AS "FLOATER"

Ritchie, the man who is said by Wayne county prosecutor Gerald K. O'Brien to have put the finger on the assailants of Walter Reuther, CIO president, is known here as a "floater." He was released from the Essex county jail on Dec. 8 last after serving a 30 - day term for theft.

Police say he has a long criminal record in Ontario and "other places," but that none of his convictions were for serious offences.

While in Windsor at noon Friday, Ritchie telephoned his lawyer and said he would call again. He had failed to do so up to noon today.

May Be Spring Way Out In Victoria, B.C. But Shivering Easterners Say It's Dream

Victoria and other fortunate points in British Columbia may be enjoying spring - like weather where the temperature reached 47 degrees yesterday, (as the adjoining picture indicates), but Peterborough folk and their miserable companions in the prairies and eastern Canada are shivering in zero temperatures.

The cold wave, which shows no sign of a let-up, is blazing its [illegible] Alberta to New Brunswick. Edmonton recorded a night low of 10 below; Regina—23 below; Winnipeg—10 below; White River, Ont.—12 below; North Bay—4 below; Ottawa—4 below; Montreal — 7 below and Saint John, N.B.—5 below.

In North Bay a howling blizzard whipped down early today, churning a three-inch snowfall into drifts two feet deep and it's not expected to blow itself out for another 24 hours.

Motorists and pedestrians had a hard time getting to work through drift-blocked streets. No serious accidents were reported.

Temperatures of 15 degrees be low zero were forecast for tonight, putting new teeth into the biting northern gale winds. More wind, snow and cold is the weather bureau's forecast for Sunday. High for the day is set at five below, the coldest day of the season.

The weatherman is offering the same raw deal for the entire north country this week-end.

Rain freezing on windshilds slowed traffic to a crawl in the Niagara peninsula today, although highways were in good condition as the result of nighttime sanding.

Snow began to fall in the peninsula shortly after midnight and turned to sleet and freezing rain.

The rain, according to Arthur Lamont, weather office meteorologist, was coming from a layer of above-freezing air falling through a layer in the lower levels where temperatures were below freezing. For a short priod, he said, ice pellets fell.

Three-inch-deep snow, whipped by 30-mile-an-hour winds has plugged Manitoba highways and caused the death of one man in the last 48 hours. Meanwhile, Winnipeg shivered in 11-below weather and the mercury dipped to 39 below at Fort Churchill in the north.

Michael Baron, 29, of Winnipeg was killed Friday when pinned under 10 tons of rock after his truck slid off the highway near Lockport, 13 miles north of here.

SIGNS OF SPRING—While most of Canada shivers in a January cold wave, Vancouver is enjoying weather in the mid-40s. Betty Morrison (left), from Progress, B.C., and Enid Campbell, of Isle Pierre, B.C., both visiting Vancouver, examine the bright red berries, harbingers of spring, in Vancouver park.

Police Free Suspect In Lab Death

No Definite Lead To Killer Yet Toronto Police Say

TORONTO (CP) — Police said today a suspect questioned for hours Friday in connection with the slaying of a 24-year-old hospital employee Thursday night had nothing to do with her death.

Inspector W. Mace said scores of hospital employees have been questioned but no definite lead to the killer of Helen Boyle has been found. Miss Boyle was born in Peterborough.

He said the suspect, arrested on a vagrancy charge, was questioned about the slaying after it was learned he once worked at the hospital. It was expected that the charge against the man would be dropped shortly and that he would be released.

Nurses at the downtown St. Michael's Hospita, frightened that the attacker might strike again, asked for protection. The laboratory where the technician was struck down is under guard by a special security officer of the hospital staff.

Meanwhile preparations went forward for the funeral, probably Monday, of the attractive brunette laboratory worker who spent the last eight years on the staff of St. Michael's Hospital in downtown Toronto. Her father, Thomas Boyle of Cobourg, and her 24-year-old brother, Jack, of Oshawa, are making the arrangements. It is expected the funeral and burial will be in Cobourg, where the girl spent Christmas with her family.

SUFFERED SKULL FRACTURES

Miss Boyle was found unconscious Wednesday night on the floor of the sixth-floor biochemistry laboratory at St. Michael's Hospital. She died about 26 hours later from two severe fractures of the skull, one at the front and the other at the back of her head, despite an emergency operation.

Rescue 12 Men Marooned On Ice Floe

MITCHELL'S BAY, Ont. (CP)—Twelve fishermen marooned on an ice floe were rescued Friday after drifting for two hours in Lake St. Clair near this village 14 miles northwest of Chatham.

A helicopter, sent from a United States Air Force field in Michigan stood by but was not needed as two boats picked up the men and brought them to safety.

The 12 were fishing off the ice when an overshore wind widened a crack in the ice and started their ice flow into the lake. The men waved for 15 minutes before they attracted the attention of Margin Peats on shore.

He and Jeff Urquhart, operator of a boat livery, chopped two boats out of the ice, dragged them more than a mile across the ice and launched them in open water. They rowed the stranded fishermen to solid ice. None were hurt.

SECOND RESCUE

Those rescued were Henry Mousseau, Peter and Jerry Gagnier, Lawrence St. Dennis, all of Tilbury; Leon D. Meunchy, John Graff, Roland Churcott, Alphonse VanDerveeken, Wallaceburg; Edward Waselewski of Inkster Village, Mich., Henry Hoffman, Sebastian Elzerman and Adolph Dubicki, Detroit.

Judge Rules Man Can Wed Divorced Wife's Sister

TORONTO (CP)—Marriage between a man and his divorced wife's sister now is legal in Ontario, Mr. Justice Wishart Spence of the Ontario Supreme Court ruled Friday. He ordered the provincial secretary to issue authorization under the Marriage Act to allow Heinz Schepull and Eva Bekeschus, recent German immigrants to Canada, to get a licence at Toronto.

The couple had applied for a licence to marry but were refused because the bride-to-be is the sister of the groom's divorced wife. The couple then applied for a mandamus to compel the provincial secretary to authorize issuance of a licence.

Miss Bekeschus came to Canada in June, 1952, and Mr. Schepull in August, 1953. Both were born in Germany. Mr. Schepull was dipull was divorced from Miss Bekeschus' sister in Germany June 7, 1953.

HAVE AUTHORITY

"We have authority binding in Ontario (the Divorce Act of 1930) that rejects the view that the marriage bond is indissoluble," Mr. Justice Spence said in his judgment.

"The act rejects the view held in the ecclesiastical courts that once a man and woman had been joined in lawful wedlock, they remained one flesh during the life of the parties."

25 Police Cars In 90 MPH Chase

TORONTO (CP) — A bullet-punctuated, 90-mile-an-hour chase through city streets early today ended in the arrest at gunpoint of two men identified as Floyd Smith, 20, and John Jeffries, 19, both of Toronto.

Policemen were injured in the chase after 25 police cars took up the eight-mile pursuit. The speeding car was finally forced to the curb in west-central Toronto after bullets pierced the rear window and trunk.

Each man was charged with causing grievous bodily harm and with illegal possession of liquor. Smith also was charged with dangerous driving.

Inspector Adolphus Payne suffered chest injuries and detective Kenneth Craven a twisted neck when their car crashed into a fence at 90 miles an hour.

Police said the chase began in the city's east end at 2 a. m. after two officers approached a parked car with two men inside. The car sped away. Officers said the fleeing car crossed Yonge St. at St. Clair Ave., at 80 miles an hour.

11 Japanese To Sue Truman

TOKYO (Reuters)—Eleven Japanese lawyers today announced that they will sue ex-president Truman and the United States government for compensation for every victim killed or wounded in the atomic attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

The lawyers, most of whom defended Japanese war criminals at post-war trials, claimed the 1945 bombings violated both international and American domestic law. They gave no details of where they will bring suit.

A spokesman for the group, known as "the Atom Bomb Compensation Federation," said it will demand about $3,000 compensation for every fatality, to be paid to relatives of the victim, and $600 for every survivor.

Truman is named as co-defendant in the suit because he gave the order to drop the bombs. Official figures of the casualties have never been established. Latest estimates say 80,000 persons wer killd outright at Hiroshima and 40,000 others injured. About 37,000 were believed killed in Nagasaki and an equal number injured.

38 Firemen Injured Fighting N.J. Blaze

ORANGE, N. J. (AP)—Thirty-eight firemen and policemen were injured battling an all-night four-alarm fire in bitter, sub-freezing weather that burned through a string of stores in the main shopping area here early today and caused more than $500,000 damage.

Orange hospitals treated 18 firemen and two policemen for smoke poisoning, detained three for further treatment. Another 18 firemen got first aid.

Car Crashes Through Guard Rail 4 Die In Nova Scotia River

TRURO, N. S. (CP)—Four persons died early today when a car crashed through a guard rail of the Isgonish river bridge at Lower Debert on Route 2, 10 miles west of here. A passing motorist saw the submerged car about dawn and found the frozen body of a man in naval uniform on the river bank.

Police had to wait for low water in the tidal stream before they could reach the car. In it they found the bodies of two more men and a woman. One man wore an air force unfiorm, the other dungarees.

2 VICTIMC IDENTIFIED

Two of the victims were identified. They are Walter Glen Lewis of Portaupique, 25 miles west of Truro, and Joseph Leonard Gallant of Summerside, P. E. I.

Lewis, an airman stationed at the Greenwood, N. S., air base, is believed to have been the driver. Gallant, whose frozen body was found near the river, is a naval man stationed at Shearwater naval air station near Dartmouth, N. S. The car was registered in Lewis' name.

The car apparently was heading west when it failed to round a sharp turn at the bridge approach. It plowed through the guard rail and slid into the water.

The man whose body was found on the bank is believed to have crawled from the wreck and died of injuries or exposure in near-zero weather.

Asian Nations Oppose U.K. Plan

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—Asian nations represented at the Commonwealth finance ministers conference here are opposing Britain's policy of developing only projects able to help the sterling area's trade balances, officials said today.

Sir Oliver Goonetilleke, Ceylon finance minister, is expected to press for an alternative policy of "jobs and homes first" at the resumed secret sessions next week. India and Pakistan are likely to give some degree of support to his attitude, officials said.

R. A. Butler, British chancellor of the exchequer, has laid down the line that the Commonwealth must first develop economic self-sufficiency as a buffer against any downward trend in world trade.

An official spokesman said the ministers have agreed that while a major recession in the United States is unlikely, the Commonwealth must prepare to meet the effect of any legislative action on international trade by Washington.

10-Cent Cup Of Coffee Soon Just Memory

TORONTO (CP) — Canadians may soon look back on the 10-cent cup of coffee as just a memory.

Predictions of increases in coffee prices of as much as 10 cents a pound have led some Toronto cafe owners to say they may have to increase the price of a cup of coffee to 12 cents.

Mrs. F. G. Montgomery, managing director of the Canadian Restaurant Association, says restaurants will try to go no higher than 12 cents if an increase becomes necessary.

Reds Launch Second Drive

HANOI, Indo-China (Reuters)—Communist Vietminh troops today launched a second westward drive across the narrow waist of Indo-China, parallelling their surprise Christmas offensive which cut the country in two.

The French high command announced here today that part of the rebels' 325th Division is on the march from its coastal base at Vinh toward the mountain town of Nape in Laos.

Nape is about 100 miles northeast of Thakhek on the Thailand border, captured by rebel forces in a drive from the China sea last month.

Observers here think the new westward push is a move to widen the rebel-controlled corridor which the first drive established between French troops in northern and southern Indo-China.

It would also poise another Vietminh pincer at Laos state, already threatened by the rebel base at Thakhek and by growing rebel forces 250 miles farther north along the frontier.

WIFE HELD—Patrick Henderson of Niagara Falls, Ont., said he will write to Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, in an effort to free his Russian-born wife, (right) believed held in a Siberian prison. Henderson, married in 1947 in Moscow, hasn't seen his wife in six years. She was refused permission to accompany him when he was transferred from his post at the British Embassy. He came to Canada in 1948.

Frost Sees No Need For Ont. Rent Controls

TORONTO (CP)—Premier Frost said Friday that as far as the province is concerned there is no further need for rent controls.

The premier's statement came after a private meeting with Mayor Allan Lamport and the Toronto board of control called to discuss removal of rent controls scheduled for March 2.

The city sought to continue controls after the March 2 deadline. Premier Frost said controls would be discontinued unless the civic administration itself set up control machinery.

Under the Ontario Leasehold Regulations Act, 1951, Mr. Frost said, "municipalities have all the powers we had to control rents."

Lindsay Man Jailed 6 Years In Robbery

MORRISBURG (CP) — Three men, two of them from Toronto, were sentenced to a total of 12 years Friday for the $600 holdup of the Morrisburg brewers retail store Dec. 4.

Edwin Carpenter, 20, of Lindsay, was given six years, Robert Edward Payne, 25, of Toronto, four years and Donald James Low, 17, of Toronto, two years less a day definite and six months indeterminate in reformatory.

The trio faced four charges of robbery with violence and a fifth of assault with intent to rob.

Low and Payne also pleaded guilty to six other charges of breaking and entering and theft in the district.

Key Witness Flees Back To Canada

DETROIT (AP) — The missing witness in the Reuther shooting case was identified today by the Detroit News as Don Ritche, 33, recently released from the Essex county jail at Windsor, Ont.

Ritchie was released from the jail Dec. 6 after serving a 30-day term for the theft of a coat, Windsor police said.

They added that Detroit authorities questioned Ritchie in jail regarding the Reuther case.

The paper said Ritchie disappeared from a Detroit hotel room Friday morning despite a police guard.

Prosecutor Gerald K. O'Brien had termed the missing man "the key witness" to the solution of the 1948 assassination attempt on CIO President Walter Reuther.

CONFIRMS NAME

Reached at his home, O'Brien confirmed the identification of Ritchie. But he said: "If you want to publish the name, that's your responsibility—I don't want to be responsible for putting a bullet in that man's head."

O'Brien said the witness shook off his protective police guard at a downtown Detroit hotel around 10:30 a. m. Friday.

LAWYER PHONES

The witness' lawyer telephoned him at 4:40 p.m. O'Brien said, to advise that the man had returned to Canada, but would contact the lawyer again today.

Ontario provincial police have been asked to try to locate the witness.

"A witness," O'Brien said, "is what he still is if he returns in a reasonable time. I could, of course, make him a defendant on his own confession of participation."

O'Brien said at a pre-dawn press conference that the witness actually saw the shooting of Reuther and confessed he was paid $5,000 "to go on the job."

The prosecutor quoted the witness as saying the actual shooting was done by another Canadian, Clarence Jacobs, 48, Tecumseh, Ont., one of four accused earlier this week in a warrant charging him and three others with assault with intent to murder and conspiracy to assault with intent to murder Reuther.

The witness, O'Brien said, named himself, Jacobs and Peter Lombardo, 51, now a convict in Leavenworth penitentiary, as the three picked for the job by Santo (Sam) Perrone, 56, a union-breaker and former convict.

O'Brien said the witness told him that Carl Renda, 35, Perrone's son-in-law, gave him $5,000 the night of the shooting.

PERRONE SOUGHT

Jacobs is in jail in Windsor, fighting extradition. Renda is under $25,000 bond here. Perrone is being sought.

O'Brien said Friday that the attempted assassination of Reuther came in an attempt by gangsters to gain control of the CIO United Auto Workers union, the presidency of which Reuther had recently won, and their desire to keep control of multi-million-dollar in-plant gambling.

Police Commissioner Donald S. Leonard said the witness shook his three policemen-guards at the hotel by leaving the water running in a shower and presumably slipping out through a reception room into which both his living and bedroom opened. His guards were in the living room.

WILL SUSPEND GUARDS

Leonard identified one of the guards as detective Wayne Glisman. He said Glisman and the others "undoubtedly" would be suspended.

O'Brien said the witness had come from Canada voluntarily New Year's Eve and had been shifted from hotel to hotel since as a safety measure.

O'Brien said the witness got in touch with him through an intermediary weeks ago and voluntarily told his story. The prosecutor said he did not know what brought on the "confession," but said he had heard "one of the bunch" broke the witness' jaw a short time before. He also pointed out that rewards total $204,000.

IN REUTHER CASE—Clarence Jacobs (right) of Tecumseh, Ont., is one of four men charged by Michigan State authorities with an assassination attempt on CIO president Walter Reuther in Detroit in 1948. He confers with his lawyer, Ross Liddell of Windsor. Jacobs will appear Jan. 14 when a date for an extradition hearing will be set.

Man Caught Taking Radical Plane Design From Canada Into U.S.—In Strange Case

ST. ALBANS, Vt. (AP)—Immigration officials today are investigating the strange case of Dusan Premovic, the man they caught trying to sneak what he called "revolutionary jet engine designs" into the United States from Canada.

The 37-year-old Premovic, who describes himself as a Yugoslavia-born engineer, was arrested Thursday at the St. Albans bus station after he walked across the Quebec border at an unguarded spot.

Ernest E. Salisbury, district immigration director, quoted Premovic as saying he was on his way to Washington to give his ideas to U.S. Air Force officials. Salisbury said he called the designs "more advanced than anything the United States now has available."

Premovic, who appeared in court Friday, is charged with illegal entry and is being held without bail. He will be tried in federal court in about a week.

CONTACT AIR OFFICIALS

The immigration official said the Washington office of the U. S. immigration and naturalization service probably will contact air force officials soon in regard to he engine designs Premovic carried in cloth tracings.

Salisbury said Premovic "seems like a very intelligent fellow" who apparently "didn't realize he simply could not enter the United States like a native Canadian" in his eagerness to present his plans to air force officials.

SECOND TIME STOPPED

It was he second time he had been stopped trying to enter the U. S. Salisbury said Premovic had been turned back Wednesday when he tried to enter the country on a bus at Rouses Point, N. Y., on the other saide of Lake Champlain.

"Apparently," said Salisbury, "he went around the head of the lake and walked across the border near West Berkshire, then walked the 10 miles between there and St. Albans.

"He was picked up by our border patrol in a routine check of persons at the St. Albans bus depot, carrying the tracings, a briefcase of documents and a suitcase full of clothing.

"It is known that he entered Canada from France but we don't know how he managed to get to France from Yugoslavia. We don't know what he had been doing for a living in Canada, either."

Firms Merge To Build Gas Pipeline

Longest Pipeline Covers 2,240 Miles:

OTTAWA (CP) — The world's longest single pipeline may be delivering Alberta natural gas to Ontario and Quebec by 1956. A merger of the two companies competing for the gas-carrying franchise was announced Friday by Trade Minister Howe. That was the Alberta government's main provision a month ago for release of its gas for sale in the East.

The deal, largest such merger in Canadian history, virtually assures a start of construction on the 2,240-mile line from Princess, Alta., some time this year. Hopes here were that gas could be laid down in Winnipeg next year and in Ontario and Montreal by 1956. The line likely will be extended to Quebec City. A branch line is expected to deliver gas to Ottawa.

Alberta's amalgamation proposal, approved by the federal cabinet, came to fruition after Mr. Howe brought together for extensive talks this week officials of both companies, who worked feverishly ironing out financial details and other matters.

The merger gives Western Pipe Lines and Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. a 50-50 interest in the new company, which will carry the Trans-Canada name. Western had sought to pipe Alberta gas to Winnipeg and then south to Minneapolis, Minn. Trans-Canada wanted an all-Canadian franchise from Alberta as far east as Montreal.

EXPECT PRICE DROP

The line, described by experts as the biggest single financial operation in Canada and the world's biggest pipeline deal, is expected to drop the price of gas considerably as against manufactured gas. Estimates of the drop, however, vary.

An estimate based on a survey by Mr. Howe's defence production department is that gas might retail in Toronto at 50 per cent less than the manufactured product on the basis of the heat-production standard of British thermal units and still return the pipeline company a fair profit.

The company at present plans a 30-inch pipe to Toronto, touching at Regina, Winnipeg, Kenora, the Lakehead and Sudbury. It would drop to 24 inches from Toronto to Montreal and in a branch line dipping into southwestern Ontario. The main line, however, might be boosted to 36 inches, adding $75,000,000 to construction costs.

ALBERTA TO RELEASE GAS

The Alberta government has indicated it is ready now to release 3,500,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas, which at its expected average daily output of about 365,000,000 cubic feet would keep the company going for about 22 years. More gas is looked for as Alberta's fields develop.

The company, before it can start its financing, now needs only a firm "dedication" from Alberta of a supply of gas to the company and a construction franchise from the board of transport commissioners here.

It is understood a Canadian will head the merged firm, but his identity has not been settled. Mr. Howe said the company will consist originally of a 12-man directorate with a management committee operating the line.

Bargain As Unit

WINDSOR (CP)—George Burt, president of the United Automobile Works (CIO-CCL) said Friday night the certification of his union as bargaining agent for Ford of Canada workers at Oakville means the union will ask the company to negotiate for all Ford of Canada workers as a unit.

Farm Convention Rejects Ban On Tractor Drivers

TORONTO (CP)—A move to prohibit persons under 15 and those who have lost automobile driver's licences from driving tractors on the highway got nowhere Friday at the annual meeting of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture. A resolution calling for such a ban was tabled after discussion.

C. A. Milligan of Napanee, federation president, said he felt such [illegible] proposed restriction [illegible] a boy in [illegible] 14-year-old farm boys were as capable of handling tractors as their fathers.

Mr. Milligan said he feels, too, that a farmer who had his driving licence cancelled "after some little accident down at the corner" would suffer hardship if he couldn't cross the road with his tractor.

Delegate Lawrence Kerr of Chatham said:

"I think we should keep in mind that no one loses his licence lightly in this province. Also we should remember that voting down this resolution is going to be bad public relations.

NOT RIGHT

"And I might add that it isn't right for a man who has lost his licence for drunk driving to be able to drive his tractor into town and get drunk all over again."

Some delegates said the police are capable of dealing with drunken tractor drivers without any directives from the federation. Others said teaching young sons to handle tractors might often mean crossing public thoroughfares when farms were divided by roads and the suggested restriction would forbid this.

The federation asked the Ontario department of ariculture to investigate the manner in which the federal Co-operative Marketing Act is applied and "to take the necessary action so that a market for Ontario potatoes may be established at prices at least equal to costs of production."

It also asked that steps be taken to compel automobile drivers to have adequate insurance coverage before they are issued a licenc.

Other resolutions asked for further safety devices and precautions on trucks and at railway crossings and in the passing of school buses and proposed transit insurance for persons hauling livestock.

The 500 federation delegates approved a resolution asking the lands and forest department to remove raccoons from the list of protected wild animals. Delegates said the raccoons, protected from Feb. 28 to Oct. 1, raid corn fields and some farmers report as much as two acres of corn ruined by the little animals.

The Ontario Whole Milk Producers' League, winding up its annual convention, went on record as urging use of butter in public institutions. The association said that at some of the institutions, including jails, oleomargarine is served.

Red China Urges Talks Resumed

[illegible] (Reuters)—Communist China called today for the immediate resumption of negotiations at Panmunjom to arrange for a Korean peace conference.

The call came in an official statement from Chou En-lai, premier and foreign minister, broadcast by Peiping radio.

Negotiations broke down early last month when Communist delegates refused to withdraw a charge of "perfidy" against the United States.

Chou declared: "The cessation of discussions will not solve any problem."

He said if the issue were handed over to the United Nations General Assembly, the Chinese Communists and North Koreans should be entitled to send delegates.

Chou also expressed the hope that the Big Four meeting of foreign ministers in Berlin later this month would agree to inviting the Peiping regime to a five-power meeting to settle international problems.

Uranium Activity At Record Heights

Mining recorder J. R. McGinn said today 10,128 claims were filed in 1953. The previous high was 6,115 in 1946.

Working on claims, however, dropped in 1953 in spite of the record staking. A total of 141,782 days were recorded on 1,626 claims. In 1952, 2,100 claims were worked for 185,600 days.

The year's uranium boom began Feb. 19 with announcement of discoveries on an island in Lake Nipissing. Other finds came later near Blind River 90 miles west of here, in the Agnew lake area and in an area only 20 miles north of Sudbury.

DUTTON, Ont. (CP)—A three-ton truck collided with a farm tractor near here today. The truck driver was pitched out and the driverless truck went through a ditch, two fences and across two fields until it butted a third fence and stalled.

The tractor was demolished in the accident near this village 15 miles west of St. Thomas.

Extend Deadline For PoW Claims

OTTAWA (CP) — The deadline for filing maltreatment claims by former Canadian prisoners-of-war in Europe has been extended to March 31, 1954.

Extension beyond the original Dec. 31, 1953, deadline was ordered following acceptance of a report prepared by Chief Justice Thane Campbell on conditions in European war prisoner camps in the Second World War.

It was felt that the extension will enable ex-prisoners-of-war at home and abroad to familiarize themselves with the report and, if eligible, to file notice of their claims with the commission.

Find Deficiency In Cadet Stores

Brigadier Michael S. Dunn of the Eastern Ontario Area has informed the board of education that there is a $133.15 deficiency in clothing and equipment marked up to the PCVS Cadet Corps.

It will be written off this year.

K. S. Wightman, superintendent of schools, said that the deficiency is cumulative, with the bulk of the loss three years ago.

"For the last two years there has been a very close check made by Mr. Moebus," said Mr. Wightman.

On the credit side of things, Brigadier Dunn had this to say: "The PCVS Cadet Corps has a very high efficiency rating and I'm sure you're very proud of . . (it)".

Union and Hospital Board Deadlocked On Three Points

Unionized employees at Civic Hospital hope to conclude a collective bargaining agreement with the hospital's board of governors when they meet on Jan. 13.

The board of governors and Local 19 of the National Union of Public Service Employees (CIO-CCL are still deadlocked on three CCL are still deadlocked on three ion president, said today. They have been negotiating now for three months.

PRESS FOR 3 CHARGES

Mr. Linsdell said the union are pressing for these three changes in the contract:

1—Union security. A modified version of the Rand formula whereby all eligimle employees have to pay union dues whether they belong to the union or not.

2—Off-shift differential. Extra money as compensation for those working other than the day shift, which is 7 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. (The union want an extra seven cents an hour for workers on the 3:30 p.m. to 11 p.m. shift, and an extra 10 cents an hour for those on the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift.)

Last Tuesday the employees turned down the pension plan offered by the board. The plan is similar to the city's with the exception of a few clauses.

On a number of other points the union and the board of governors have reached agreement.

Negotiating for Local 19 next Wednesday will be Mr. Linsdell, president; John Fenn, vice-president; Miss Eunice Gahagan, recording secretary; Robert Morris, chief steward, and Mrs. F. Coons and Robert Muirhead. They are being assisted by Alfred Barber, president of the Peterborough and District Labor Council (CCL) and Frank Kitchen, NUPSE representative.

Reopen Talks To Choose Conference Site

By TOM REEDY

Gates to the big barbed-wire compound in Karlshorst were manned by nattily-uniformed Red Army honor-guard troops as the American, British and French commanders and their deputies arrived.

DEBATE LOCATION

The bone of contention is the exact location for the parley, scheduled to start Jan. 25. The West wants to use the old Allied Control Authority building in the American sector. The Russians are represented as reluctant to use that as permanent headquarters.

As the second meeting opened today, Soviet commandant Sergei Dengin greeted the Western commandants cordially in the conference room of his headquarters.

At Bonn, the three Western high commissioners met to review a report from their commandants in Berlin on the negotiations for a conference site. James B. Conant, United States high commissioner, and French high commissioner Andre Francois-Poncet have just returned to Bonn from inspection of preliminary work on the conference in Berlin.

Australia Faces Dazzling Chance

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—The Sydney Sun-Herald says today Australia faces the same "dazzling prospect," now enjoyed by Canada, of becoming a top-rank nation.

The newspaper said selection of Australia as site of the first full-dress Commonwealth economic conference held outside Britain was "flattering acknowledgement that Australia has gained a new international stature."

It added that the whole Commonwealth had watched "with amazement and envy the tremendous transition of Canada to the front rank of economic and strategic importance."

The same prospect lies before Australia "if opportunities now unrolling before us are boldly and imaginatively seized," The Sun-Herald declares.

Change In Pattern Of 1955 Licences

TORONTO (CP) — There will be a change in the pattern of number-and-letter combinations on Ontario licence plates in 1955, J. D. Millar, deputy minister of highways, said today.

One report was that the 1955 plates will be all numbers.

Mr. Millar said he could not confirm the report but "some change has to be made next year."

"We now have more than 1,400,000 vehicles licensed in the province and we're running out of number-letter combinations.

"We're seeking a simpler system."

Four Generations Served As Firefighters

Present member carrying on the tradition is Bob Bremner, 30, who joined the force after serving several years in the navy.

First record of a Bremner on the fire brigade appears in minutes of a meeting held in 1871. That member was Alexander Bremner, great-grandfather of Bob. Since then his grandfather and father have served.

At first, hospital officials and police expressed belief she suffered her injuries in a fall against a table corner and to the laboratory floor. However, authorities decided after an autopsy the injuries were too severe to have been suffered in that manner.

Dr. Chester McLean, provincial pathologist, said that in his opinion the star-shaped fractures resulted from two savage blows to the head. Police suggested the weapon was either a length of metal pipe or a wrench. Said Chief Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson:

NO DOUBT IT'S MURDER

"There's no doubt it was murder."

Investigators think the attacker struck a heavier blow than he intended on the back of the girl's head. Then, in a panic, he apparently struck her across the temple as she lay face up on the floor. Finally, he fled in panic without stealing anything or touching his victim.

Asphodel Names Two Councillors

WESTWOOD (ENS) — Two candidates qualified for the two vacancies on the Asphodel township council Friday afternoon, so there will not be an election.

Everett Elmhurst of RR 1, Birdsall, and Arnold Lobb, who lives near the Dummer boundary line, both signed their qualification papers at the special nomination meeting Friday in the community hall. Both said they would stand but they have till 9 p.m. tonight to change their minds.

ONLY TWO QUALIFIED

The special nomination meeting was called because only two of the required four councillors had qualified at the original meeting on Dec. 28.

Mr. Elmhurst and Mr. Lobb are township farmers.

The acclamations show a complete change in the makeup of the Asphodel council. James Humphries stepped down after 10 years as reeve to be succeeded by Max Scott, veteran councillor. Of the four 1954 councillors, three (Messrs. Elmhurst and Lobb and Arnold Stevenson) are newcomers to township politics, and Carman Metcalfe has just been in office since last June.

Here is the 1954 slate in Asphodel:

Reeve, Max Scott.
Councillors, Everett Elmhurst, Arnold Lobb, Carman Metcalfe and Arnold Stevenson.
Trustees, Wilfred Buck, William Heffernan and James Moore. (Messrs. Heffernan and Moore are newcomers to office.)

NATO To Concentrate On Bases' Network

PARIS (AP)—Reliable informants said today that the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, within sight of its goal of 160 jet airfields, will concentrate this year on laying a communications network to link the bases and a web of pipelines to supply them with fuel.

The sources said the December NATO ministerial meeting voted approximately $224,000,000 for its 1954 "infrastructure" program, the building of permanent installations needed to support NATO armed forces. The bulk of the sum will be used for the communications and fuel supply systems.

The United States will contribute about 38 per cent of the amount spent on NATO installations.

Reject Seguin Appeal Plea

OTTAWA (CP) — Chief Justice Thibaudeau Rinfret today rejected the application of Henri Seguin for leave to appeal his conviction for the murder of Leonard Z. Hurd, Maxville, Ont., business man.

Seguin, under sentence to be hanged Jan. 19 sought leave to appeal to the Supreme Court on grounds that the trial judge erred in his charge to the jury at his trial in Cornwall, Ont., last October. His conviction was upheld subsequently by the Ontario Court of Appeals.

Hurd was shot to death in the front seat of his taxi in August, 1952 and Seguin was sought after discovery of documents in the car giving his name. Seguin was captured in British Columbia and returned to Cornwall for trial.

Famous Old Country Building In P.E.I.'s Historic Replicas

Visitors to Prince Edward Island are sometimes confused when their neighbors in the next cottage tell them proudly that "We saw Glamis Castle and Anne Hathaway's Cottage today and had a delightful swim in the Gulf of St. Lawrence on the way back," says a CNR release.

Even in this day of supersonic speed and jet propulsion such an accomplishment is impossible. But the neighbors in this case were telling the plain truth—they did see Glamis Castle and Anne Hathaway's Cottage, also Stoke Poges Church, the Manor House and an old English pub. These people were just back from Col. E. S. Johnstone's farm in Burlington, Prince Edward Island, where the farmer-soldier has built miniatures of all these famous Old Country buildings.

TRUE TO FORM

The castle, church and cottage are exact replicas of the original. The castle and church are built in stone and the cottage has a thatched roof — just like the original. They are all built to scale and sit proudly in Col. Johnstone's garden which in itself is worth the 35-mile drive from Charlottetown or the shorter run from the north shore resort areas. Everyone is welcome at the colonel's farm and despite the fact he takes time to accompany the guests around the premises, there is no charge for the visit. The garden and its miniature castles are a labor of love with Col. Johnstone, a veteran of two world wars, who runs a big farm on the side.

The colonel began his work on this unique island garden shortly after World War II. He has kept adding to it ever since and his latest creation is the English pub which is large enough to be used as a registration room for the growing number of persons who yearly go to Woodleigh — the picturesque name by which the Johnstone farm is known. There will be a registration desk and a chair or two in the pub—but none of the product for which its namesakes in England are famous.

STOKE POGES CHURCH

After visiting Glamis Castle, it takes the visitor only a few seconds to cross the yard in back of the farm home over to a large shade tree under which sits the Stoke Poges Church immortalized in Grey's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard." All the buildings are not any higher than the shoulder of a 12-year-old boy. But the windows, doors and other accessories are all there in perfect detail. Col. Johnstone even has the miniatures wired for electricity and they present a panorama of light in the evenings.

There is also an interesting sundial, a bird bath and a wishing well in the colonel's garden. All money thrown into the wishing well by hopeful visitors is turned in to the colonel's favorite fund—the Red Cross.

P.E.I. STONES

Stones used in the castles are gathered on the nearby shores of Prince Edward Island. Every time the colonel and his family go to the beach they are on the lookout for suitable stones to carry back in the trunk of the car. The best of these is found at Darnley, a small community near Malpeque—the place from where the famous Malpeque oysters come.

In addition to the miniature buildings, the colonel has one of the finest flower gardens in the province set in the spacious lawns around his buildings, and Woodleigh rates high on the list of tourist attractions in Prince Edward Island. The island is linked with the mainland by the Abegweit, a large modern car-ferry operated by the Canadian National Railways.

U.S. Refuses Prolong Pact

LONDON (Reuters) — France and Britain have failed to get the United States to agree to a formal prolongation of the Atlantic Pact from its 20-year life to 50 years, diplomatic sources said here today.

Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Laniel urged last month at Bermuda that NATO be extended to the same 50-year duration as the proposed European Defence Community, the sources said.

But President Eisenhower and State Secretary Dulles said they would not be able to get congressional approval for such a long-term commitment to Europe.

They assured the European statesmen, however, that the United States did not contemplate abandoning the Atlantic Pact when this would become legally possible in 1969, unless it was then clear that the Communist military menace no longer hung over Europe.

Baby-Sitter Saves 3 Charges

MIDDLEMISS, Ont. (CP) — A quick-thinking baby-sitter saved her three small charges from a fire which razed the home of Mr. and Mrs. William D. McLeod Friday night.

Mrs. Clara Ogles, a close friend of the McLeods, tossed Brenda, one and a half years, from the front door to a youth who was passing. Then she went back and led out George, 5, and Barbara McLeod, 6.

Teachers Get Pay Increase, Strike Ended

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's first teacher strike in 13 years is over with the 77 striking [illegible] agreed Friday night to meet the teachers' request for a $200 annual salary boost retroactive to Sept. 1 last.

The school board gave in immediately after a public meeting of between 250 and 300 ratepayers approved a resolution urging that the teachers' requests be met.

Fewer than 20 votes against the motion were tabulated.

BE BACK MONDAY

Two "observers" from the Alberta Teachers' Association said the teachers will be in their classrooms Monday.

The teachers, from five schools and having an aggregate of 2,300 pupils, did not report for work last Monday after the Christmas vacation.

Negotiations over wages began last May. After a conciliator failed, an Alberta government "arbitration" board heard representations. The board, whose recommendations were not binding, urged the teachers be given a $200 annual salary increase retroactive to Sept. 1 last. The teachers accepted the award and the school board rejected it.

The award brought the teachers annual minimum salary to $2,000 from $1,800.

Electricians Plan Strikes In U.K.

LONDON (AP)—Some 2,000 key electricians, members of a union headed by a Communist labor leader, voted today to support their demands for more pay with a series of one-day strikes throughout England next week.

The strike will hit atomic energy stations and guided-missile plants as well as airports, oil refineries, and steel factories. The employers' association, the National Federated Electrical Association, has countered with a threat to lock out workers one day for each day on strike.

Frank Foulkes, Communist boss of the Electrical Trades Union, said the men are "fully mobilized and at war stations" for the strike action. He said the threat of a lockout "is a challenge which will be met by the full resources of labor."

Foulkes and other union officials refused to disclose exact plans, but said the strikes would be called so as to hit the employers' association "where it hurts most, but not the country."

Marilyn Monroe Snaps Fingers At Film Studio

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Suspension of Marilyn Monroe by her studio points up the fact that the blonde bombshell has entered the second phase of her career.

The Monroe has arrived. Although in only three [illegible] was chosen one of the 10 top money-making stars of 1953. And so the familiar pattern starts to appear.

Generally speaking, a movie star goes through three phases:

1. The starlet. During the early period of her career, she will do anything to get ahead — accept bits, pose for cheesecake, go on tours and perform whenever she is asked.

2. The star. When she finally arrives on top, our girl is more cautious. She wants good scripts and does not fear suspension over roles she doesn't think are good enough or might harm her career. She is also more frugal in giving her time to interviews, tours and other more or less bothersome by-products of stardom.

3. The falling star. She becomes either (A) much more difficult and resentful of the studio's neglect of her career; or (B) much more obliging, taking any roles with the realization that her life in the movies is fading.

WANTS MORE MONEY

Fortunately for Marilyn, she is a long, long way from phase No. 3. After three years of doing the studio's bidding, she is asserting her new-found rights as a star.

She has some arguments in her favor. Until recently, she was paid $750 a week, a meagre fee for a star of her prominence. She has been raised to $1,250 plus bonuses. But even that's pittance compared to the other top 10 stars.

Marilyn has also been working almost constantly. She doesn't want to burn out her career with too many pictures. And with two top hits behind her, she doesn't want to follow with something mediocre.

The studio has its own strategy. Whenever someone becomes such a sensational star, a studio generally keeps another player warming in the bullpen. When Deanna Durbin, the former Winnipeg singer, dominated Universal's star list, the lot groomed Gloria Jean as a successor, if needed. Fox had Jane Withers available to keep Shirley Temple in line.

The gal who is ready, willing and able to fill the Monroe bathing suit: Terry Moore, of course.

MUSIC FESTIVAL ADJUDICATORS for this year at the annual Kiwanis Club event will be Frank Odell (left) and Ronald Biggs, both from England, who will be adjudicating the Peterborough festival in a sweep across the country.

Kiwanis Music Festival To Start Week of March 9

The eighth annual Peterborough Kiwanis music festival will be held this year March 9th to 17th inclusive.

In 1953, there were 746 entries. The festival committee are anticipating an even greater number this year.

Norman Armstrong, chairman of the committee, has announced that 12 scholarships with a total value of $600 will be included in the wards. These scholarships, along with trophies and smaller cash awards, are being donated by industries and interested organizations and citizens in the city.

As in former years, two musicians from England who come to this country to adjudicate at the chain of festivals across Canada will be at the Peterborough festival. This year the adjudicators are Ronald Biggs and Frank Odell. Returning to Peterborough for a second time, Mr. Biggs is a member of the BBC audition panel and an examiner for the Associated Board of The Royal Schools of Music.

Mr. Biggs finds himself in increasing demand as an adjudicator and conductor at Festivals. The second English adjudicator, Frank Odell, holds the conductorship of the South West (London) Choral Society, whom he conducted in Belgium, France and Switzerland. He is a member of the Royal Society of Musicians and is also on the central board of the British federation of music festivals. Mr. Odell now devotes his energies to adjudicating, conducting, teaching and coaching.

The drama and verse-speaking section of the festival also has a well-known adjudicator, Mrs. Michael Meiklejohn, of Ottawa. Mrs. Meiklejohn has had a great deal of experience in this work and also in the field of drama.

The closing date for the festival entries this year is January 15. Syllabuses and entry forms may be obtained from Mrs. A. M. Rees, 1239 Clonsilla Ave.

Denies Padding Expense Account

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—Civil defence co-ordinator C. H. F. Fletcher Friday denied the expense account he submitted to board of control in connection with the visit of the civil defence show "On Guard Canada" was padded.

The board refused Wednesday to approve the $370 account. Members asked the co-ordinator to submit signed receipts for all items.

Mr. Fletcher said some of the funds were used to purchase meals for out-of-town workers and men erecting the display. He said receipts could not be provided for such expenditures.

Another $100 went to volunteer labor which worked Saturday and Sunday. He said a receipt went to the board for this payment. Such labor would normally cost about $800, said Mr. Fletcher.

Stratford Youth Given 3-Year Suspended Term

STRATFORD (CP) — A 16-year-old Stratford youth, Carl Warris, was placed on a three-year suspended sentence by magistrate A. F. Cook Friday for breaking and entering and theft from a service station here Sunday. He pleaded guilty.

A brother, William, 19, was sentenced to nine months definite and six months indefinite on the same charge when he pleaded guilty, Monday.

Three conditions were imposed on Warris.

He was ordered to attend church at least three times a month; to be home by midnight for the first 18 months of the sentence, unless accompanied by his father or mother or some elder person and to report to police once a month for one year.

He was released to custody of his father.

Sports Enthusiasts Find Winter Holiday In Laurentians Attractive

When the winter sports crowds relied primarily on snow trains to get them out into the countryside, the choice of ski trips was definitely limited, especially for weekend excursionists. Today however, the trend toward car and air transportation has given ski enthusiasts an unprecedented mobility, which has meant a much wider range of winter holiday possibilities. Eastern Canada is now within comparatively easy reach of Ontario vacationists.

The great surge of interest in winter sports which began a little more than a decade ago, found in the province of Quebec a natural setting. What began as a craze has grown into a major industry, rivalling the province's other key tourist attractions. When the weatherman co-operates and the snow falls, the Laurentian mountains north of Montreal turn into a beehive of activity.

This exclusive tieup with the snow department was cursed for the first 250 years in the life of Quebec. Today its rare absence in winter when it fails, means the loss of millions to hotel and resort owners.

IN CONFINED DISTRICTS

The ski resorts in Quebec have grown up in a relatively confined set of districts. All or any may be reached pretty easily by fast regular train service. It is a fraction of a day's drive from Montreal and air travel into the heart of these resorts has been growing rapidly in recent years.

Montreal is the headwater for wherever you may go skiing. With 750-foot Mount Royal in the middle of Montreal with its bright lights and gay cosmopolitan atmosphere, and the top of the mountain reserved as a park without cars, you may never get away from the great bustling white-mantled metropolis. From Montreal you may look northward to some spot in the Laurentian mountain belt. Literally several hundred inns, hotels, pensions of all classifications, ranging from society centres to hard-bitten ski-zealot cabins and student-catering pensions. The belt is roughly 30 miles by 90 miles.

One way swings northward through Ste. Jerome, Ste. Adele, Ste. Marguertie, St. Donat, St. Faustin, Ste. Agathe and on to Mont Tremblant which is the end of the ski line. All of these smart comfortable inns and hotels are ready to provide all phases of a visitor's requirements. Most of the Laurentian hotels are built adjacent to fine ski slopes ranging from tough racing hills like those at St. Sauveur, Piedmont, Ste. Marguerite, Ste. Adele, Ste. Agathe, St. Donat and Tremblant itself to pleasant beginner slopes to be found at the front doors.

FAMOUS RUNS

Famous race runs such as Mont Baldy at Ste. Marguerite, Hill 80 at Ste. Adele, the Flying Mile and Ryans Run at Tremblant are scenes annually of major ski races. Tremblant and St. Donat offer two of the finest chairlifts in America.

The area around Quebec City is another skiers' paradise. The famed Chateau Frontenac is there with the world famous ski Hawk ski school. Classes are daily held through the winter at nearby Lac Beauport. Lac Beauport also boasts some splendid hotels such as the picturesque Manoir St. Castin built at the foot of Montagne du Lac.

About 100 miles southeast of Montreal in the Eastern townships more fine resorts and splendid skiing are to be found. Such spots as North Ratley, Orford, Magog and Sherbrooke, provide good facilities. The best known racing course in this area is the Three Crooks Run on Mont Orford, a 3,200-foot giant where a major championship is held yearly.

Travel bureaus can direct visitors in the province to a hotel which will fit any pocketbook. Even at the magnificent domain founded by a Philadelphia millionaire at Mont Tremblant, rates may range from $20 daily to $1 a night in the student cabins on the north side of the mountain under the brow of the famed Devil's River Run.

The Laurentian ski season extends from late November with the first substantial snows to May. In recent years, the ancient custom of holding winter carnivals during a full week at major centres in which the entire communities combine, add to the festive atmosphere. Snowshoe races, sled dog races, skating and skiing races, torchlight parade, etc., dot the calendar. The most famous of these carnivals are those at the rival centres of Ste. Adele and Ste. Agathe.

Bleak Future Predicted For Shipyards

MONTREAL (CP) — Shipbuilders have predicted a bleak future for Canadian Great Lakes yards which, they said, now have completed modernizing fleets of several inland shipping companies started at the close of the Second World War.

Virtually no orders were on hand for the Ontario yards employing about 3,000 workers and the lifeline of at least two cntres, Midland and Collingwood.

Spokesmen said St. Lawrence river yards do not face the same future immediately but that late 1954 may bring the transfer of thousands of workers now employed in ship construction to other industries.

NAVAL CONTRACTS HELP

Naval contracts were sufficient to keep most of the 6,000 shipbuilders in Quebec at work during the coming year.

However, opening of the St. Lawrence seaway would open a new era in Canadian shipbuilding history.

Shipbuilders also said they will continue to urge abolition of present laws which permit foreign-flag vessels to trade between Canada and the United States in the Great Lakes area.

At present, Dutch, German and Norwegian freighters are active in Great Lakes trade.

Longest Pipe Line Has Begun Operation

SARNIA (CP) — The world's longest oil pipe line began operation Friday with the arrival here of the first crude from Alberta to make the entire 1,770-mile trip entirely by pipe line.

The Interprovincial Pipe Line Company, builders of the line, said it will provide continuous year-round movement of crude oil from Alberta to Ontario refineries.

Construction of a 30-inch section of the line over the 645 miles between Sarnia and Superior, Wis., was completed in November. Since then it has been tested and filled with about 3,000,000 barrels of oil. The entire line from the Redwater oil fields north of Edmonton now holds almost 6,000,000 barrels.

Ultimate capacity is 300,000 barrels a day, but company officials say more pumping stations will be needed between Superior and Sarnia before that capacity can be reached.

OK INCO Application

BRUSSELS (Reuters)—The Brussels Bourse committee has decided to recommend that Belgium's finance minister accept the application of International Nickel Company of Canada Limited for admission to its official list. Admission is sought for bearer certificates issued by the Belgium Overseas Corporation Limited and guaranteed by the Banque Lambert.

Asks Faith Renewed In Canada In 1954

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — W. J. Borrie, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce told the Ontario Chamber Friday we must all renew our faith in Canada during 1954.

He spoke to the closing luncheon of the 42nd annual meeting of the group.

"We need a fair volume of intestinal fortitude thise year and any year," said Mr. Borrie.

He expressed faith in the future of Canada. He said she is strong in scientific advance, in an increasing population, in natural resources and in economic organization.

Mr. Borrie said he believes the standard of living was not destined to level off in 1953 and will continue to rise.

Police Recover Stolen $15,000 Cloth

TORONTO (CP) — Cloth valued at $15,000, which police say was stolen last week-end in Galt, was recovered Friday in a garage at the rear of a west-end home. The cloth was in 106 bolts.

A rear door of premises of Fromm Brothers Design Company in Galt was forced and tire marks indicated a truck was used to haul the loot away, Galt police said. The robbery was discovered Jan. 4.

The investigation is continuing.

Admit Breath Test As Court Evidence

TORONTO (CP)—A breath test to determine the amount of alcohol in an accused person's blood was admitted as evidence Friday for the first time in an Ontario court.

The breath test was given by a device known as a "drunkometer." In the test, the suspect blows into a balloon and the air in the balloon is then analyzed for alcoholic content.

Dr. Ward Smith, police chemist, testified the test showed Hearn had 1.82 parts of alcohol in his blood, enough to make a man intoxicated.

Belleville Man New Commander

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Sqdn. Ldr. G. W. Thompson, a native of Belleville, has been appointed commanding officer of the newly-formed No. 3049 RCAF Technical Training Unit (auxiliary), it was announced Friday.

Sqdn. Ldr. Thompson served in the Second World War as a bomber pilot and has been with No. 420 City of London Auxiliary Squadron here since 1949.

The new training unit, one of seven in Canada, will train tradesmen for the City of London Squadron and give advanced instruction to student trainees. The unit will total about 200 persons, staff and trainees, including 10 or 12 officers from the regular force and the auxiliary squadron.

Advertising Volume Will Set Record

TORONTO (CP) — Total advertising volume for all media will set a record this year if present plans of many Canadian national advertisers are realized, the trade publication Marketing says.

It said it is estimated 53 per cent of national advertisers will spend more than last year, 39 per cent will spend the same and three per cent will spend less, while four per cent are undecided.

Practically all media will share in the increase, with daily newspapers and direct mail leading, closely followed by magazines, radio, television and farm and business papers.

Sees No Possibility Of Federal District

OTTAWA (CP)—Mayor Charlotte Whitton said Friday Ottawa will become a federal district "when bananas grow on white pine trees."

She told reporters that formation of a federal district for Canada's capital, similar to the United States' District of Columbia, was "absolutely impractical" unless neighboring Hull, Que., was included.

"We have two sides of a river to think of, two different provinces, two different law codes. . . I can't see the Ontario or Quebec government neutralizing the Ottawa area to form any kind of a buffer zone on the river."

Didn't Start Hitch-Hiking Can't Pay Fine, Bell In Jail

He's in jail, unable to pay a $27 fine for a recent accident in which his truck smashed into another vehicle.

Bell was to leave with his wife Margaret and sons Wayne, 3, and Jay, 2, thumbing to the Maritimes after an unsuccessful year in British Columbia.

RCMP said Bell's fine was $27 or 10 days in Oakalla prison farm "so he'll be with us until he satisfies the Queen."

"I haven't got 27 cents, let alone $27," Bell told the Canadian Press. "I've got a couple of cigarettes—that's all.

"We were all packed to leave this morning, but it looks like that's off."

LIVING IN CABIN

His wife and children were "back home" waiting for him, he said—"back home" being an isolated auto court cabin some distance from this Fraser valley centre, 25 miles south of Vancouver.

Bell originally announced his hitch-hiking intentions to a reporter last week, listing a series of mishaps which had befallen the family in British Columbia.

The publicity netted $60 in donations collected by a blind woman in Vancouver, the offer of a job by a Vancouver island contractor and a "Bring Home the Bells" fund started by radio station CJCH in Halifax.

Bell announced he was accepting the job and the radio station returned the donations. Then he advised the position "wasn't as good as it looks," and that, broke and discouraged, he would accept all the assistance he could get to land him and his family back in Nova Scotia.

Number of Households Up By 232,000 Since 1951

OTTAWA (CP)—The number of households in Canada jumped by 232,000 in the 27-month period following the 1951 census and more and more homes gained electricity, furnaces, refrigerators and other conveniences.

The bureau of statistics today compared the findings of a special survey taken last September with the housing situation at June, 1951, shown in the last census.

The number of households increased to 3,641,000 in that interval. About 73 per cent of the increase was in single, detached homes and more than two-thirds of the total dwellings were owned by their occupants.

Ontario and Quebec accounted for nearly two-thirds of the total increase with additions of 85,000 and 66,000 respectively, bringing the number of households to 1,266,000 in Ontario and 925,000 in Quebec.

The bureau also reported "substantial advances" in labor-saving household conveniences.

91 PER CENT ELECTRIFIED

Households supplied with electricity totalled 3,335,000 by last September—91 per cent of the total and a 12.4-per-cent increase since June, 1951.

Dwellings using oil for heating increased sharply during the period to 1,260,000 from 774,000, and those using gas to 229,000 from 163,000. The number using coal or coke declined to 1,304,000 from 1,469,000, and those using wood declined to 799,000 from 951,000.

Coal was still the leading fuel in Nova Scotia, Ontario, Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

Homes with hot and cold water supply jumped to 2,278,000 from 1,940,000. There were still 1,285,000 households without bath or shower—a drop from 1,336,000 in 1951.

About 29 per cent more kitchens were equipped with electric ranges—an increase to 1,261,000.

MANY REFRIGERATORS

About two-thirds of all households had mechanical refrigerators last September—2,415,000 as against 1,595,000 in 1951. Homes with washing machines increased to 2,985,000 from 2,472,000, those with vacuum cleaners to 1,748,000 from 1,414,000, with radios to 3,511,000 from 3,144,000, and with telephones to 2,434,000 from 2,028,000.

The bureau found 373,000 homes with television sets last September and said the number has increased sharply since then.

Households with automobiles rose to 1,899,000 from 1,443,000, leaving slightly less than half without a motor car.

Merger For The Gas Pipe

The Alberta Government has ruled that Alberta natural gas is to be shipped to eastern provinces, and through Canadian territory. The Ottawa Government has held the threat of an export-import ban over the parties to ensure that Ontario and Quebec markets will be served by the Canadian natural gas. Both governments encouraged the merger of the two competing Canadian companies planning to pipe gas east. This amalgamation has now been brought about. Trans-Canada Pipe Lines and Western Pipe Lines will together as one company, build the pipe line which will bring Alberta's natural gas to Ontario. Thus the high-powered dispute for the franchise and over the route seems to have been ended. It will, however, be several years before Peterborough can tap into the line, for the project is very great, both physically and in cost. It will be the longest pipe-line in the world and will cost hundreds of millions of dollars.

* * *

It may seem odd that Canadian governments are officially discouraging competition and have insisted on a big merger. Has Canada not enough combines already? No. This one more is practically essential. The job is too big to allow two firms to compete against each other, and break each other's backs. The Canadian economy is unlike the American in this respect: its smallness makes competition sometimes unwise and impossible. Our history has shown time and again that only by combining forces can some major jobs be done. Separately the enterprises break as did the many railway companies whose merger was finally effected into the C.N.R. system, after most of them had been bankrupted. Together they have strength.

* * *

One possible flaw in this merger could be that neither company will now have to abide by its promises and the prospects held out to towns like Peterborough, for the new company does not automatically take on the pledges of the two old ones. Here in Peterborough a representative of one of them told us that Alberta gas, through their pipe line, would be cheaper than the gas now available, and he held out the lure that the gas could reach this city within three years. We shall have to wait and see what the new company does.

A Civic Service Wanted And Not Wanted

The Nursing Registry of Peterborough is a sort of a civic foundling; a war-baby which nobody wants to take in. It is one of the border-line organizations fulfilling a community need but is not innately a responsibility of the community.

The Registry registers all nurses in the city and its principal use is to tell people who want them where nurses can be found. Doctors, hospitals and private citizens telephone the Registry and ask for a nurse. The Registry consults its register and tries to fill the request immediately. During the course of a year the Registry answers some 21,000 general calls for service and medical information, apart from the requests of doctors and hospitals. This would seem to prove that the Registry is necessary. It is certainly a convenience. What is not clear is who should pay for it? (The annual expense of operating the Registry is a little more than $5,000.)

Should the nurses finance it themselves? Do they not secure work through it? Yes, but nurses do not need the Registry in order to get patients, because there is more work for them than there are nurses. Should the doctors pay for it? Is it not primarily a service to them? Their patients need a nurse, the Registry may supply one. Doctors generally assume, however, that getting a nurse is not their job; the patient's relatives should do it. Should patients pay for it, as part of their medical expenses; a fee for every call to the Registry? Patients and many citizens generally, feel that their doctor or the hospital should get the nurse. Should the hospitals maintain the Registry? The hospitals can reply that a private nurse for a patient is not a staff nurse, and therefore, securing her is not a hospital responsibility. Is the Registry a sort of charitable organization? Should the Community Chest sponsor it?

These questions are not being affirmatively answered in the city, and so, the Registry will close in the middle of March unless the sum of $1,800 is made available to it, or guaranteed by next Friday. This is the approximate amount of the annual deficit incurred, after income from the hospitals and doctors subscribing to its telephone answering service, and receipts from volunteers who hold benefit teas and the like in order to support the organization.

St Joseph's hospital made a grant of $200. The Civic Hospital, disallowed by statute from making grants because it is itself in receipt of grants, pays a fixed sum for each filled call it makes to the Registry. (This amounted last year, to December 15th, to $493.) Subscribing doctors, nurses and nursing assistants (the Registry undertakes also [illegible] 'practical' nurses) [illegible] the bulk of the Registry's funds.

It seems everybody wants the service but nobody feels it is his responsibility to pay for it. Under these circumstances the precarious existence of the Registry will cease; so it should. It is unfair to the people trying to run the service to be in this bewildering and depressing financial situation. If, however, enough organizations and people think the Registry is good and essential (and we are among those who do), the finances of the Registry should be lifted above personal and monetary squalls and set in smooth ways. The people to do it are the ones in a position to know that the service has a perennial public value. They are those to whom the Registry's Board of Directors addressed its memorandum on the irreducible alternatives: to close, or to get a guarantee of $1,800. They are the City Council, the two hospitals, the Community Chest — and also the local Medical and Nursing professional associations. Surely representatives of these can come together and decide in one meeting their respective areas of financial obligation, make allotments and set the Registry respectably on its feet.

For want of a nail the horse and battle were lost. For want of only $1,800 the Nursing Registry will be lost. . . The nursery story does not tell us, by the way, if the horse was worth saving or the battle worth winning.

Car Business

In his review of the condition of the Canadian automobile — printed elsewhere on this page — Mr. William Wecker, president of General Motors, is carefully optimistic about this year's business. It is good to know this, since the automobile industry in all its parts has become so important to the economy of the country as to be a barometer of conditions generally.

Mr. Wecker remarks about taxation that "our automotive industry continues to carry a very heavy and disproportionate share of the load". We agree that the sales and excise taxes on cars are heavy, but is this not partly because the industry is so big and profitable, producing so many millions of dollars' worth of cars? We cannot agree that the taxes are "disproportionate". The real disproportion is in the protection this industry gets from outside competition through tariffs.

In its early years Canadian car manufacturers probably needed tariff protection in order to operate in the limited markets of this counrty. Without it, the American industry would have swamped Canadian manufacturers. But now, after half a century, the industry should be able to stand on its own feet. If it cannot, surely it is uneconomic to manufacture cars in Canada at all. (Incidentally, there are now no Canadian car manufacturers. Every company manufacturing automobiles in Canada has an American parent company).

Taxes on motor vehicles are not the sole reason that cars are expensive in Canada. Another is the duties against imported cars. These are so heavy that the Canadian industry can charge $300 to $1,000 more than for the same car of American manufacture. Customs duty on imported cars is 17½ per cent. Excise taxes on cars are fifteen per cent and a sales tax is ten per cent. Mr. Wecker talks about disproportionate taxes; he does not mention disproportionate tariff protection.

Fat Soldiers

Judging by their pay schedules (the highest in the world), their extensive travels, their tickets of leave, their comfortable quarters, the services provided them (even tailors, to sew regimental patches on their sleeves) and the recreation offered, Canadian soldiers are living off the fat of the land, whatever land they are in. So are sailors and airmen. Physical evidence is their condition when they come home on leave. Recently we carried a news photograph of three young men back from Germany, eager to re-enlist for service in Korea. The three had three chins each and their bodies were as wide as a barn door. One Quebec fellow admitted that he had put on eighty pounds during his tour in Germany. Too much assault on the dinner table, too little on the obstacle course? More quaffing and lounging than swatting and sweating?

Commonwealth Finance Meeting

By WILLIAM FITTER

AUSTRALIAN officials are warning the public not to expect sensational developments from the British Commonwealth Finance Ministers conference which is being held here from January 8 to January 15. They emphasize that this is not a "panic" conference called to meet some sudden Commonwealth economic crisis but a routine meeting of the Commonwealth's "company directors" to review the state of trade and like [illegible] for the year ahead but for the next five or ten years.

✧ ✧ ✧

NO DOUBT behind this facade of "naturalness" there will be a good deal of plain speaking and horse trading, but no drastic alteration of the present trading relations between the Commonwealth partners or of over-all Commonwealth financial policy is expected.

✧ ✧ ✧

THIS is the first Commonwealth Finance Conference to be held in Australia. It is being held in Sydney's leading hotel—the Hotel Australia—and will be under the chairmanship of the Australian Prime Minister, Mr. R. G. Menzies, assisted by the Federal Treasurer, Sir Arthur Fadden. Normally international conferences are held in the serene, pastorial quiet of Canberra, the national capital and seat of government, but a science congress taking place at the same time has taxed accommodation there to capacity.

✧ ✧ ✧

THAT IS probably just as well. The overseas illusion that Australia is exclusively a pastoral country dies hard and their brief stay in industrialised Sydney, with visits to the neighbouring steel towns of Newcastle, Wollongong and Port Kembla, will help the delegates to see this country in truer perspective. Although it is not a necessary part of the conference's scope, Australian Ministers and business leaders are welcoming this opportunity of showing and telling the Commonwealth delegates, especially the United Kingdom contingent headed by the Chahcellor of the Exchequer, Mr. R. A. Butler, something of their country. They feel that first-hand knowledge of the various countries which make up the Commonwealth and their peculiar problems and natural advantages —which cannot be gained if all the Commonwealth conferences are held in London—is essential for mutual understanding and a reasonably scientific development of the Commonwealth's resources.

✧ ✧ ✧

FOR INSTANCE, it is widely felt in Australia that Whitehall and the United Kingdom business world generally do not fully appreciate Australia's peculiar budgetary position which depends on the export price of one commodity—wool—more than does the economy of any other country. When the wool prices soars, as it did two years ago, the national income soars, Australia's sterling balances in London go sky high and the net result is a marked increase in imports from Britain. When the wool price drops, it is the other side of the penny and the Government is forced to impose drastic import restrictions to maintain solvency. British exporters in the past have not taken kindly to the resultant disruption of their trading.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT IS felt, too, that there is still much misconception in Britain of Australia's organization towards the United States. It is not easy for an Englishman to appreciate that Australia's desire for more trade with the U.S. and for closer links with the U.S. in the Pacific does not imply any desire to weaken Empire trade preferences or sever the blood ties that brought Australia to Britain's side automatically in two world wars.

✧ ✧ ✧

THESE and associated problems will not figure on the conference agenda, but they will be discussed by the delegates with the politicians, business leaders and professional men they will meet and that experience, it is felt, must have beneficial results. Similarly, there will be a further broadening of the Commonwealth outlook when the next conference is held in India, Pakistan or one of the other Commonwealth countries. The Sydney talks will, of course, be held in private. So far no agenda has been issued, but it is known that the general discussions will fall under four main heads. First there will be a general stocktaking of the Commonwealth's financial position since the last conference. Secondly, progress towards the goal of free convertibility of sterling will be studied. It is felt here, however, that convertibility depends so much upon what tariff concessions the United States is prepared to make that until Washington's intentions are clearer—as they will be later this year when the current examination of American tariffs is completed—little progress is possible.

✧ ✧ ✧

FROM this point the conference is expected to analyse recent hints of a possible trade recession in the United States and to chart a course to off-set any likely detrimental effects within the Commonwealth.

✧ ✧ ✧

FINALLY, and this is where it is felt here the conference can do most good, the delegates will discuss integrated Commonwealth economic development. There has been a noticeable quickening of Australian interest and business leaders seemed to think that if somebody could be found to wave a wand and bring about free sterling-dollar convertibility overnight, all the Commonwealth's troubles would be over. They may still cling to that belief, just as they do not publicly deny the existence of Santa Claus, but there is a growing school of thought which says that, short of magic, the best way to achieve convertibility is to build up the Commonwealth into a far stronger and more independent trading unit than it is today, to meet the United States on an equal economic footing.

The Canadian Automobile Industry, 1953

By WILLIAM A. WECKER, O.B.E.
(President, General Motors of Canada)

Canada's car and truck output for 1953 approximated 500,000 vehicles. It is the first time Canadian automobile manufacturers have been able to approach closely the half million mark. The previous production record, achieved in 1952 with 433,000 cars and trucks, was exceeded by 12 per cent in setting the new total of 485,000.

Analysis of the high-level operation of this industry in 1953 reveals some significant facts. First and most important was that there were no serious interruptions in production programmes, no curbs on raw materials, no strikes, and no changes in credit regulations or federal taxes. These factors are mentioned because the record shows how important they can be, either singly or together, in confining output and market.

For instance the year 1951 started out with 250,000 units built by the automobile industry in the first six months. Then came credit restrictions, a sharp advance in sales and excise taxes, which together with a lessening of the availability of steel, forced a cut in production schedules for the domestic market. Employment fell off and a year which might otherwise have boasted an output of 500,000 units, ended with little or no advance over the previous year. It was not a true picture of the growing Canadian market.

By contrast, the year just closed has presented a very accurate reflection of Canada's automobile needs. All of the increased production was for Canadian consumption; the number of cars and trucks for export showed no appreciable gain. As might be expected the number of motor vehicles in use in Canada increased from 3,157,000 in 1952 to an estimated 3,500,000 at the end of 1953.

The year saw a tremendous rate of expansion of the production facilities which are necessary for the industry to keep pace with its growing role in our national economy. In the period ending with December 1954, it is estimated that "Big Three" Canadian automotive manufacturers alone will have completed new-building projects costing $125,000,000.

Expansion of the industry in output and facilities implies also an expansion of the working force. Here again the figures are revealing. In 1953 the estimated total payroll of the automobile manufacturing industry was $145,000,000 as against $132,000,000 in the preceding year. This reflects the steady growth of the great family of automobile workers in the Dominion.

This figure, of course, takes no account of the payrolls in the many Canadian industries which act as suppliers of automotive components, and of the hundreds of thousands of workers who in greater or less degree draw income indirectly from the field of automotive transportation.

Canadian motorists continued this year to demonstrate their natural basic preference for the domestic automobile, designed and manufactured as it is specifically for operating conditions and demands of the North American climate and conditions. Imports of transatlantic types continued the levelling-off process which began with the easier availability of domestic cars and trucks several years ago.

In the field of taxation, our automotive industry continues to carry a very heavy and disproportionate share of the load. Excise tax on motor vehicles rose in 1953 from $70,000,000 to an estimated $86,000,000, and sales tax from $68,000,000 to $84,000,000. Some relief from this great and growing burden is overdue. Viewing the motor vehicle in its proper modern light as an essential item in our expanding economy, it would seem logical not to discriminate against it in any fiscal sense.

Given a clear field in 1954, the Canadian auto industry will keep pace with the growing country, serving an expanding market and contributing to a wide section of the populace which looks to the motor car industry, either directly or indirectly, for its livelihood.

Letters To The Editor

BUS TROUBLE

SIR: In your paper of January 7th, the Major Hoople cartoon appearing in the comic section would be quite true if it referred directly to the Peterborough Bus Lines.

On this date four adults and two small children waited at the corner of Brown St. and Monaghan Rd. from 4:55 p.m. until 5:35 for a south-bound bus. At 5:20 the Monaghan Rd. bus came along, stopped to let fares off but refused to let these people on although one of them knocked on the door to be admitted. The bus was not crowded. The Byersville bus came along at 5:35.

Perhaps the Monaghan bus driver thought they were all going down town and therefore should take a Byersville bus. However one woman lives on McKellar St. near Monaghan Rd. so naturally she wanted this particular bus. When she got down town to transfer from the Byersville to a Monaghan it did not wait for transfers and she was forced to take a George St. bus to Park and McKellar streets and walk the extra distance to her home. All this on a very cold evening.

I myself having missed a Byersville at the Brown St. stop have boarded a Monaghan S. and been told that I must pay double fare if going down town. At the same time the bus company apparently thinks it is all right for people to stand until nearly frozen for over thirty minutes waiting for a bus. To me it seems a very one-sided affair.

I think the city council would do well if they demanded better bus service before granting or renewing the bus company's franchise.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,
"FED UP WITH THE BUS SERVICE"

FILM BAN IGNORES MINORITY RIGHTS

Sir: Your editorial on the film on Martin Luther being banned in the province of Quebec was interesting, and thought provoking, but many people will not agree with you. Surely this an arbitrary action of a powerful religious majority, which ignores the wishes of a not insignificant minority. There are 400,000 Protestants in the Montreal area alone.

Good biographical films are one of the finest ways to teach adults and boys and girls about the outstanding figures of the past. Martin Luther's contribution to his age and succeeding ages makes him a figure who should be better known, particularly by all in the Protestant tradition. No one need see a movie against his will and the interpretation of a great man's life may not appeal to some movie goers. But those who desire to do so, should have the privilge of seeing an outstanding biographical film.

In Article 19 of the Declaration of Human Rights it states clearly that everyone has the right to freedom of opinion and expression; this right includes freedom to hold opinions without interference and to seek, receive and impart information and ideas through any media and regardless of frontier. Mr. Editor, is not the Quebec ban on this film a denial of this article?

Good can come out of evil, even the evil of a religious distatorship. It is possible that this action of Quebec will open the eyes not just of Orangemen, but of all Protestants, to the kind of life a Protestant minority must lead if a Catholic majority have the upper hand. Because of the natural curiosity of independent individuals in a democratic country, this very banning of the Martin Luther film may greatly increase the number of people who make a point of seeing it in other provinces.

Sincerely,
"CITIZEN".

Unique Trust Brought City From Bust To Boom, Kept It Afloat A Century

(This is the first of several articles on the City Trust, the unique Peterborough institution which gave Peterborough financial stability for nearly a century. Mr. Theobald, the Examiner's veteran city hall reporter, will discuss the Trust development in his subsequent articles on this page.)

By HARRY THEOBALD

Peterborough's long record of municipal credit has been [illegible] council of 1861.

By special legislation that year the council established the Peterborough Town Trust with authority to repay money borrowed by debentures issued by the council for the proper purposes of the corporation.

This special Act limited the sources of credit, directed the Commission to make annual levy the council for liquidation of the municipality's loans, and provided other checks and safeguards which were set out in the municipality's private bill.

The Commission was also given the management of the property owned by the municipality with authority to rent it, collect rental [illegible] buildings in repair [illegible] and was required to make accounting of all its financing in an annual statement to the council.

This winding up of a stewardship of close to a century was anticipated by the council of last year with a definiteness that was previously expected some time before the city's administration was transferred to the new city hall.

SINKING FUND ESTABLISHED

The special Act had directed that debenture loans were to be repaid by sinking fund. That was a calculated annual sum which at the maturity of the debentures would amount to their principal. Terms of the loans in time were usually from ten to thirty years. A longer term was conceivable, but on the other hand municipal practice has been limited, by virtual corporate bankruptcy of some municipalities during the depression, to not more than 20 years by the Ontario Municipal Board.

Interest on the bonds and the annual requirement for the sinking fund were sums collected from the council each year by the Commission.

That was the old method of financing the town's indebtedness. Short term loans could be arranged at the bank. People who bought debentures for investment were generally not interested in them.

CHANGED SYSTEM

Some years ago, the city council decided to change to what is called the serial type of debenture which pays annually the interest and part of the principal. The annual payment on a $1,000 debenture was computed actuarily according to the period of years for repayment. Thereby that principal would be annually reduced and wiped out in the last year of the debenture term.

That method obviated the responsibility of the Trust. Sinking fund debentures have been maturing, and new borrowing has been by serial bonds. So, the special duties of the Trust have been gradually approaching finality, and today only a remnant of the old bonds remains.

Meanwhile, the Trust was permitted to invest its accumulating sinking fund monies in a limited class of bonds or debentures, provincial and federal government issues, municipal debentures, Hydro-Electric borrowing, and so on. The element of risk was excluded as far as possible.

TRUST OBTAINED INCOME

By investing its sinking fund in bonds, the Trust obtained an income which gradually swelled that fund. It was from such returns through the years that the Trust built up substantial surplus credit capital from which it was able to make grants to the council from time to time. Examples of such contributions are recalled from Trust assistance in financing the new city hall and Civic Hospital.

Debentures, after all, are promissory notes, bearing interest to the lender. Factors sustaining credit, municipal and otherwise, include prompt payment of the principal on the due date. Peterborough's promissory notes have all been met during the 93 years of the Trust's stewardship. Sinking fund investment earnings became extra capital which the Trust turned over to the municipality, in time of need.

That is not a complete outline of the work of the City Trust Commission. It managed Peterborough's civic properties until a comparatively few years ago when the council transferred that supervision to City Clerk Outram whom it made manage in their stead.

MEMBERS

The members of the original Commission, appointed by council in 1861, were: James Stevenson, Samuel Dickson, Edmund Chamberlen, William Hall and Charles Bradfield.

Their final successors were: Vincent Eastwood, chairman; James Hamilton, Thomas C. Ephgrave and James E. Gillespie. The fifth member had been the late A. A. McIntyre.

The council did not appoint a commissioner at the death of Mr. McIntyre because dissolution of the Trust was approaching.

THE 1861 ACT

The purpose and the scope of the private bill establishing the Peterborough City Trust Commission was published in the weekly Examiner of April 25, 1861.

Its preamble began with this identifying introduction: "Copy of the Act to consolidate the debt of the town of Peterborough, and to authorize the issue of debentures on the security of the town property, and for other purposes."

The text proceeded: "Whereas the corporation of the town of Peterborough has incurred debts amounting to $86,400 for subscription of stock to the Port Hope, Lindsay and Beaverton Railway, for the erection of a school house, and for other local improvements in the town. . . .

"And is desirous of incurring further liability of $18,200 for the completion of the purchase of land south of Townsend St. and east of Park St for the erection of an engine house and lock-up, and for the building of a new town hall and the Corporation has petitioned to have all the said debts and liabilities consolidated, and that debentures may

Eight-Sided Ornament Of Our Bench

By A. J. THOMAS

Some time ago I went to dinner with eight distinguished Peterborough men and his wife, my hostess.

The eight were so remarkable in their various parts that a short sketch of their careers must not be denied readers of this newspaper whose motto is "Humani Nihil A Me Alienum Puto." Indeed, the eight gentlemen might themselves fittingly have it as their personal motto for [illegible] could truly say [illegible] concerns humanity is foreign to me."

My hostess at dinner that evening, a gentle lady of refinement and an English-Victorian accent (she comes from Victoria, B.C.), put me immediately at ease in the company. My host was a quiet-talking, grey-haired gentleman, slight of build, lean, with a hint of asceticism in his countenance. He was affable and smiled easily, though somewhat in the inverted way of a scholar smiling when his mind is titillated. He poured me a sherry before dinner and ensured that all the persons present were adequately supplied with potables during and after the meal.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

This was the first gentleman with whom I dined. His eyes seemed tired after an arduous day—and full days' work are not uncommon with him. But as I was to discover later, he does manage to make time for leisure. His summer pastime is yachting. His interest in this is intense; as a matter of fact his enthusiasms are so many and various that they belie the disciplined quiet of his manner.

Last summer he brought his sailing boat from Toronto through Lake Ontario up the Trent system to the Kawarthas. He sails every possible weekend, right to the bleak days of November. His vessel, the "Crusader," is now tied up at Bobcaygeon, waiting for next spring's exploration of the upper Kawartha waters. It is a handsome ornament to them—the largest sailing boat on our lakes.

"Skipper," as his crew call him, thinks these lakes ideal for sailing, especially Pigeon Lake, and is much surprised that the art and sport of sailing is not indulged in more than it is here. He believes that the Kawarthas offer a great opportunity to sailors and that in the near future they will be a Mecca of sail. (The metaphor is no more incongruous than the present local disregard for sailing.)

Well, that is Gentleman No. 1 at the dinner party. I shall itemize the other seven. (2) A British Columbian fruit farmer who helped establish the first fruit co-operative union in that province. (3) A lawyer, member of a notable Toronto firm. (4) A championship tennis and badminton player. (5) An expert in the supply of munitions who wrote a secret textbook on the subject for the Department of National Defence. (6) A painter, member of the Ontario Society of Artists and two of whose paintings are in the National Gallery of Canada. (7) A writer of thrillers, sufficiently good to merit the attention of Punch reviewer. (8) A judge.

No. 8 gives an unmistakable clue to the name of all, for he, the eighth gentleman at the dinner table, has become so well known to and identified with Peterborough in the year and a half since he has been in the district that many of his capacities are known to Peterborough denizens. The eight notable gentlemen at table at the upper Weller Street home were a small company of one: John de Nevarre Kennedy, Officer of the British Empire (OBE), Local Judge of the High Court of Justice for Ontario; Judge in the County Court of the County of Peterborough, by Royal Warrant.

EARLIER VISITS

Although Judge Kennedy has occupied the bench at Peterborough for little more than a year, he is not a stranger to this district. He first came to the Kawarthas, and to admire this area, as a summer visitor and yachtsman long before the last war; to Balsam Lake at Kirkfield, where Lady Mackenzie had established Kirkfield Inn as a winter and summer resort. Lady Mackenzie was the widow of Sir William Mackenzie, of the Mackenzie and Mann contracting firm which did much of the CPR building.

A full report on Judge Kennedy's various careers and facets is beyond the scope of this profile of him. Some highlights reflect casually from his conversation and personality, to cast illumination upon the high and lifted-up figure in silk gown who presides on the Court House hill, surrounded by the traditional authority and dignity of British justice.

This, then, is one of the most remarkably-endowed men ever to sit on the Peterborough bench. Despite his honours and his activities—and perhaps, a little because of them—he is a man of good humour; a twinkle is never far from his eye, nor a dry quip from his lips. Yet on the bench he is serious and earnest. Rarely has there been a Peterborough judge so painstakingly deliberate and meticulously thorough.

FARMER

Judge Kennedy was born in London, England. He attended the famous Westminster school there and Trinity College, Cambridge, taking a law degree. So fortified, he emigrated to Canada and began to farm. His fruit farm was near Vernon, B.C.

Perhaps Judge Kennedy might still have been farming (or might have retired on a farming fortune) had he not soon found from hard experience that it was "silly to go to farm 3,000 miles away from your market." In an attempt to solve this problem of distance the Vernon Fruit Union was organized and in this enterprise he took a leading part.

Before the Union, fruit farmers in the B.C. valleys sold their produce in the East through middlemen. There was a constant gypping — under-grading on carload lots, depreciated prices, big profits for the middle-man, small ones for the producer. The co-operative was its own middleman.

Judge Kennedy now remarks that co-operative selling, as organized, was an excellent thing, for the producer (who got his rightful profits) and for the consumer, for the Co-op insisted on high standards of packaging and grading.

Each fruit farmer bought a $100 share. A manager was appointed. Under the system a producer sold his fruit to the union. On delivery the farmer got a third of the estimated selling price. The fruit (chiefly apples) was then marketed and at the end of the season the balance of the price got was paid to the farmer.

Unions soon had their selling agents all over Canada and as far away as the United Kingdom. The Vernon Fruit Union was copied by many others. Unions established grades and packed honestly and in accordance with them. So the purchaser knew exactly what he was getting—instead of the old barrel with the biggest and brightest apples on top and the rest scrub.

In those days fruit-farmer Kennedy had 40 acres of orchards in the White Valley between Vernon and Lumby, B.C. and a big range nearby. "A beautiful country, and very, very fertile." He farmed there for some five years, mixed farming, and "quite successfully."

RETURN TO LAW

Having established a sound economic basis to B.C. fruit farming, and through the exercise of his legal knowledge as well as experience, Judge Kennedy again heard the call of the law which he had left at Cambridge. He went to Victoria and was articled there, in order to gain admittance to the B.C. bar.

He qualified in B.C., married, and practised there for a time. Then he went to Port Arthur as liquidator of large mortgage company. It was a long time a-dying. The closing-off of the business took lawyer Kennedy to Toronto. He qualified for the Ontario bar, and the next few years carried on a general practice of law, as well as the liquidation of the mortgage company, the process which had taken him east.

Thereafter the Toronto firm of McDonnell, Mortimer and Kennedy was formed. McDonnell went on to the Appeal Court Bench. Other well-known lawyers, elevated in one phase or another to high public repute or office, became members of the firm. Judge Kennedy's name is only now being removed from its inner sanctums, as it must when salaried public office is accepted.

SPORT AND HONORS

Let me return briefly to the many sides of this Ornament of the Bench—a phrase never more exactly applied in Peterborough than to Judge Kennedy. He organized the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association and was its secretary for 20 years. He played in final championship matches. In badminton he was Canadian champion in mixed doubles and was runner-up in provincial singles tournaments.

At the beginning of 1940 he was called to Ottawa: The War Supply Board had to be abolished and a better organization established. He drew up the Act which incorporated the Department of Munitions and Supplies and was in charge of its legal division. In 1944 he was awarded the OBE. The citation in parchment is prefixed by the signature of the King, George R., and suffixed by the signature of the late Dowager Queen Mary (Mary R.) as Grand Master of the Order.

As a writer, Judge Kennedy has three works of fiction and one of history to his credit. A long unpublished novel, with wartime Ottawa as background, is lying in his files, awaiting revision. It runs to 200,000 words.

AS WRITER

Consequent upon his work in Ottawa during the war, he wrote a two-volume history of the Department of Munitions and Supplies. He says it was a work of "sweat and toil." The first two volumes are available to the public, through the Queen's Printer; Vol. 3 is on the secret list. It is "a text book for munitions production for the cold war and the next hot war" as one authority has described it.

In fiction—seemingly, like John Buchan's fiction, time off from more serious work—Judge Kennedy says with a smile that he wrote "the lowest types."

There came the thriller "In the Shadow of the Cheka." The author says of it: "a dreadful thing." Yet is won readers. He is a member of the Arts and Letters Club, on account of his painting. In the sanctum of this club he was joshed as a "dry-as-dust lawyer." He answered that lawyers have to be more imaginative than others. He was challenged. Bets were laid on the odds of his writing a book in three months about a country in which he had never set foot. So came "The Shadow of the Cheka," a thriller about the Russian secret police. The setting is in Petrograd. The Peterborough Public Library copy of this book has long been dog-eared.

Another work of light fiction is his "Crime In Reverse," in which the murderer is a lawyer, and the whole case unfolds backwards from the confessed criminal. The main character is going through a form of insanity. A noted British alienist read the manuscript to check on medical symptoms. This work of fiction is credited with being medically true to life; the main character does what the medicos would expect from him. The celebrated English magazine of humor, "Punch," commended it as light reading for medical students.

PAINTER

As already indicated, Judge Kennedy is a painter. He uses chiefly water-colors. "If you paint only as a hobby, a day here, a day there, it is the only medium you can use, because it dries quickly." His only daughter, who was married last fall, is a graduate of the College of Art, Toronto.

Judge Kennedy is a member of the Ontario Society of Painters in Water Color. He has exhibited in the OSA (Ontario Society of Artists), the Water Color Society, the Royal Canadian Academy, at the Canadian National Exhibition, and has two canvasses in the National Gallery, Ottawa.

Painting with Judge Kennedy is "entirely a hobby." He has had no schooling in painting, no formal instruction.

Two of his canvasses were shown last spring in the Public Library, Peterborough, when he was guest exhibitor with Peterborough painters.

A JUDGE'S WORK

What did this man of so many parts, and a successful law practice in an established Toronto firm, decide to come to Peterborough as County Court judge? He wanted to get out of a big place. The court work is "much more interesting than private practice; the variety of work which a county court judge has is simply terrific." It is "constructive" work, and not just for dollars, as in private practice. The work, according to Judge Kennedy, is semi-social and administrative. For example: adoption of babies, family disputes. It is a wide field, mixed up with everything "from legislation dealing with drains to the control of warble fly." He is currently arbitrating a dispute between the city and Mr. Klondike Gold Brown and his brothers, of Smith township, over annexed land.

He has a special interest in the function of probation of prisoners, in the reclamation of derelicts, in new social legislation, in care for the old and the down-and-out. And always an acute concern in sentencing men to be put behind bars. He is interested not in making the punishment fit the crime, but in making it fit the criminal.

One talks to Judge Kennedy in his out-of-work hours with danger to one's own spare hours. Un-

A-F-I-E-L-D with NICK NICKELS

A friend MacTavish remarked the other day as he hung up a new calendar:

"Ah, weel, it's back to parritch and auld claes."

Mac is so right. The holidays are over and it is back to the [illegible] grindstone for another [illegible] he speaks of "parritch" [illegible] with him; there [illegible] good hot bowl of these cold mornings after all the rich fare.

As for 'auld claes" (old ties, frayed shirts and run-over shoes) we are old, old friends. We may have sported the dapper look a few short days ago—when we boldly wore our Christmas gifts before they were returned for refund—but we find our old familiar things warm and comfortable.

It is a wonderful feeling these cold nights to put stocking feet in the oven and ponder on nothing too weightily.

Let's see. We have done a roundup of sports afield for 1953. We made no New Year resolutions and therefore do not feel guilty about breaking any. It is too early in the year to get worked up about predictions of any kind for '54, so, we turn out tattered slips from our fourteen pockets and see what we can piece together without too much effort.

Here is that clipping—"LETTER TO THE EDITOR"—from historian Howard Pammett of Ottawa in which he puts me in place in half a column of type about the derivation of the place-name BOB-CAYGEON.

It had no sooner appeared in the newspaper that night than I received a call from a friend over street who said we were both wrong. The village was named after a family by the name of Caygeon; Christian name, Robert, which was shortened to Bob. When I explained to him that it just couldn't be and that Pammett said it was BOB-CAJ-E-WON-UNK the poor chap thought I was swearing at him and hasn't given me a civil greeting since.

This bit is not from the tortured typewriter of an editorial writer with a holiday hangover for it goes on to tell of a man who remembers seeing pack horses along the snowy trails of northern British Columbia in 1919 wearing snowshoes. And he has snapshots to prove it.

This writer points out that snowshoes for pack horses are quite logical pieces of winter equipment. Don't men, he asks, wear spiked shoes for golf, track and mountain climbing and cleats for football and baseball? The article ends by pointing out what we have already observed for some time—horses rarely get off the farm these days because of snow-ploughed highways and less snow. Our snowfall cycle in Southern Ontario leads right to the next crumpled memo.

♠ ♠ ♠ ♠

LANDS AND FORESTS people are finding that snow conditions are a major factor in limiting the distribution and abundance of deer. This is no guess work on their part. They began operating 72 snow stations across the province last winter and came up with some very valuable information on the subject, such as:

—the depth of snow that begins to hinder the movement of deer.

Not too much snow assures good winter survival for deer and, given a healthy crop of fawns, populations will show substantial increases. These are the bare bones of the report.

♠ ♠ ♠ ♠

Canada is not the only country that gives farmers headaches at deer-hunting time, according to a little squib from Sweden. The trouble there is with the elk hunters. They pay for the privilege of shooting the animals but, like our own sportsmen, have trouble distinguishing elk from cattle. Apparently, according to this item, cattle are taking a terrific killing and farmers are the losers.

One farmer got so fed up he had all his cattle equipped with bullet-proof vests, probably in bright colors, just in case.

Fox hunters in Peterborough County did fairly well by themselves during the period from Dec. 1 to Jan. 4, when they brought 110 pelts to the Court House for bounty on Thursday.

Harvey Township led all the rest in production — twice as many pelts as Belmont, 35 and 18 respectively, followed by Ennismore, Otonabee, Smith, Asphodel, North Monaghan, Dummer and Douro.

RUGGED OUTDOORSMEN of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association held their first winter mass wolf hunt in the Kosh Lake country today. Evidence of vermin were seen earlier in the week in that area by Norm Bradley and conservation officer Stan Windsor. If they have any luck I will hear about it by breathless phone calls all weekend. If not, it will be hard to pry out any news of their outing. One way or t' other it will be duly reported by the press. The most violent arm-twisting didn't induce me to join the boys. I shall do my shooting at the woodbox, with paper darts.

Scores appearing here each week during the winter months indicate that there are some first-rate bowlers in Peterborough. Tourney director Toots Collins has been busy getting local and district alley twindlers lined up for the trail leading to the provincial championships of the National Bowling Council at the Sportsmen's Show in Toronto in March. It is the annual Molson's Classic with trophies and hefty cash prizes, and run on a national scale. Toots had a meeting earlier this week to set dates for regional finals in the liftlock area, same as last winter. Incidentally, the competition now has been enlarged to take in ladies' and men's singles, and mens' team, with handicap, thus for the average bowler.

* * * * * *

Assisting Mr. Collins in arranging the district playdowns are Alex Davidson and Mrs. Bea Ross of Oshawa, Vern Lockwood of Campbellford, and Al Garden of Lindsay. Scene of the scratch singles for men will be Campbellford on Feb. 20, after the ladies' singles in Oshawa on Feb. 13. Men's team roll takes place in Peterborough on Feb. 27. News of the big bowl-off has Turk Walton mauling the maples for a 243 average in two leagues. Half of the prize list of 10 grand goes to the men's team event. Turk won in this area last year. Geared for the average bowler, the competition calls for a handicap for any player to be 100 per cent of the difference between the player's average at Jan. 30 this year and a mark of 260.

What'll be Next

They do some peculiar things in the merry mayhem called pro wrestling. Latest idea is a tag team (two grapplers against two others) but with all four in the ring at once. Imagine the ring riot that is bound to ensue! Pity the poor ref or refs, if two are stuck in there with some half a ton or more of rough poundage on the move. Such an experiment will be tried here next Wednesday eve when Fred Atkins and Lord Athol Layton team up against Hombre Montana and Ilio DiPaolo (or is it DiPaulo?) in the main bout. All four will be permitted to mix it at the same time in the hempen enclosure, and the ringsiders had better give 'em lots of room. Semi-final has Johnny Barend meeting Johnny Harmon, as newcomer Jack Bence faces Alan Garfield in the prelim.

Quite a crowd braved cold weather last e'en to take in the Oshawa-Petes' senior "B" puck scrap at Civic, and they sure saw a sizzler. One of the best games we've viewed this season, and you won't often see keener action in NHL numbers. The Truckmen aren't well out in front of the group race by accident — they've got a lot of class. More credit then to the TPT-ers for their fine showing here last night in dumping 'em 4-1 and earning it all the way. Could have been a higher count but for some great goal-tending by Les Colvin. He and Goalie Jack Donlevy were brilliant between the pipes in every period. No fluke goals on either side, nor when one team was a man short. A clean, fast fixture with nifty pattern plays a feature.

In Second by a Point

The win hoists the Petes up into second place, just ahead of Orillia and Kingston. They trek to Belleville on Monday. Hard to pick stars on the local squad last p.m. as they all hustled throughout and made it a team effort. If someone twisted our arm and insisted on us naming outstanding players, we'd say the goalie and the defencemen. Petes were solid back of the blue line, though certainly not weak up front, either. Three of the defencemen were in on the scoring, also. Goals were by Hill, Leonard, Crowley and Montgomery, while Redmond and Hill had two assists each, and McMaster one. Hooper got the Oshawa one from Yourth and Sinden. Fans won't see many better games than that one, a 2-1 tilt till the final few minutes of play.

Five lively basketball games in the city last night, and one on tap this evening. It's Toronto Central "Y" seniors vs. the local male intermediate Regents in an 8:30 exhibition at St. Peter's gym. YM tilts next Tuesday: Test vs. Trojans, Orphuns vs. Apprentices. Collis colleens took over top spot in the YW with a 38-32 win o'er Black's, while Nurses just edged Lindsay lasses 32-31. Games next week: Collis vs. CGE, Black's vs. Nurses. At the Collegiate in school exhibitions, Doug Ash dropped one in with eight seconds left to give PCVS seniors a 52-50 triumph over St. Peter's. Len Mackey of the junior Saints scored with a second remaining to gain a 39-all tie with the PCI-ers. PCVS bantams won 44-27 from SPS.

BRUSH OR BROOM HOCKEY has become quite popular again in Haliburton, where two teams of five persons each need only an ice surface the size of a handball court to start a miniature Stanley Cup tournament. Here are two teams of forest rangers from the Ontario Forest Rangers' School near Dorset enjoying a game. One of the boys has gone to the ice after making a try on the goal.—(Federal Newsphotos).

Petes Beat Truckmen, 4-1 In Sizzling Puck Scrap To Climb Into Second Spot

Dishing up a dazzling brand of hockey before a good-sized home crowd last night, the TPT Petes defeated the league-leading Oshawa Truckmen 4-1 to climb over Orillia Pontiacs into second place in their OHA senior "B" group standing. Both sides flashed fine form throughout in a nip-and-tuck tussle, two of the Petes' goals coming in the final three minutes of play, Eddie Redmond's 1-0 lead in the tight first frame, each side scored once in the even middle chukker, and the Petes made sure of it with a couple of insurance markers in the dying minutes of a hot tilt. Play was lightning-fast from start to finish and quite clean, just three minor penalties being handed out to each side, none affecting the score.

PATTERN PLAY

Picture pattern plays were the rule in this encounter as the smart Truckers and scrappy Petes in turn fashioned quick passing thrusts that built up by their own blue line, swept speedily through the centre zone and broke on rival defences or in on top of the two goalies. The opposing net-minders were brilliant in every period as both had plenty to do. Les Colvin was probably the busiest man on the ice at times with the Petes piling in frequently and he robbed them time after time. Jack Donlevy was well-nigh perfect, but one goal getting by him all night, despite a flock of stabs at him.

The Petes' counters were by Bert Hill, Gus Leonard, Bill Crowley and Keith Montgomery, while Hill and Coach Eddie Redmond had two assists each, and bashing Bill McMaster one. The Oshawa marker was notched by Frank Hooper on a neat play with Maxie Yourth and Harry Sinden. Bill Crowley was shaken up considerably in the first when boarded, but returned to action later. Toodie Greenlaw shook off a sore leg later when hit by a mate's shot.

TAKE THE LEAD

McMaster went off early for kneeing but no damage was done in his absence. Petes later got a goal but it was on a cuff with the stick over the shoulder, and called back. The Leonard line pressed hard but Oshawa fought right back in speedy going and both goalies were tested frequently. Crowley went off hurt, but there was no boarding penalty. Wilson returned from an interference penalty, Colvin keeping Petes at bay. At 16:20, Bert Hill took a Redmond pass inside the blue-line, turned around and back-handed a high one which Colvin partly stopped, but it fell in over the line for a goal.

Early in the second Leonard took a pass from McMaster on a partial breakaway and made no mistake as he got in close to make it 2-0. Sinden went over for holding and Peterson followed for hooking, but both were back when Hooper scored for Oshawa on a partial breakaway on a play built up by Yourth and Sinden. He cannily picked the short side to sink the disc. Later Hooper served a hooking sentence and the Hill line should have had several but couldn't beat Colvin.

A HOT PERIOD

A Peterson-McMaster thrust was awfully close to open the third, and then Dafoe almost got one by Donlevy. It was hot and even, but clean throughout the period. Greenlaw was downed with a hot shot on the leg but recovered shortly. Petes had more chances but couldn't hit the hemp. Oshawa Truckers fought furiously the final 10 minutes in an attempt to tie it up, but homesters got the two goals of the stanza. After Fryia came close twice, Crowley slapped in a corner pass-out at point-blank range on a play with Hill and Redymond. The latter sat out a holding penalty and was back when Montgomery bulled his way in close to shove the rubber by Colvin on Hill's pass with less than 20 seconds to go. That was it.

MARMORA (ENS) — In an evenly fought game providing its quota of thrills, Marmora's TVL team accounted for its western neighbors, Havelock, on the home rink on Friday evening by the score of 7-5.

Bowler Dies

TORONTO (CP) — Charles Joseph Halford, 80, who won the Ontario singles lawn bowling championship in 1932, died Thursday. He was a member of the Canadian Lawn Bowling Club.

Collis, Nurses Take Frays In Girls' Loop

Collis's took over undisputed possession of first place in the Girls' City Basketball League at the YWCA last night by yanking out a 38-32 win over Black's. They had been tied for top spot previous to the game with six points each. Collis's play CGE next week as Black's meet Nurses. The nightcap last evening saw Nurses win 32-31 in a thriller over Lindsay.

The curtain-raiser was a tight enough tussle, too, as Collis's built up a 12-8 lead at the quarter, with each side sinking five points next heat to give Collis's a 17-13 halftime lead, Collis's leading 8-4 on the third and Black's driving hard to outscore them 15-13 in the fourth. Each side lost a player through personal fouls.

J. Dunk led the winners with 14 points as P. Stewart clicked for 12. W. Byers got five, B. Rumble and N. Rose three each, and M. McIlvena one. C. Bosnell dropped in six and R. Naylor four.

REALLY CLOSE

The other joust was really close. Nurses led 3-0 at the quarter and 11-8 after an 8-all second quarter called for a rest period. Nurses outscored Lindsay Neill's 8-5 in the third, but were outscored 8-4 in the keen fourth frame as Lindsay did everything but tie it up. Playing without a home gym has forced Lindsay to use the Armouries, without baskets, for practices. Nurses were off in their shooting in a rather rough fray. Each side lost a player through personals.

J. Bell was the big shot for the winners with 13 points, three each going to D. Mark and M. Flavelle, as two apiece were counted by P. Peryer and S. Frost. Topping Neill's was M. Owen with 10 points, D. Copp clicking for four, E. O'Brien three, and L. H. Humphries and M. Vanstone two each. Teams:

Collis's—B. Rumble, P. Stewart, N. Rose, J. Dunk, M. McIlvena, W. Byers.

Black's—C. Bosnell, M. Scanlon, E. McIlhagga, V. Barnett, C. Gibson, R. Naylor, R. Butcher.

Nurses—G. Chestnut, N. Heard, P. Peryer, D. Mark, J. Bell, M. Flavelle, S. Frost.

PCVS Wins Basketball Tilt With 8 Seconds To Play

Do you like your basketball close? If you do, try watching a few high school games this season; they aren't decided until the last second. Take for instance the senior game between PCVS and St. Peter's, High Friday night. Doug Ash won it for PCVS, 52-50, in the last eight seconds. Take also the junior game between the Saints and PCVS. Len Mackie gave the Saints a 39-all tie with the collegians, sinking the tying basket in the FINAL second. The third game wasn't so close, PCVS bantams winning 44-27 over the young Saints.

AHEAD EIGHT POINTS

Several times in the senior game, the Saints held five and six point margins over the collegians. In fact, early in the fourth quarter, after an 11-all first quarter, a 28-21 score for the Saints at the half, and a 41-36 margin at three-quarter mark, the Saints were ahead by eight points.

Zoltan Temesy's Garnet and Greys rallied, Bob Boorman finally putting PCVS ahead 42-41. From there until the last minute the lead see-sawed back and forth PCVS eventually taking a 50-47 lead. Quinlan sank a field basket and Jim Feeley a foul shot in the last 15 seconds, tying the score 50-all. Then with eight seconds to go Doug Ash drove in to sink a layup shot and the winning points.

FIVE FOULS AND OUT

Hilly Yudin's Saints' cause was hurt in the first half when star Doug Calvin left the game with five personal fouls. But Quinlan, Board and Ryan kept the Saints in the game. Meanwhile the collegians lost Terry Roberts with three minutes to go in the game.

Doug Ash led the scoring with 15 points, followed by Bob Boorman and Bob McKinney with 10 each. Dave Quinlan and Ron Board each had 10 for the Saints while Ab Ryan had nine.

Mackie's last second basket, giving the junior Saints a 39-all tie with the PCVS juniors, was heartbreaking for the collegians. The Garnet and Grey, down 10-9 at quarter, 18-16 at the half and 29-27 at three-quarter, had rallied in the fourth to take the lead but saw it wiped out by the short set shot from the key.

MATCH PCVS ATTACK

Ron Board, Dan Quinlan and Dink Masterson matched the PCVS attack of Paul Davis, Bubay, Bellany, and Keating until the final quarter. The collegians with Davis spear-heading the attack then took the slim lead.

Quinlan took the scoring honors with 14 points, while Jack Kane had eight and Masterson seven. Besides playing a stellar back-checking game, Davis paced the PCVS quintet along with Bellany, each with 11 points.

The bantam game was far different from the other two. The collegians, coached by Bev Goulding, took the lead in the first quarter and never relinquished it. They were ahead only 12-9 at the first quarter and 22-19 at the half but surged ahead 33-23 in the third romping away for the victory in the fourth.

Sorie and Tetlock topped the scoring for PCVS each with nine points while McArthur had eight. St. Peter's best were Nolan with seven and Paul Feeley with six.

Bisons Edge Cleveland 6-5

CLEVELAND (AP) — Pete Babando scored three goals and assisted on two others Friday night as Buffalo Bisons regained undisputed first place in the American Hockey League by defeating Cleveland Barons 6-5.

Babando got two of his goals in the first period and another in the first minute of the second period as the Bisons rolled up a 4-1 lead. Cleveland rallied to go ahead 5-4 in the last period, but Gordon Pennell, assisted by Babando and Steve Wochy, won the game with two goals in the last eight minutes. Gaye Stewart scored the other Bison tally.

Landy Sets New Record

MELBOURNE (AP) — John Landy, Australia's track star, switched from the mile to the two-mile today and set an Australian record of 8:58.2, breaking the previous Aussie mark for the distance by three seconds.

His time compares to the world record of 8:40.4 set in Aug. 1952, by Gaston Reiff of Belgium.

Landy, who ran a 4:02 mile—the third fastest on record—Dec. 12, competed under atrocious conditions at Olympic Park today. For two days Melbourne had been in the grip of an acute heat wave. But two hours before Landy was due to run a cool wave changed the conditions.

Eight times he bucked a head wind in the stretch. The wind was calculated at 17 feet a second.

After the race Landy said "What chance did I have? The weather seems to be against me every time I run."

Kesselring Off To Shaky Start At Los Angeles

LOS ANGELES, Calif. (CP) — Jerry Kesselring of Toronto and Kitchener was off to a shaky start in his first pro golf tournament Friday as he shot 39-37 for a five-over-par 76 in the first round of the $20,000 Los Angeles open.

"It was just one of those days," Kesselring said as he finished the reund. "I was a little nervous at the start but that wore off. I seemed to be hitting the ball all right but had some trouble with my putting.

"The greens were very hard this afternoon but, you know, my game could have been a lot worse.

Another Canadian, John Henrick of Ottawa and Montreal, shot 39-38 for a six-over-par 77.

LEADS WAY

Bill Nary of Tucson, Ariz., and his lucky putter led the way through the round, scoring a four-under-par 67 to overshadow the efforts of nationally known stars.

The 38-year-old professional, taking a two-stroke lead over Lew Worsham, Jim Ferrier and Ed Oliver, carded a 34-33—67 in a bid to win his first major tournament.

Play was at the Fox Hills Country Club, which measures 6,972 and has a par of 35-36—71.

Cobourg Victorious Over Lakefield, 4-3

LAKEFIELD (ENS)—In a fine lakeshore OHA intermediate "A" game last night, Cobourg Comets yanked out a 4-3 victory over Lakefield Lumbermen before a fair-sized crowd. Play was fast and fairly clean, despite a small fracas in the first quickly halted. The penalty box was full for a space in the first frame but good goaltending made for no score. The hockey wasn't so good in the second period, minor penalties keeping the clubs disorganized. Cobourg pitched in three tallies in the second without a return but were just able to hang on as Lakefield outplayed them in the third and nearly tied it up.

Cheap penalties cost Lumbermen the game. The fans were pretty peeved and jeered the referee plenty. The same clubs clash again next Tuesday night in Lakefield in what promises to be a thrilling encounter.

With no score in the first, the penalties went to Alexander, D. Wasson, Birch, Wilcox and Wilson. In the second, J. Fisher scored twice and Irvine once, as an assist each went to Legrow, Flesch, Wilcox and Harnden. D. Wasson got two penalties, with one each going to Hunter, Alexander, Reeves, McCracken, Legrow, C. Wasson and Hopkins. Legrow got a goal for them in the third from Reeves, but Lakefield notched three, Floyd getting a pair and Reid one, as D. Wasson earned an assist. He also drew a penalty, as did Reeves and Flesch.

All 4 Wrestlers In Ring At Same Time

Fred Atkins and Lord Athol Layton have been rematched against Hombre Montana and Ilio DiPaolo, with all four in the ring at the same time. It is the feature bout at the Brock Arena next Wednesday. It will be the first time that four men have appeared in the ring here together and should be well worth seeing. Atkins, Layton, Montana and DiPaolo put on a sizzling battle here this week that had the fans on their toes and cheering all through the match. These four are tops in team wrestling, travelling at top speed and dishing up rugged action. With the four of them in the ring at one time it should prove a riot.

Fred Atkins

Popular Johnny Barend and equally popular Johnny Harmon are in the semi-final and this will be a classic. Fans who like clean, scientific wrestling will go for this match, featuring two of the best matmen in the game.

A newcomer, Jack Bence, tackles Alan Garfield in the opener. Bence is a clever boy and has appeared many times on TV. A standout card that rates a packed house.

NHL Agreement Item On Agenda

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dates and venues for the Allan and Memorial Cup playoffs and an agreement with the National Hockey League will be main items on the agenda when the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association holds its semi-annual meeting here this week-end.

Expected to take up most time at the meeting will be the association's agreement with the NHL.

The NHL has said the CAHA violated the agreement in regard to restricting transfers of players under junior age from West to East. Last summer the NHL served notice on the CAHA of termination of the pro-amateur agreement, effective June 30, 1955.

It is well known that most western provinces are against the transferring of juveniles to the East, and the Manitoba branch is expected to advocate the restriction of the number of junior players moving East.

Lindsay, Bobcaygeon Rinks Win Berths

LINDSAY (CP) — Rinks from Lindsay and Bobcaygeon Friday won berths in the annual Ontario ladies' tankard curling finals Jan. 25 at Owen Sound.

Five rinks took part in the district playoffs.

Mrs. Anna McIntosh skipped her Bobcaygeon rink to a 9-8 victory over Mrs. L. Perkins' Oakwood team in the final round and Mrs. Rheta Kay's hometown rink took a 12-3 win over a Beaverton rink skipped by Mrs. N. McLeod.

CURLING NOTE

By HERB MARTIN

After leading his group for the greater part of the season, Jimmy Hall's rink was eliminated last evening by a "desperation" shot played by the veteran R. F. Downey.

Here's the story: If Hall could win from Downey, then his rink would take group honors. But now, when N. Hamley won from L. Ackford, he, Hamley, wins the honors.

Hall and Downey were all tied going into the final end. Play was all Hall's, and the experts on No. 8 conceded Hall the game and the honors. But not Mr. Downey—he had other ideas.

A TOUGH TASK

Mr. Downey had the last stone and it did look a hopeless task to those behind the glass. The shot was blocked and well guarded. Mr. Downey studied the situation and then decided to play a hundred-to-one shot. He played his stone well up; it hit one of his own stones on the 12-foot ring, cutting it across into Hall's shot, and passing it out, his own stone remaining shot — and right then and there it was all over for the Hall rink.

Mr. Downey called his shot, he played the shot, and he made the shot. What more could any curler do? Yes, sir, it's a slippery game.

NHL In Uproar After Blistering Blast By Richard

By W. R. WHEATLEY

MONTREAL (CP)—Maurice Rocket Richard, who has scored 19 hat tricks in his illustrious hockey career, goes into tonight's game with le tour du chapeau building up into a boomerang. The Fr[illegible] three goal performance is the [illegible] column in the French-language weekly Samedi-Dimanche. The current issue brought swift repercussions from president Clarence Campbell and heads of the National Hockey League clubs, for in the column Richard said Campbell is a "dictator," was unjust in his punishment of Bernie Geoffrion and is a publicity-seeker at Geoffrion's expense because Geoffrion is a French-Canadian.

"If Mr. Campbell wants to throw me out of the league for daring to criticize him, let him do so . . . I will leave hockey and I have an idea that several other Canadiens players who share my opinion will do the same."

CONFERS WITH SELKE

Campbell lost little time Friday in hustling to the Montreal Forum where he went into a conference with Frank Selke, Canadiens managing director, demanding to know what the club management "is going to do about it."

After the conference Campbell said that if abus of "the titular head of the league" has approval of the management, "It is an intolerable situation," and "If the club takes no action, it can have no objection to any action I might take."

As to Richard's privilege to criticize him in the column, Campbell said: "If a player s willing to prostitute his talents for a few hundred dollars he is at least short-sighted."

Selke had no immediate comment other than to say he realized the club's responsibilities and would talk with Richard before issuing any statement, which may not come until next week.

"It seems to me I always have felt that Richard was getting too big for hockey. Regardless of his ability, he is the poorest sportsman in the game. I only hope the president will take full and appropriate action in this present case."

Conn Smythe, managing director of Toronto Maple Leafs: "We'll see how Mr. Campbell handles this one. Hockey is a pretty big game, and no single individual is bigger than the sport. I imagine that's how this will be handled."

Frank Boucher, manager of New York Rangers: "It is an amazing statement for a player to make. I wouldn't want to make another comment at this time. I assume the president will have to deal with it."

It was a game between Rangers and Canadiens, in New York Dec. 20, that brought about the situation. Geoffrion retaliated in a stick-swinging brawl with Ron Murphy of Rangers. Geoffrion suffered a cut on the head, Murphy a broken jaw. After long deliberation Campbell slapped an eight-game suspension on Geoffrion and a five-game suspension on Murphy—all the games involving only the two clubs.

GEOFFRION HUMILIATED

In coming to Geoffrion's defence, Richard wrote that Geoffrion was humiliated by Campbell's decision and Geoffrion's playing had suffered. He also criticized Campbell for not taking punitive action against players on other teams involved in affairs resulting in injuries to Montreal players. He said Geoffrion had acted in self-defence in New York.

Tonight, Canadiens meet Chicago Black Hawks. The lowly Hawks have been the only team so far this season to win on Montreal ice.

Canadiens are expected to ice the same team that defeated Toronto 7-3 Thursday.

The Hawks have been faced with the injury jinx. Coach Sid Abel said he had only 14 men in Wednesday's game in New York, which the Rangers won 4-3, and had to use defencemen on his third line.

A win for Canadiens would move them into first place, one point ahead of the Red Wings who will be hosts to the Montrealers Sunday night.

In the only other game tonight Boston Bruins and Toronto Leafs clash in Maple Leaf Gardens. The set-back Thursday in Montreal left the Leafs five points behind Canadiens.

To Bring In Whitlock

EDMONTON (CP) — Promoter Jack Berry said Friday he will bring in Dave Whitlock of San Francisco to fight former Canadian heavyweight champion Vern Escoe here Jan. 16. Joe Kahut of Portland, Ore., had withdrawn from the original match because of illness. Escoe won a decision over Whitlock in a contest here six weeks ago.

Television To Make New Sports Fans Fear Many Will Never Leave Armchairs

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—Sports observers believe that television will have a tremendous impact on Canadian sports as it spreads across the country.

It will create new heroes and spur interest in sports that now draw few followers.

TV will make new fans but there is a danger that many won't be coaxed from their armchairs to sports arenas.

These are thoughts on TV's effect on sports disclosed today in The Canadian Press year-end poll of sports editors and sportscasters in all sections of Canada.

GAIN POPULARITY

They were unanimous that TV will create new interest in secondary sports, and almost so in voting that the new medium will create new heroes, such as American boxers who have gained their popularity with the living-room viewers through TV appearances.

Four-fifths of the voters said TV will increase the number of fans but the others thought the appeal of screened entertainment might decrease attendance at sports events.

And a quarter of those who thought the number of fans would increase said many of the new followers will be TV sports fans only and will not support teams through attendance at games.

Among those were some voters in Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto, where TV has been operating for some time. A few saw this as a temporary condition which will change when the novelty of TV has worn off.

TERRIFIC BOOST

Tommy Shields of the Ottawa Citizen and Dink Carroll of the Montreal Gazette predicted decreased attendances while Tom Foley of CFRA, Ottawa, said TV has already hurt hockey, baseball and football and will continue to do so for a couple of years. "But in the long run TV will be a terrific boost for sports."

Bobby Hewitson of the Toronto Telegram and Milt Dunnell of the Toronto Daily Star predicted increased fan interest while Wes McKnight of CFRB, Toronto, said that many new fans will be content to watch games from their living rooms. Aubrey Keizer of the Sydney Post-Record echoed McKnight's opinion.

WEAR OFF

Henry Viney of CFCN, Calgary, said TV will increase "the number of those who call themselves sports fans but decrease the number at actual games." Hal Pawson of the Edmonton Journal took a similar stand.

Frank McCool of the Calgary Albertan remarked that TV will affect sports for a while "but once the novelty wears off, they'll be back." Added McCool:

"And it will make it tougher than ever for sports writers. Besides having fans who were at the game telling you you're all wet, you'll have a vast audience of TV 'experts' correcting your description of a play. You can't win."

Gospel Of John Emphasizes Humanity Of Jesus

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.

The supreme theme of the Gospel of John is the divinity of Jesus, as set forth in the prologue of the Gospel in John 1: 1-14.

But the Gospel of John in many incidents and phases emphasizes the humanity of Jesus as well. Jesus Himself stressed this.

In contrast with John the Baptist, whom He declared to be the greatest of men born of woman, but who came neither eating nor drinking (Matthew 11:18, 19), Jesus [illegible] human being who hungered and thirsted, became weary and slept.

The divinity of Jesus was not the denial of His humanity, but was the Incarnation, divinity being revealed in and through His human life.

The story of the marriage in Cana of Galilee (John 2:1-11) is an incident in the blending of humanity and divine power. While some will concentrate attention upon the miracle, others will find the chief interest in the fact that Jesus was there.

The miracle of the changing of the water into wine takes its place among all the miracles, which if they could be explained would not be miracles at all. But the fact that Jesus was there as a guest, with His disciples, stands out with bold significance.

One could hardly have imagined John the Baptist present at such a time or place. And if he had been there, it would probably have been to preach a sermon of warning and doom.

Jesus could express stern rebuke against the evil that He observed, as anyone who reads Matthew 23 can see, but at that wedding feast He was evidently a guest in the spirit of the occasion.

There are other incidents that reveal Him in His true humanity, friendly and unconventional, as in the meeting with the Samaritan woman (John 4).

We must see Jesus in all the manifold aspects of that amazing, earthly life if we would [illegible] understand [illegible] example in the earnestness of one who said, "I must be about My Father's business."

We must understand the exacting nature of taking up the cross and following Him, but we must never lose the human touch, the gentleness of the Master who blessed little children and rejoiced with those who rejoiced, wept with those who wept.

To know Jesus in all the richness and beauty of His life, to be in any degree like Him, to share in any measure His mission and purpose and to know the meaning of the Gospel—surely this is the greatest venture and achievement that life can command.

It ought to be, for it is the gift of God to men.

"God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in Him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

Both Guests Omemee WMS

OMEMEE (ENS) — Trinity United Church Baby Band members and their mothers were guests of the WMS Wednesday afternoon in the church basement. The program, in charge of Baby Band superintendent Mrs. H. Deyell, and her assistants, Mrs. W. D. Weir and Mrs. William Fisher, opened with a children's hymn and prayer by WMS president Mrs. T. A. McConnell.

The tots presented their gift boxes. Mrs. W. D. Weir, by the use of a series of pictures, led the children in a unison acknowledgment of God's love for all creatures and ending with "God Loves Me." The story of Hannah presenting Samuel in the temple was read by Mrs. Fisher.

Mrs. L. Casey then addressed the mothers from the theme, "In the beginning was God," stressing the importance of giving children a right start in their relationship with God.

She said small children are capable of deep impressions of God in pre-school years which should not be left to Sunday school teachers to instil but could be given by trusting parents as each opportunity presented itself. By example and precept parents are building the men and women of tomorrow and these early impressions go a long way to keep boys and girls on the right track as they meet new experiences in life.

Promotions to Mission Band followed, conducted by Mrs. Deyell and Mission Band superintendent Mrs. M. Finney. Those going up were Jimmie Cavers, David Fisher, Louanne Byers, Murray Rehill, Billie Rehill, Ronald Armstrong, Jimmie Pogue, Helen Fee and Maureen Richards.

Mrs. S. D. Vaughan, past Mission Band superintendent, spoke briefly on the work of the Mission Band.

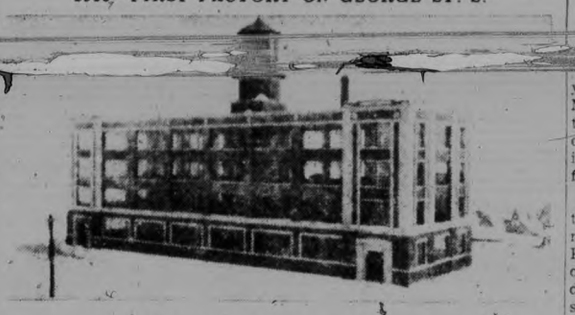
VOL. CVII. No. 7 — SATURDAY, JANUARY 9, 1954

Builders Of Peterborough

1954—Starting in 1919 in part of the space on the third floor of the Barrie building on George St., the Western Clock Company has expanded through the years until today it occupies this beautiful building on Hunter St. E., overlooking the lift lock. An original staff of 80 has increased to 730.

1919—FIRST FACTORY ON GEORGE ST. S.



1922—NEW FACTORY ON HUNTER ST. E.

Starting In 1919 In Few Small Offices Western Clock Becomes Great Industry

When John H. Vernor closed behind him the main door of Western Clock Company the day before Christmas, he had completed the work he began here in 1919.

The physical measure of his accomplishment can be imagined from contrast of part of the space on the third floor of the Barrie building, George St., where Big Ben was cradled in Peterborough, with the splendid manufacturing property of Westclox overlooking the city from the south slope of Armour's Hill.

And, walking off into retirement, Mr. Vernor was one of the group of contemporaries who, as general managers, carried the executive responsibility that brought about the industrial growth of the city during the first half of this 20th century.

STARTED FROM SCRATCH

The responsibilities of industrial management perhaps vary with one company and another. Some of these men of Peterborough were given assignments that compelled them to start from scratch. They were required to assemble plant and employees, plan for production, supervise designing, perhaps engineering, selling, change models and patterns to attract new business, maintain quality of product, meet competition. In the background is the solitary leader accountable to directors for ultimate results.

Management in most instances permitted participation in affairs of the community, in civic and associate endeavors, but that is a phase of the collective story which also must be passed over. As a series of personal reviews it reads like an anthology of success, of which the most impressive evidence are the diversified industries of this city, the strong place of their products in broad markets, and the greatly increased volume of employment which these manufacturing plants now provide.

JOHN H. VERNOR

Peterborough was about a week recovering from the surprise of the announcement in 1922 by J. H. Vernor that Western Clock Co. intended to build a manufacturing plant on Armour Hill.

They had been operating in Toronto from 1910 to 1919 when they came to Peterborough and rented a comparatively small space in the Barrie Building. A few months later they moved into the vacant three-storey building on the west side of George Street, between Westcott and Romaine Streets.

Western Clock had chosen Peterborough because; in those early twenties, it was about the same size as LaSalle, Ill., home of the parent company, near Chicago.

In their George St. factory they realized that their business was overtaking its capacity. Surveying Peterborough for a permanent site, they found quick sand in the south end and rock on the north west side, presenting different difficulties involving costs in the building of footings. Several other places were examined, but they were dismissed as being too far for employees. Automobiles were not so generally owned as they are today.

ASHBURNHAM INDUSTRY

On the other hand, Ashburnham had no other industry of appreciable size, and the hill top offered freedom from dust and dirt, a requirement of the clock industry.

The slope of the hill on the south side of Hunter St. was levelled by the moving of some 10,000 cu. ft. of earth. It was a pick and shovel job, in those days preceding the development of power trucks, bulldozers and shovels. The soil was drawn away with wagons and teams.

Memory Fades Of Pioneer Industrialists

The memory of a community soon dims and fades with the passing of time until one generation is virtually a stranger to another coming after it. Men are forgotten in the streets where once they were prominent, familiar and even respected figures. That is the common experience of mankind.

Few people in the Peterborough of today can kindle recollections of citizens who were foremost in its affairs half a century or more ago. Even the names of the leaders of industry quickly recede into the mists.

Looking back over the second half of the 19th century, it is something of a shock to realize that little is known today of men such as these:

JAMES KENDRY, MP, general manager of the Auburn Woollen Mills. The main stone buildings of that company were demolished 1938.

TB Association Receives Warm Praise For Its Work

The Peterborough County Tuberculosis Association have received warm praise from the superintendent of nurses at Muskoka Hospital for the work they are doing among county patients. Though small, and far from flush with money, the Peterborough association have a visiting and personal-contact service with patients that is credited with being the best in Ontario. People from Peterborough county who are recovering in TB sanatoriums receive at least four visits a year from the local association. Between visits they get baskets of fruit.

Mrs. Gwen Ward of 137 London St. is doing "invaluable" work in faithfully keeping up this visiting service, says Charles Elliott, president of the Peterborough Association. Patients appreciate it; so do the doctors and nurses who are in close contact with the patients.

People from Peterborough county who get TB go to sanatoriums in Gravenhurst, Weston, Hamilton, Kitchener, London and even New Brunswick.

VISITED QUARTERLY

Four times a year, Mrs. Ward visits these patients; on at least one of these four occasions she is acompanied by a member of the executive. Between times, baskets of fruit are sent—a tangible sign that people in the home community are interested.

"Dear Mrs. Ward: Will you please convey my sincere thanks to the Peterborough County Tuberculosis Association for their kindness to our patients from your district throughout the year 1953 and this new year.

"The patients are indeed grateful to you for your kind thoughtfulness to them and join me in wishing you all a very happy New Year."

DETECTED IN FIRST STAGES

A complicating factor these days is that many of the patients in the sanatoriums do not feel ill. Because of pre-employment chest X-rays, X-rays that are taken as a matter of course when a person enters a hospital, and mass chest X-rays, TB symptoms are usually detected in the first stages of the disease. Most of the people who require treatment didn't even know they had it until it was revealed by X-ray.

Rest and quiet are part of the recovery treatment. But it is difficult for a person who feels healthy to become relatively inactive. This requires some adjustment on the part of the patient, and the local TB association can help.

The association also look after families when the breadwinner temporarily leaves home to take sanatorium treatment; help discharged patients to get their jobs back or find more suitable jobs, and generally help in the rehabilitation of the patients.

FIRE DAMAGES WALL

A defective chimney at Walter Page's home, 459 Howden Ave., started a fire shortly before 3 p.m. Friday that caused $50 damage to the wall. Firemen had to rip through the wall to get at the blaze, and they used three handpumps to extinguish it.

Use Old Map In Search For Minerals

Prospecting In North Men Live Week On Salmon and Beans

Working from a map at least 45 years old, Charles Sanderson, a Millbrook prospector and contractor, made a find a year ago north of Lake Superior that has resulted in a new mining company being formed.

The president, and directors of this new company are all district men. President is Harold C. Ball, Peterborough farm implement dealer and Sanderson is vice-president. Directors are Colin Richardson, Pontypool, Bernard Butcher, Peterborough, and Richard Hutchison, Millbrook. Norman H. Treadwell, Toronto lawyer, is secretary-treasurer. They have been authorized to capitalize up to $3,000,000.

The map was a free drawn sketch made by the late great federal government geologist Alexander McIntosh Bell who had died in this same district.

TRAILS AND CAMPS

On the map were marked trails and camps that Bell had made and most important, findings he had made of iron and gold ore. Sanderson had negotiated with another prospector for the map.

The two men stayed a month and were joined for part of the time by Stan McIvor of Millbrook, a friend of Sanderson's. In spite of snow that was eight feet deep in the thick bush of the district, they managed to get around to some extent and confirm some of the markings on Bell's map. Enough to decide to go back in the summer at least.

Sanderson returned in the spring with another Millbrook man, Lorne Manley, who spent the whole summer with him. The others visited them briefly.

"It's mighty rough country," said Sanderson, "but if you know what you are doing, you can get along."

MOVE IN BY PLANE

Even then they had their troubles. The only way they could get food and equipment in was by aircraft at pre-arranged times and places. Several times, their food was stolen by bears and they were forced to live mainly off the land. Once they lived a whole week on salmon they caught and beans.

Because the country was so rough and the bush so heavy, they were able to do little more than explore the country and decide on what land they would stake.

However, they did some trenching, and a considerable amount of surface drilling. This last consisted of drilling holes about eight feet into the rock and then blasting to open up miniature sized quaries—28 of them. This gave them quite a good picture of what the rock contained, and that the various ores were consistent for depths up to 28 feet.

Next summer comes the core drilling with diamond tipped drills driven by gasoline engines that probe hundreds of feet into the rock if required. The drill rigs are on the property now.

What have they found? They are not saying too much. But there is gold and lead, zinc and heavy indications of copper as well as considerable radioactivity.

Sanderson has done quite a lot of prospecting in the north country in Canada's new mining frontiers, but he's especially entthusiastic about this find.

AT A SPECIAL MEETING of the directors of the Red Cross and Community Fund, Friday, Alex L. Elliott, QC, was re-elected chairman for the third consecutive year. Other members of the 1954 executive were elected Tuesday.

Staff Changes At CGE Are Explained

Several staff changes in the apparatus division, CGE, have been made since last fall, and the nature of these changes have caused confusion to many citizens. For the benefit of employees, Peterborough Works News clarified the division's organization and explained developments.

Three departments, motor and generator, switchgear and industry control, and motor and control, make up the division. Managers of these departments, directly under the vice-president and general manager of the division, are respectively: J. E. Girven, S. O. Shields and J. D. Willis.

Each manager controls engineering, manufacturing, accounting and marketing. Adiditionally Mr. Girven handles works services and employee and community relations.

STAFFS TO MOVE TO CITY

Formerly marketing was handled at head office, but new organization will bring the three departments' staffs here in midsummer.

Working under Mr. Girven in the service and relations field is Robert Hardie. He will be responsible for personnel, wage and salary administration, office service and works facilities.

In addition to the Peterborough works apparatus groups, two engineering groups, division-wide in their scope, are located in Peterborough. They are headed by J. L. McKeever, apparatus engineering, and J. G. Lucas, application engineering.

Favors City Keeping Rent Control

More Homes Needed To Lift Controls Mayor

Until Peterborough has more homes for the working man, its mayor, Norman Graham, will oppose the lifting of rent controls.

Commenting today on a report that the Ontario government is going to leave rent controls up to individual cities, Mayor Graham said he will work toward the institution of municipally-controlled rents here.

Legislation passed by the province last year provides broad powers for any municipality that wishes to institute its own controls.

OWN OPINIONS

Emphasizing his feelings were his own and not necessarily those of council, Mayor Graham foresaw some landlords "just knocking' the devil right out of the working man" if rents were decontrolled.

"We're short of houses here now and with so many unemployed, the working men just couldn't afford to pay higher rents."

Rents of $100 and $125 a month were conceivable, he thought, and those levels are "ridiculous."

80 PER CENT DECONTROLLED

Premier Frost said that as far as the province is concerned there is no further need for rent controls. He said about 80 per cent of the province has already been decontrolled.

The Premier said he is making available to any municipality the services of an advisory committee composed of three members of the Ontario Rentals Administration.

They are: J. J. Wingfelder, deputy administrator, G. C. Power, rental officer, and G. W. Hewitt, solicitor. They were called the leading rental control experts in Canada.

The province, which originally instituted controls with the outbreak of World War II, will lift them, as far as it is concerned, March 2. Plenty of time remains between now and then, however, for individual municipalities to retain them by setting up legislation.

Never Saw Children So Happy

Best Christmas Ever Had Family Writes Bank Staff

Readers of the Examiner will remember the story prior to Christmas of S. Callaghan of Maple Leaf, P.O., to whom the staff of the Bank of Montreal sent five hefty cartons of wearing apparel and other gifts for his family.

One of the boxes contained a 16-pound turkey with canned goods and various other "trimmings" for the Christmas dinner. The Callaghan home is in the vicinity of Maynooth, but is remote and isolated, and about a mile from the nearest neighbor. The members of the bank staff have received letters of gratitude from Mr. and Mrs. Callaghan and three of their children.

FATHER WRITES

The father's letter was: "Dear Friends—I am writing you this letter of thanks from the bottom of my heart. What you ladies and gentlemen did for my children, my wife and I, I know in my own heart my children when they grow up to be men and women the lovely Christmas you kind people made for them they will never forget. I never saw them so surprised in my life. It was a real Bank of Montreal banquet. I was never more surprised myself in all my life. It is something I will never forget as long as I live. Hoping you all enjoyed your Christmas as much as my family and I did, and I also wish you all a Happy New Year. S. Callaghan."

Probably it was the boy who came to Peterborough with his father and a sister who sent this note: "This is Joe Callaghan. I am writing to all the nice people that works in the Bank of Montreal. The lovely things that my brothers and sisters got for Christmas, Oh Boy! It was the first Christmas turkey for our Christmas dinner. So all of us we appreciate all the things we got. I hope you all had a nice Christmas, and a prosperous New Year to all."

FROM SMALL BOY

This page was in a small boy's hand writing. "Too the Bank of Montreal. My brothers and sisters like the turkey, and I like it too. We liked all the presents too. That was the best Christmas I ever had in years. Wish you all a happy Newyear."

Sister Margaret's letter, in part: "We didn't think we could hav a nice Christmas because my dad was out of work. We all appreciate for all the good things for Christmas and the boots are very warm on my feet and I could wear them to school and I won't forget that Christmas as long as I live. I never seen my brothers and sisters so happy as they were for a long time and the turkey was delish and I hope you had a merry Christmas. I am thanking you all."

LETTER FROM MOTHER

The letter from Mrs. Callaghan:

"Dear Friends: A little note of deep appreciation and thanks for the beautiful baskets you sent us at Christmas. The children were all overjoyed, and we had the loveliest Christmas we've ever had. It was delightful to watch them all on Christmas morning opening their parcels. Both my husband and I were so happy, too. They have some nice warm clothes to wear now. The turkey was delicious and all the food. Well, it was the grandest surprise we've ever had. I wish to thank you again and again. I hope you all have had as merry a Christmas as we all had, and a very prosperous and healthy and happy New Year to all of you from us all. Thanks a million."

THANKS TO POLICE

It was learned that the five boxes of goods from the bank staff were delivered by three relays of the Ontario Provincial Police, Peterborough to Burleigh Falls, and from there to Bancroft and then to Maple Creek.

The only comment from the bank, where there was hesitation about permitting the letters to be published, was the information that a letter of thanks was sent to the OPP for their valuable co-operation. It transpired that the police had to walk about a mile from the road to the Callaghan house. The staff is still wondering how the carrying of the heavy parcels was managed. Several trips had to be made from the car to the home.

The gifts were purchased from a fund collected among the bank staff. Clothing, food, boots, etc., were bought with the $72 contributed.

Wedding Plans Cancelled, Girl "A Man"

LE BLANC, France (Reuters)—A farmer's daughter who was to be married today called off wedding plans Friday after a doctor told her: "You cannot marry—because you are not a woman but a man."

Lucie Blanchet, 25, had been courted for three years by Aime [illegible], posted in the [illegible] village near here, were removed today when the local magistrates ordered a medical investigation of the case.

Doubt about Lucie's sex arose when she presented herself for the obligatory pre-marital medical examination. The doctor refused to give his assent, contending Lucie was not a woman.

Lucie went to another doctor who supported the first. "With an operation, we can make a handsome man of you but certainly not a woman," he said.

Because of the difference of opinion, the magistrates ordered an investigation to determine Lucie's sex before authorizing the marriage.

No. HFS-299—Have you a beef about picture windows? Do you resent being in the public eye? Here is one answer. Place your service and sleeping areas on the street side of your house, and your living and dining areas to face the rear. You are now free to bring the outdoors inside via the big living room windows. To this add high placed windows on the street side, and you will agree that this home is planned for privacy. Directly below the large living room is a recreation room of the same size. On the blueprints, allowance has been made for a rear-sloping lot, so that recreation room may open into the garden, with a row of windows the same size as the living room. Tasteful Landscaping Makes Good Impression From Street

The value of your property can be greatly increased by tasteful landscaping. Your home should make a good impression from the street and by using a suitable landscaping scheme this can be easily attained. Your entire site should be included in any plan for improvement, as a good back-door impression is equally as important as the front door reputation. The very best architectural designs can be enhanced by nature, but don't overdo it—extreme landscaping soon becomes monotonous.

An intelligent use of the site and the landscaping, and co-ordinating it with the house itself, is one of the most neglected phases of planning the new home. This is one of the reasons why so many homes look like boxes on a platter. Emphasis should be placed on a program of development based on what the home-owner can afford.

SEVERAL YEAR DEVELOPMENT

The best way to produce a good final result in the landscaping scheme is to lay out a program of yearly development. In such a plan the work can be carried out as finances permit, and quite probably the major portion of the actual labor will be carried out by you. Most people enjoy working around their own homes to improve the comfort and beauty, and there is little doubt that their appreciation of the completed job is much greater than it would be if they could simply say: "Go ahead with the job and send me the bill."

Landscaping of a new home can be accomplished gradually under the yearly development plan, and for the man who enjoys outdoor work the landscaping of his home will provide exercise and relaxation.

NATURAL ADVANTAGES

Unfortunately, we can't all have the "perfect site" with beautiful views, a brook, natural woods and all of the other natural advantages that people dream about when seeking a site for a home. However, such a setting may not be the perfect solution to your living needs, no matter how lovely they may sound. As in the house, the land must fit your personal needs.

Trees best frame the house if they are set slightly forward and to the side of the corners. If the site is naturally wooded, try to place the house in correct relation to the trees. Too many trees around the house can be a disadvantage, so don't be afraid to cut a few. The advantages of sunshine and natural light for the house is too important for the home builder to become sentimental over thinning out excessive growth.

Sloping sites are usually quite interesting, but in the planning of the new home, where convenience is best obtained on one floor, they are not a factor in the plans. Landscaping effects can be beautiful when they are located on different levels, but are sometimes quite costly to produce, especially when retaining walls are needed. Also, a highly-involved landscaping scheme may be very difficult to keep up without hiring extra help for this alone. If the grounds are to be maintained by the owner, bear in mind that landscaping neglected, because "there just isn't time" may make your entire site look shabby and run-down.

SOLAR PLANTING

A characteristic of new home planning is to place the house so that as many rooms as possible face toward the south. Since the heat of the sun is to be used to heat the house on sunny winter days, this orientation, combined with the use of sealed double-glass windows and overhanging eaves or "sun visors," is the basic "solar house."

Landscaping is fundamentally important in any solar house to create privacy for the broad expanse of glass walls and picture windows. Proper landscaping of the solar house also provides a part of the protection from the sun in the summer, when the rays are at a lower angle and might tend to stream in under the sun visor. While landscaping can provide an interesting hobby for the owner, it is well to consult an expert in solar houses before going ahead with any landscaping plan for this type of house.

Benes' Widow Reported Dead

VIENNA (AP) — The Sudeten German refugee newspaper Reichenberger Zeitung reported Friday the death of Mrs. Hanna Benes, widow of Eduard Benes, co-founder and president of the Czechoslovak republic.

The paper said Mrs. Benes died in Czechoslovakia recently of a stroke followed by a heart attack. It said the Red regime did not permit publication of the news in the controlled Czechoslovak press.

Her husband died a broken-hearted man in September, 1948, soon after he resigned from the presidency in protest against the seizure of his country by the Communists after the Second World War. The government awarded his widow a lifetime pension of $2,400 a year.

Mrs. Benes was blind during the last years of her life.

Liner Fire Inquiry Closes In Liverpool

LIVERPOOL (CP) — A British government inquiry into the loss by fire of the Canadian liner Empress of Canada closed Friday.

Hewson said he will deliver a report "at some future date."

Landing Rights Refused Swiss Air Line

By JOHN MYERS

BERNE (Reuters) — Swissair, Switzerland's semi-private national air company, fighting to expand its services in the face of foreign competition, is urging the wiss government to exert pressure on foreign countries which refuse it landing rights.

[illegible] France, in particular, have shown hostility to wissair plans by refusing valuable transit rights at London and Paris.

These rights, which most foreign companies enjoy in Switzerland, enable a company to make an intermediate stop to collect passengers. On long-distance flights, fares collected at intermediate stops are sometimes the only way of making a service pay.

While British European Airways and British Overseas Airways hold transit rights at Geneva and Zurich for a wide variety of destinations, Swissair has so far been refused transit rights at London for its service to New York. At present, Swissair is limited to less profitable British transit rights at Manchester and Prestwick Scotland, and Irish rights at Shannon.

Swissair has failed to obtain transit rights in Paris for its New York line or for a service to London and Air France has made it clear that it would rather give up its transit rights in Switzerland than allow Swissair transit rights in Paris.

DENIED ROME

Italy has so far refused Swissair transit rights in Rome, where several other foreign companies hold them. Spain, Portugal and Belgium are other countries which have so far refused Swissair demands.

In co-operation with the Scandinavian company, S. A. S., Swissair is opening a weekly South Atlantic service next April. This will link Switzerland with Rio de Janeiro only—Brazil having refused transit rights at Sao Paolo for a projected continuation of the line to Buenos Aires. Argentina in any case refused Swissair the right to land at Buenos Aires.

Swissair hopes eventually to develop a service to Canada. But Ottawa has so far refused Swissair traffic rights at Gander.

House Never Too Old For Fixing And It's Fun For Handyman, Too

By HERMAN HANDY

Whenever his wife asked Walter if he couldn't make her some extra kitchen cupboards, or a built-in sewing table, or a rumpus room for the kids in the basement, he always had the same answer.

"Naw," he would say, "it isn't worth the money. This house is too darn old. You'll have to wait until we get a new place."

For years Walter's wife was stopped right there, and she went on making do the best she could and envying all the [illegible] in the block and the fancy things they got from their husband's workshops.

Walter wasn't really lazy. Oh no! He really believed it wasn't worthwhile fixing up an old house. But a few days ago his wife came across a news item that changed the whole pattern of Walter's life for what may be years to come.

OLD HOUSE STORY

It was the story of an ancient house built before the turn of the century, whose owners thought enough of it to put in a modern air-conditioner.

The house had eight breezy rooms, so large they would probably have been hard to heat at Plum Tree down in Tennessee. Since the house was in a much colder climate, it was all the more essential, so they went right ahead.

According to the report, the ancient house had no provision for warm-air ducts or return ducts. But it did have a basement, big enough for one of those automatic furnaces with a cooling unit hooked up alongside.

To get warm air to the upstairs rooms, they had to furr in ducts in the corners of the ground-floor rooms and plaster them over after to match the original walls.

CAN'T LOSE

But the job was done, for only 50 per cent more than it would have cost in a brand new house. And as Walter's wife commented when she read it: "if they can spend $1,800 on a house as old as that, surely we can't lose by spending a few hundred on ours."

She was dead right. Real estate experts agree that no house is too old not to be worth spending money on, unless the worms are more than halfawy through its underpinnings.

Even Walter had to admit his house, at 25 years, probably wasn't ready for the scrap heap just yet, so he got to work.

With a few sheets of fir plywood he walled off one end of the basemen for a playroom, the other for a workshop. He found a chest full of tools he'd forgotten he had, and before long cupboards, sewing table, study desks were coming out in jig time.

Walter was enjoying all this so much that over the heart-felt protests of his wife, he had to give up his poker club!

TOO NICE TO SELL

And he made the old house so comfortable and livable he gave up the idea of selling it.

That's where the story should end, but it doesn't. One of Walter's friends, a real estate man, remarked after a game of ping-pong in the playroom one evening that he'd like to bring a man over to see the house. Not that Walter wanted to sell, you understand, but just for fun.

On those terms, Walter agreed. But the man was so taken with the built-ins and all the improvements he made aWlter an offer too good to turn down.

When the deal was made, did Walter go out and buy that spanking new home he'd always talked about? Not on your life. He bought another old place, so he could have the fun of starting all over again.

Traffic Tied Up

TORONTO (CP)—Street car and vehicular traffic was tied up in west-central Toronto Friday when an oil truck burst into flames. Traffic was rerouted while firemen brought the blaze under control.

May Produce Peace Solution

BERLIN (AP)—East Germany's top commentator declared Friday that the Big Four conference in Berlin may produce a "solution" to the cold war.

The only other alternative is disaster for Europe, he said.

Egbert von Frankenberg, former Nazi fighter pilot, made the forecast in an article published in the Communist press. He warned the West that the Russians can overrun Europe and any "mercenary NATO army" would be destroyed.

TELLS OF RED MIGHT

Frankenberg, chosen by the Soviet zone as official military commentator for Radio Berlin, brandished the threat of Moscow might and, hitting at Chancellor Konrad Adenauer of West Germany, asserted:

"Adenauer wants rearmament and war. The camp of peace wants to save the German people from war and destruction. It sees the solution in peaceful negotiations which will begin in Berlin."

Conceal Radiators With Hardboard Covers

BY MR. FIX

Hardboard is an outstanding product for the "do-it-yourself" trade. This composition material has a hard, glossy grainless surface that is highly resistant to abrasion and wear, and yet can be readily worked with woodworking tools.

One of the many uses for this versatile material is in the making of radiator enclosures.

We're all familiar with the old-style home radiators. Hardly things of beauty, they do little for the home—outside of heating it. But dressed up in new outfits, they can hold up their heads of steam proudly.

For, concealed behind properly designed enclosures, radiators not only take on a more pleasing appearance, becoming furniture pieces, they also heat more efficiently. That fact is confirmed by the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau, representing the industry.

What constitutes a properly designed radiator enclosure? First, it should be pointed out that it must provide for a higher temperature near the floor, a higher average temperature in the living zone of a room (below breathing level) and a lower temperature near the ceiling. This latter reduces heat loss at the ceiling, saving you money.

A radiator enclosure should offer a minimum of resistance to the flow of air over the radiator, providing convected warmth. Don't cover up so much of the heating unit that air cannot circulate freely over and around the tubes. Adequate openings for it to "breathe" are essential near the floor and at the top of the enclosure.

Another essential is a shield at the back of the enclosure to prevent undue heat loss through the walls. A shield can be made of aluminum foil tacked to hardboard or plywood, of foil-backed gypsum wallboard, or of some other insulating materials.

A three-sided radiator cover that will fit neatly around an offending radiator, and which can be moved for dusting and cleaning, can be made simply by building a skeleton wood frame to which hardboard panels are attached. The panels can be secured to the frame with nails, screws or glue, or all three.

To build an enclosure with curved surfaces, first build a frame curved to the planned radiator-cover pattern. Hardboard is flexible enough to conform to a curve of fairly large radius, but if the radius is small, hardboard should be moistened to make bending easier.

The best way to do this is to submerge the area of the panel to be bent in a tub or vat of water not exceeding 100 degrees F. for 45 minutes. If this is not handy, or if the panel is to retain its natural finish, scrub water into the underside with a stiff brush; lay panel on its face and place wet rags on top; then cover to reduce evaporation and allow to set for at least 24 hours.

Before finish coating a radiator enclosure, a primer or sealer should be applied. Any finish suitable to natural wood can be used on hardboard.

Your Garden:

Evergreens More Effective Than Shrubs And Trees

By HENRY PREE (NEA)

After a trip through New England the average gardener becomes most enthusiastic about evergreens and wonders why he does not plant more of them about his home.

We all admit that evergreens are more effective than shrubs and trees which lose their leaves with the arrival of Jack Frost.

Unfortunately, evergreens, in spite of their beauty and charm, have many restrictions that make their culture a problem [illegible] of the country, particularly in areas where they must continually combat the smoke, dust and fumes of industry. Yet people will continue to plant evergreens, despite the elements, because of their beauty .

Too few home owners are aware of the true beauty of many of the flowering trees and shrubs. Not only do their blooms provide beauty in spring and summer but their colorful foliage and fruits or berries, extend their charm well into the winter months.

In fact, by careful selection of plants, one may have a shrub or two in bloom every month except December. And if future December weather is no more severe than that we have just experienced one can expect one or more shrubs to show a little secondary bloom.

Norman Taylor, in his latest book, The Permanent Garden, lists 53 defferent shrubs to choose from. Of course, most of them we know about because they are the commonly planted spring and early summer flowering varieties.

The old gardener recommends the book as an aid to the home gardener wanting to make his yard and garden more attractive, and permanent, throughout the year by the use of trees, shrubs and vines requiring a minimum of expense and care.

The pros and cons of evergreen as well as deciduous plants are listed for your consideration. A companion book, Color in the Garden, is equally helpful. In it Taylor covers the subject of planing the yard and garden so as to have continuous bloom and color throughout the growing season.

If one is sensible of color, Taylor has gardens in red, blue, yellow, pink, white, green and, much to the delight of the old gardener, a gray and lavender garden.

Imagine a corner of the yard, and it could include the patio,

Evergreen are easy to buy and will help any gardener beautify his surroundings.

with the blue-gray foliage of the Korolkowi Bush Honeysuckle and the lavender flowers and gray aromatic foliage of the Chaste-tree, vitex agnus- castus, as a background for a flower bed containing Lamb's-ears, Catmint, Dusty Miller, Lavender Cotton, Globe, Thistle, Mullein and Alpine Wallflower

To fill in the spaces between the patio stones, Taylor suggests the Wooly Thyme, and Snow-in-Summer, two prostrate and matforming perennials with grayish foliage the year around.

If an arbor or trellis is present, consider a Chinese Wisteria with its beautiful bluish pea-like flowers in showy hanging clusters, to bloom in May. And on a trellised wall one can grow Clematis crispa Wiliam Kenneth, a hybrid eight to 10 feet high with deep lavender flowers.

Annuals such as Petunia Violet Queen, pale-blue Gilia Capitans and the showy Lace-flower with its lavender-blue blooms resembling the weedy but delightful Queen Anne's lace will extend the blooming season well into autumn.

Gardening Questions

Q—What are the growing instructions for Oxalis?

A—When first planted, Oxalis should receive but little water. It should be given a light soil, plenty of water after growth starts, and be placed in a good, sunny window. Feed occasionally with a fertilizer strong in nitrogen.

Q—What makes some evergreens of the same kind have deeper and richer-colored foliage than others?

Q—Tell us what to do for mealy bugs on house-plant foliage.

A—For imediate control, make a small swab of cotton about a toothpick and touch each bit of infestation of bugs. Repeat in a week to get those you missed. House plants are subject to few insects if the foliage is syringed with tepid water each week.

be issued by the said Corporation upon the security of the town property in order to raise funds for the liquidation of the said liabilities. . . .

"Therefore, Her Majesty by and with the advice and consent of the legislative council and assembly of Upper Canada enacts as follows:

"The town hall, market block (bounded by George, Charlotte, Water and Simcoe Streets), and the land south of Townsend St. and east of Park St. with appurtenances shall be vested in five commissioners who shall be called the Commissioners of the Peterborough Town Trust. . . ."

(The Ashburnham town hall at Hunter St. and Mark St. did not become city property until the village across the river became part of Peterborough by amalgamation.)

DUTIES OF THE COMMISSION

The Commission was authorized "to rent the municipal properties, to collect the rent money and to hold it in trust; to pay reasonable expense of the management of the Trust; to keep the property in good order; to insure the buildings; to pay interest money on debentures, and establish a sinking fund for the payment of the principal debt.

"To raise by loan on the credit of debentures from any person or persons, body or bodies corporate in this province or Great Britain, a sum of money not exceeding $120,000."

The fourth clause affirmed that it would be lawful for the Mayor and town council to issue debentures not exceeding $120,000, providing that no debentures should be issued for a town hall until a bylaw passed by the council received the approval of the ratepayers.

The commission was authorized to exchange debentures (new issues) for outstanding debentures. That conceived the possibility of a refunding plan at any time.

The commission was required, before July 1 each year, to submit to the Corporation the amount needed for paying interest due on debentures, together with 1 per cent for a sinking fund; and "the council shall impose a special rate (in the tax rates) equal to the amount so required, and it shall be paid before December 14 to the commission."

This clause also directed "that any treasurer, collector or other municipal officer or any member of the council who wilfully neglected to, or refused to perform or concur in performing such act requisite with the collection of such rate, or of misapplying any part of the proceeds thereof, or being party to such misapplication "shall be held guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be personally liable . . ."

The eighth clause empowered the council to appoint a commissioner "in the room of any commissioner who resigned, retired, left the city or died."

The 9th clause said that it would not be lawful for the Corporation to incur any further debt or liability beyond the current expenses, to be paid out of the annual assessment, without sanction of the Legislature . . . failure to comply with this restriction incurred personal liability.

Debentures were not confined to "the said property" of the municipality, "but the same shall be chargeable against the inhabitants and ratepayers generally, and may be sued and collected in the same manner as debts due by a municipality under the existing laws."

Annually before December each year, the Trust was directed to render an account to the town council of all monies received and expended; all debentures issued, and the books shall be open for inspection by ratepayers "at all reasonable hours."

Co-operative Action Builds Houses At Half Cost

OTTAWA (CP)—Build a $14,000 home for half that price? Sounds fantastic but Rev. F. A. Marrocco says that's what is being done by 34 young couples here.

Father Marrocco is head of the Canadian Catholic Conference's social action department and has fostered a growing movement to beat the housing shortage through co-operative action.

One result will be completion this spring of 34 homes at Lakeview Terrace, a suburb of Hull across the Ottawa river from the capital. They are the vanguard of about 300 more expected to be built at a similar saving.

The program also has spread through the CCC—the organization of Roman Catholic bishops of Canada—to Catholic groups in Kingston, Belleville, Peterborough, Cobourg, Lindsay, Toronto, Hamilton, Kitchener and Thorold.

SAVE ON CONSTRUCTION

Father Marrocco said in an interview Friday that the saving in home building is achieved because the prospective home owner does a large part of the construction work himself after taking a series of lectures and attending demonstrations sponsored here by St. Patrick's College.

Further savings come from bulk buying by groups of home owners with between 25 and 35 heads of families in each group.

Some 14 study groups of heads of families are at various stages in a year-long course in home building and home ownership. They learn how to do as many of the jobs as possible, hiring contractors to install the plumbing, heating plant, wiring and masonry.

They work from plans and with guidance material compiled during housing research programs undertaken between 1949 and 1952. The idea behind these programs was that people can be trained to solve their own problems.

Father Marrocco interested St. Patrick's College in getting the study groups under way and takes an active part in teaching and lecturing to the prospective home owners.

Well Armed

STOCKHOLM (CP)—The Kronor, one of Sweden's two post-war 8,000-ton cruisers, has been equipped with the latest anti-aircraft guns of Swedish manufacture. The 40 millimetre weapons fire between 250 and 300 rounds a minute, guided by radar.

OLD LIGHTHOUSE

Blind Farmer Builds Miniature Amusement Park

AILSA CRAIG, Ont. (CP) — A blind, retired farmer in this village 18 miles northwest of London has achieved the dream of many a youngster — he owns his own amusement park.

One electric motor runs the whole midway.

His grandchildren and their friends will bring him discarded toys to be incorporated into the show. Included in the midway is a stock-car raceway. One of the cars runs slower than the rest and Mr. Robinson has built a ramp over it to allow the others to pass.

He now is working on a miniature he calls the "ride-a-whip." At first he intends to run it by hand, using the wheel of an old hand-powered washing machine until he can get the feel of it and decide how much power it needs.

Mrs. Robinson helps with the midway, looking after painting the various exhibits.

Mr. Robinson's collection also includes toy rowboats, a cabin cruiser and a model of a 50-year-old threshing machine.

The original staff of 20 had grown to 80 by the time the company occupied the George St. factory and since then has normally been 730.

The legacy of enterprise of the Vernor management is indicated by those figures of employment —from the first group of 20 to the recent 730.

"We had decided to feel our way along when we came to Peterborough," Mr. Vernor said last week. "The outstanding help in our manfuacturing experience was the effect of the tariff set by the government of R. B. Bennett against cheap European exports. That really put our company on its feet. Since then duties against such imports have been gradually whittled down and there is even dumping from a company that is subsidized."

Another adverse factor, Mr. Vernor said, was the shortage of dollars in many parts of the world where Western Clock would like to do business.

"In our production 80 per cent of the cost is labor, and if Canada wants to build up that kind of industry for Canadians, the government should protect it against cheap competition and quit working for Europeans."

Western Clock is more or less in the doldrums today because competing products from countries of economy below Canada's has "at length caught up with us."

"But, that is now a worry for someone else," Mr. Vernor remarked. He has been general manager and executive vice-president 34 years,— since the company delighted another generation of citizens by its arrival.

Montreal Residents See Flying Saucers

MONTREAL (CP)—Those flying saucers are here again, a local radio station (CJAD) reported Friday.

Birmingham Downs Wanderers 2-1

LONDON (Reuters) — Birmingham City, lowly second division team, today defeated Wolverhampton Wanderers 2-1, knocking the English League leader out of the Football Association Cup competition.

The Wanderers had been 9-to-1 favorites to win the competition, which entered its third round today with the major league teams of divisions I and II entering the fight for the prized cup.

Newcastle, which has won the cup twice in the past three seasons, was held to a 2-2 tie by Wigan, a bush-league combination.

Fifteen of the 32 games ended in ties and will be replayed next week.

Because of the cup program, only a few minor third division games were played in England today.

In Scotland, Hearts beat Stirling Albion 3-0 and now heads division A with a one-point advantage. Dundee took over second spot with 25 points after defeating Hamilton 3-2.

Motherwell, 3-0 victor over Dunfermline, still has a seven-point lead at the head of division B with 32 points.

SAMUEL DICKSON, lumberman and water power owner, who operated mills at what is now the Quaker Oats dam, and also at Burnham's Point, on Little lake. His work endures in the Peterborough Lumber Company at Monaghan Rd.

WILLIAM HAMILTON, head of the firm that produced lumber mill and mining machinery in the buildings on the west side of Reid St. south of McDonnel St. and the CNR.

PETER HAMILTON, manufacturer of farm implements, at the southeast corner of George and King Streets. He was the father of Peterborough's former mayors James Hamilton.

GEORGE MATTHEWS, who in 1882 came from Lindsay and erected a meat packing plant on the east side of George St., south of the CPR, long since enlarged and absorbed in Canada Packers Ltd.

ROBERT ROMAINE, who in 1875 built a brick works on the north side of Dalhousie St., east of George St.

Col. J. Z. Rogers, who founded the Ontario Canoe Co., destroyed by fire within a few years, and afterwards replaced as the Peterborough Canoe Co., Water St. at King.

A. R. TEBB, manager of the Canadian Canoe Co., at the southwest corner of Water and Brock Streets.

B. F. ACKERMAN, founder of the harness manufacturing business now known as the Great West Saddlery Co., at the northwest corner of George and Dalhousie Streets.

Other names that belong in that list, a few of them that may be mentioned: G. Walter Green, W. H. Meldrum, John Carnegie, George Hilliard, and many others.

In their day they were builders of Peterborough during that half-century from 1850 to 1900.

The name of Anson Sperry signifies nothing now, but he was the proprietor of a shingle mill on the east side of the river between the Locks bridge and CNR.

In a similar mood of detachment, the generation grown to adulthood around the beginning of this century may once in awhile scan this first half of the 20th and read the names of men of corresponding prominence and usefulness in the Peterborough of today.

Essentially they provided employment in the making and selling of goods people needed, and employment was translated into homes and stores, schools and churches. In their day Peterborough developed into a city of 40,000 people.

Mrs. B. F. Wright

Funeral services for Mrs. B. Wright, formerly Margaret Renetta Northey, of 503 Elm St., were held Friday at 11:00 a.m. from the Kaye funeral home. The Rev. Ivan C. Morgan officiated, and burial was in Little Lake cemetery.

Pallbearers were: Percy, Joseph, Gordon, and John Northey, Wes Davis and Roy Brown.

Have New Wave Of Layoffs Across U.S.

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Important segments of heavy industry in the United States were hit by a new wave of layoffs this week.

[illegible] workers in American automobile plants, steel mills, railroads and electrical manufacturing plants. The textile, farm equipment and [illegible] recent weeks have laid off about 18,000 employees.

Most company spokesmen, in announcing the layoffs, blamed "adjusted production schedules" or "a lack of immediate business."

A report from the bureau of employment security in Washington indicated the number of jobless now may exceed 2,000,000.

MICHIGAN HARDEST HIT

Michigan appeared the hardest hit, with the jobless listed at 142,000. At the Plymouth division of Chrysler Corp. and the automotive body (Briggs) division, 7,650 workers were taken off the payrolls Friday. Hudson Motor Co. laid off 4,500. Studebaker Corp. said in South Bend, Ind., that it would lay off 3,000 to 3,500 because it plans to cut production.

Bethlehem Steel Co. in Buffalo, N. Y., took additional hearth furnaces out of production. The Buffalo Evening News said that steel production in the area is at 70.6 per cent of practical capacity, compared to 104 per cent two months ago. It also said that the four-day work week is becoming more prevalent.

The number of layoffs among railroads increased. The Reading Co. said 1,200 workers would be laid off at its main car shops in Reading, Pa.

Total employment curtailment in General Electric plants in Auburn and Syracuse, N. Y., rose to about 1,000.

Board Grants Certification

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario labor relations board Thursday announced certification of United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL) as bargaining agent for employees of Link Manufacturing Co., Ltd., at Gananoque.

Reporting the certification The Canadian Press erroneously quoted the board as saying "undue pressure" had been used in an effort to create opposition to a union.

Actually the board's judgment did not use the phrase "undue pressure." It said that an employee, George Funnell, "exercised in the plant a degree of authority which could and did reasonably induce employees to believe he was a foreman and possessed power to affect their employment status."

RED OR GREEN?—Or did you ever notice those traffic lights at the corner of Lansdowne St. and Monaghan Road? At least one dangerous driving case was dismissed in 1953 because the defence counsel was aware of the condition existing at this corner. The charge stemmed from the fact that an out-of-town driver went through the light and smashed into another car. The lawyer pointed out how easy the light was to miss seeing and the case was dismissed. But a woman was nevertheless badly injured in the crash.

Mother Freed On $10,000 Bail

VANCOUVER (CP)—A 23-year-old mother, committed for trial on a charge of murder, Friday won her appeal to be freed on bail, despite the objections of the attorney-general's department.

Mrs. Alberta Brown, charged with the rifle-slaying of William Zahar at Mission, B. C., was freed on $10,000 bail by Mr. Justice A. M. Manson two hours after she was committed for trial.

Mrs. Brown was returned to Oakalla prison after her committal but was released seven hours later when bail was raised.

Garfield King appeared on behalf of the attorney-general's department to argue against granting bail. Mrs. Justice Manson deliberated for two hours before reaching a decision.

Mrs. Brown is charged with shooting Zahar in the doorway of her home at Mission, 40 miles east of here. She told arresting officers Zahar had been "bothering" her. Her husband was working out-of-town at the time.

8th Army Ready For Emergency

SEOUL (AP)—Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, U. S. 8th Army commander, said today that if the Communists attempt to halt the release of anti-Red war prisoners Jan. 23 it will "most likely start the Korean war over again."

The Reds have not threatened force but Taylor told a press conference, the 8th Army "will be alerted for any contingency."

He said his troops are fully prepared for "orderly or emergency situations" that may arise from the release of 22,500 anti-Red North Korean and Chinese PoWs in compounds in the neutral zone near Panmunjom.

The UN command insists that the prisoners go free as civilians as 12:01 a. m. Jan. 23. The Communists maintain the PoWs should be held until a Korean peace conference decides their disposition.

Ceylon's Indian Community Irritation To Sinhalese

By O. M. GREEN

LONDON (OFNS)—Sir John Kotelawala, Prime Minister of Ceylon, on January 13 is going to New Delhi to discuss with the Indian Premier, Mr. Nehru, what can be done about the huge community of Indian Tamils (natives of Southern India) in Ceylon. They are an irritation to the Sinhalese, who are determined to cut down, and keep down, their numbers. And for nearly four years they have been the cause of increasingly acrimonious bickering between the two Dominions.

One of the most vexing problems created, in the last century, by the development of Asia's natural resources by mass labour, lies in the enormous number of Indians who have been deliberately imported into other countries to replace the inefficient native labourers, or who have emigrated spontaneously in search of work.

ALL LAND NATIONALIZED

In Malaya there are nearly 750,000 Indians to complicate the problem of welding into a united people the Malays and the Chinese who have grown out of the nucleus of settlers imported by Sir Stamford Raffles when he founded Singapore. In Burma the rice-lands accruing to Indian chettyars (country bankers) through mortgages which Burmese borrowers could never pay off have created a serious difference between the Burmese and Indian Governments over compensation, all land in Burma having been nationalised.

In the Fiji Islands it is feared that Indian immigrants will ultimately swamp the native population. Brunei's rich oilfields are a magnet for Indian labour to replace the attractive but irresponsible Dyak. The bitterness of "the Indian question" in South Africa is too well known to need description.

In Ceylon there are two distinct communities of Tamils: about 165,000 in the north who have been settled there for centuries (their presence is not in dispute); and 90,000 labourers (including their families), a large number of them a floating population, but never tending to grow fewer, and making up one ninth of the population of Ceylon.

This anomaly the Ceylon Government is determined to put to an end. The first step after Ceylon attained its independence was taken in 1949, when the old immigration regulations were replaced by a new Indian and Pakistan Residents (Citizenship) Act, under which the Tamils could apply for registration as citizens of Ceylon—in fact, they had to do so if they wished to stay in Ceylon.

At once there was an outcry against the severity of the conditions of registration, and the Ceylon Indian Congress—the existence of this organisation is particularly disliked by the Sinhalese—boycotted the Act. But in May, 1952, elections were held at which only registered citizens could vote. This immediately disfranchised the entire Tamil community. At the last moment the Ceylon Indian Congress lifted the ban, and a flood of applications for registration—in all 247,000, representing, with dependents, 900,000 Tamils—poured in. The Ceylon Government had no organisation able to cope with such a demand, and the tamils were left voteless.

DIFFICULT TO REGISTER

Whether there has since been any fault in the system of registration is hard to say. The Government's opponents in the Ceylon Parliament say there has. The official explanation is that the Tamils drift from one rubber or tea estate to another, and thus to verify their records through each employer takes a long time.

According to a recent statement by Sir John Kotelawala, 56,669 individual applications for citizenship (families are added automatically) have been considered; about seven thousand have been granted, 8,298 rejected, 5,468 told to show cause why they should not be rejected. What has happened to the rest is not disclosed.

Meanwhile, further Indian immigration into Ceylon has been stopped. An additional hardship, according to Indian information, is the restriction now put on Tamils sending money to their parents in India.

When in London for the Coronation in June, 1913, Mr. Nehru and Mr. D. Sennanayake, then Ceylon's Premier, discussed the question. According to a subsequent statement by Mr. Nehru, there were 950,000 Tamils to be considered. Of these Mr. Sennanayake suggested that about 400,000 might be granted citizenship at once; another 250,000 would be granted permanent residence and their case reconsidered in ten years time. But there would still remain, Mr. Nehru pointed out, 300,000 "like Mahomet's coffin, suspended between heaven and earth;" and among them a large number—children of mixed marriages, for instance — recognised by neither Ceylon nor India and thus in the wretched condition of "Stateless persons."

Whatever actually passed at the talks in London, Sir John Kotelawala has said that he is not bound by them, and that he intends to start the whole discussion afresh with Mr. Nehru, "in a spirit of complete friendliness and good will."

There can be no doubt that he is anxious for a settlement. Yet one may wonder how it can be reached. No one questions the virtues of the Tamil labourers: sturdy, frugal, well behaved, hard working, as rubber and tea estate workers, as bridge, road and house builders. But there are too many of them in what is, after all, a small island, to please the Sinhalese.

Sudan Begins Self-Government

KHARTOUM, Sudan (Reuters)—The Sudan today celebrated its "Appointed Day"—the beginning of a three-year trial period of self-government for the 9,000,000 people of this African land.

Sir Robert Howe, British governor-general, brought 55 years of Anglo-Egyptian rule to an end by declaring this "the Appointed Day" in a special decree handing over the Sudan's administration to an elected government.

He first received oaths of allegiance from Ismail al Azhari, 52, chosen first prime minister of the Sudan Wednesday, his cabinet ministers and new civil judges.

Azhari's new administration will make arrangements within the next three years for a final decision on whether the Sudan shall become fully independent or form a union with Egypt.

Britain Hopes Talks Resumed In Korea

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain hopes the preliminary discussions between the United Nations and the Communists at Panmunjom will be resumed, a foreign office spokesman said today.

This was the only comment he would make on today's call by the Chinese Communist prime minister, Chou En-lai, for an immediate resumption of preliminary talks on the proposed Korean political conference.

Dairy Strike Ends Abruptly

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The crippling strike at Purity Dairies Limited, which suddenly cut off delivery of milk to some 16,000 Windsor and district families Friday, ended abruptly early today with the company making limited concessions to Local 440, Dairy Workers' Union, (CIO-CCL) after an all-night bargaining session.

This brought an end to Windsor's first strike of 1954 and to the first strike in Windsor's milk industry.

Purity milk deliveries were resumed at 6 a. m. in Windsor and suburban areas as well as in Essex, Harrow and Amherstburg.

The union won a five-cent increase for all male employees, with other benefits for female workers and some minor concessions in addition to previous concessions promised by the company.

There will be no increase in the price of milk, a company spokesman said.

The company had offered two and a half cents and the union minimum request was for 10 cents an hour.

Dog Swallows Diamond Rings

MONTREAL (CP)—Mrs. J. Davies called a veterinary Friday, pointed an accusing finger at her 7-months-old boxer and declared: "There's diamonds in that there dog."

This came about because Mrs. Davies, going about her housewifely duties, placed two diamond rings worth nearly $600 in an exposed place while she dusted a dresser.

When she looked around, the rings had gone. The pup emitted a slight belch, wagged his tail, and appeared to ask for more.

The vet, faced with the problem of retrieving diamonds from man's best friend, decided on a shot of morphine for the boxer, and it worked — the rings came back quickly.

Mrs. Davies, who lives at suburban Verdun, vowed: "I'm going to keep my rings on my hand while that fiend is about."

Lively Topic Chosen For Cup Debate

VANCOUVER (CP)—If the McGoun Cup debate next week is as lively as the controversy the choice of topic has kicked up, it should be a lulu.

The topic, "Resolved that the Kinsey reports are a benefit to society," was chosen in a vote by debaters of the four Western Canada universities participating.

The Kinsey reports, "Sexual Behaviour in the Human Male" and "Sexual Behaviour in the Human Female," were prepared in the United States under the direction of Dr. A. C Kinsey.

The subject will be debated Jan. 15 by teams from the universities of Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia.

Meanwhile, it is being debated daily by churchmen and university groups.

In Winnipeg, David Bowman resigned from the university team; Dr. Athol Gordon, deputy provincial coroner and debate chairman, resigned; Young United church withdrew its permission for the debate to take place on its premises; other church groups refused to accept the debate. It was finally rescheduled for university premises.

DEFENDED IN ALBERTA

On the other side of the controversy, Dr. Andrew Stewart, president of the University of Alberta, said he has "no objection" to the choice of subject and since the students chose it, it is their right to debate it.

He said they were "public documents" with "social significance."

In Vancouver, the UBC team continued practising and Thursday the negative side triumphed before a packed auditorium when it disclosed that of three Kinsey volumes in the UBC library, two were stolen and one "well-thumbed."

Ken Perry, law student taking the negative, said: "Father, according to Kinsey, is worn out after his 20s. From now on, women who formerly hung around army barracks will be waiting outside high schools."

So far, the University of Saskatchewan hasn't said a word.

OBITUARY

JOHN W. FAIRMAN

A well-known gentleman in the Hastings district, John W. Fair died today at the age of 90 after a short illness.

Born in Haldimand township, son of Peter and Margaret Fairman, he was educated in Hastings and farmed in that area until his retirement in 1926. Mr. Fairman was a member of Trinity United Church and a staunch Liberal.

Injury To Trueman Mars Opening Play

KINGSTON, Jamaica (Reuters)—An injury to Freddie Trueman, Yorkshire fast bowler, marred the opening day of the MCC's second match against Jamaica Friday.

But despite losing Trueman with a badly-bruised heel midway through play, the MCC shut out Jamaica in their first innings for a modest 187. In the half-hour remaining the MCC, who opened with Dick Spooner and Jim Laker, lost one wicket for 12 runs.

Trueman has been advised not to bowl again in this match, but is expected to be fit for the first test which begins next week.

Tastes Sweet Defeat

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Defeat tasted sweet to Fred Williams, captain of a touring motorcyle speedway team from England. When his team lost to a South African outfit Williams had to eat his crash helmet—made of chocolate.

Giardello Stops Panter For First

NEW YORK (AP)—Joey Giardello, fast-improving middleweight threat, stopped Garth Panter, rugged Salt Lake City battler, for the first time in his 67-bout career Friday night to win on a technical knockout in 1:16 of the fifth round at Madison Square Garden. Giardello weighed 160, Panter 161.

Carrying the fight to the western strong boy with a rousing spurt in the fifth, Giardello slammed Panter around the ring with a series of right-hand punches.

Two solid rights drove Panter into retreat in Giardello's own corner. Another series sent him spinning [illegible] through the [illegible] his own [illegible] helpless and unable to defend himself, referee Al Berl stopped the contest.

Too Expensive To Switch Olympic Games

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — It would cost the international olympic committee about $4,500,000 to take the 1956 Olympic Games from Melbourne at this late date, a high olympic official said Friday.

"I don't see how they could afford it but certainly somebody would have to pay," added a member of the Melbourne organizing committee who asked not to be identified.

The IOC executive committee meets in Lausanne, Switzerland, Jan. 16-17 to consider a proposal that the games be shifted to another site because of Australia's quarantine law which threatens to strike equestrian events from the program.

NEW AGITATION

There is new agitation to remove the games from Melbourne because of an Olympic law which says all Olympic events must be held at the same site.

"We are certain we are in no danger of losing the games now," the official added, "but just in case we were, it might be interesting to ponder who would foot the bill for the expenses already incurred.

Says Hypnotism Harms Athletes

ST. THOMAS, Ont. (CP)—Morpheous says hypnotism could do "bodily harm" to an athlete who was not in "A1 condition."

Morpheous, stage name of professional hypnotist Robert Shangoff, in an interview hree Friday night said athletes "would have to play in a post-hypnotic state if the suggestions (to play better) were to have any effect."

He was commenting on the reported use of hypnotism by Hamilton Cubs of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

Mr. Shangoff said: "Because of the added possible exertion an athlete who was not in A1 condition might bring about bodily harm. In deep post-hypnotic states a player could be injured and not realize it because there may not be any pain."

Trabert Turns Tables Beats Lewis Hoad

ADELAIDE (AP)—Tony Trabert turned the tables on Australia's Lewis Hoad today, beating the Aussie star 6-4, 6-2, 6-2 to win the South Australian singles championship.

In the recent Davis Cup challenge round Trabert lost a gruelling five-set match to Hoad that enabled the Aussies to tie at 2-2.

Before the match started Hoad received treatment for a strained right elbow while Trabert was treated for a sore right shoulder.

Cobourg Aunt Shocked At Girl's Death

COBOURG — (ENS) — Helen Boyle, the 24-year-old Toronto hospital lab technician who police believe, was murdered, will be buried in St. Michael's cemetery here. Funeral arrangements had not been completed, her aunt, Mrs. Dennis Larkin said Friday night, but it is expected that she will be buried Monday morning fol-

[illegible] in St

Undertaker Douglas Tait went to Toronto Friday night for the remains and returning with him will be the girl's father, Tom Boyle and her brother, Jack. Tom, a retired Peterborough CNR employee, has been living with Mr. and Mrs. Larkin here for the past two years. Early this week Tom Boyle went to Oshawa to visit his son, Jack and while there received the tragic news that his daughter was in serious condition as a result of a mysterious blow Wednesday night.

"Helen was down here for Christmas," Mrs. Larkin told The Examiner last night. "She came down Christmas Eve and left Christmas night because she had to be on duty next day. She was in the best of spirits and very gay. It is true she compained about a headache but she uses her eyes a great deal in the lab and we think the pain in her head was from eyestrain.

SHOCKED AT MURDER

"With all the care that was available up at St. Michael's Hospital, I was hopeful she would recover. Her death was a shock but more shocking when I learned today the police believe she was murdered. I can't understand it. There is absolutely nothing that I know of to explain it. I just don't know what to think," said Mrs. Larkin.

The tragedy is particularly hard on her father. Only a year ago he lost his son in an eastern Ontario fire. His son and wife are buried in the family plot in St. Michaels Cemetery here.

Honor 3 Veterans On Retiring At CGE

Three veteran CGE employees were honored recently when they retired on pension after many years' service each. They are Roy Pilling, Charles Waldrom and Jack Keating.

Mr. Pilling, an inspector in the control department, was presented with a chair and footstool as the department's employees gathered to extend good wishes.

In addition to a gift of money from his fellow workers in cleaning, Mr. Waldrom received gifts from other departments where he worked in connection with his duties.

For Jack Keating, armature workers collected a purse of money and purchased a plaid mackinaw. It was the group of long-standing friends and veteran employees in that department that made the mackinaw presentation.

Sport Gimmicks Back In Style This Season

By WALTER GRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The gimmicks are in season again. But based on past performances all they appear to be good for is a laugh and possibly extra dollars at the gate.

Gimmicks and gadgets have long been used by officials to supercharge their ailing clubs and somewhat-rusty turnstiles into action. The sparkplug invariably jolted the teams into winning streaks but by season's end the batteries were dead.

Hamilton Cubs of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series are the latest "guinea pigs." Wednesday, the Cubs broke a losing streak with a 3-1 victory over Quebec Frontenacs. Here's the gimmick:

Shortly before the face-off coach Jimmy Skinner had hypnotist "Mr. V." put the whammy on five of his players. He whispered something about them being better players than the opposition.

"Mr. V's" act has been used in big-league hockey and baseball. An Englishman, Maj. Frank Buckley, pulled off the biggest stunt 16 years ago.

GLANDULAR INJECTIONS

The major, coach of Wolverhampton Wanderers of the English Soccer League, hit on the scheme of glandular injections. The newfangled training idea didn't bring his club the league championship or Football Association cup, but the Wolves came within a cat's lick of taking both, second in the league and cup finalist.

Last season the Wanderers, without Maj. Buckley, took to oxygen-sniffing, an oldie in North American hockey and football, and in two months of home matches they were undefeated in 18 games.

A "secret weapon" was introduced by University of Maryland's football club last season. The machine shot ultrasonic rays travelling 1,083 feet a second into the players to keep them in shape. The club, rated tops in various United States sports polls, was unbeaten until the Orange Bowl game Jan. 1 when University of Oklahoma scored a 7-0 upset.

PROTEIN SUPPLEMENT

Toronto St. Michael's of the OHA Jr. A series this season are testing a new formula—HPS60, a protein supplement. Taken with milk, the mixture is reported by club officials to have "dramatic results" on lagging players.

In 1949, hypnotism was tried for four months without success on St. Louis Browns of the American Baseball League by Dr. David F. Tracy of New York. In November, 1950, Dr. Tracy fixed his gaze on New York Rangers of the National Hockey League for one game which the club lost 4-3 to Boston Bruins.

The next season manager Frank Boucher, with the help of restauranteur Gene Leone came up with the craziest gimmick yet—"The thing", a bubbly, salty, non-alcoholic liquid which the players downed with a free pre-game meal provided by Leone.

As centre Edgar Laprade put it: "You take one swig, you belch and then you feel like a warhorse. . . ."

Rangers won the next five home games but wound up the season in last place.

Mercurys Dump Niagara Falls 6-2 As Tigers Defeat Stratford 5-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kitchener - Waterloo Dutchmen and Owen Sound Mercurys are in much the same position today as last week-end.

They are again tied for leadership of the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A group but this time they will settle the matter between themselves.

During the first week-end of 1954 Kitchener scored two victories to break the tie and take a four-point lead. Tonight Dutchmen will visit Owen Sound and attempt to regain their supremacy.

Mercury's moved into the tie position Friday night with an easy 6-2 win over cellar-dwelling Niagara Falls Cataracts. At Chatham, Windsor Bulldogs defeated the Maroons 2-1 while the Tigers defeated Stratford Indians 5-3 in an overtime battle at Hamilton.

Bill McComb scored twice for Owen Sound. Other scorers were Elwyn Morris, John McArthur and Bill Hagan and Doug Gillespie who tallied just 13 seconds apart to end the scoring midway through the final period.

BATHGATE NOTCHES PAIR

Murray Comfort forced the extra play at Hamilton with a goal late in the third period. Lloyd Ferguson got the winning tally at 7:24 of the overtime session.

Al Buchanan scored the insurance marker when he scored on a backhand shot into an empty Stratford net.

Mickey Roth and George Aitken scored for Stratford in the opening period and Hub Anslow tallied for Tigers. George McLagan tied the score in the second but Indians went ahead again before the frame ended on a score by Herve Dejordy.

In a Northern Ontario Hockey Association Southern A senior group game at Sudbury, the Wolves edged the last-place Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Indians 3-2.

The second game tonight will see Chatham at Stratford. Hamilton will meet Bulldogs at Windsor Sunday.

The French horn originally was employed in hunting but was used in orchestras in the early 18th century.

WEILAND TERMED "SOUR"

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP)—Cooney Weiland "must be pretty sour," Cliff Purpur, University of North Dakota hockey coach, said, commenting on the Harvard coach's strong objections to Canadian players in U.S. collegiate ranks in western league hockey.

"After those drubbings on that road trip out west any coach would be," Purpur said. Harvard lost six straight games on a western trip in December.

Weiland's charge that teams like Denver and North Dakota have three Canadians to one American is a "sweeping statement," Purpur said.

"On the team we took to Denver in December, we had eight Canadians and seven Americans. They are all legitimate students," Purpur said, adding that North Dakota has only one Canadian transfer student and "he's only 19, not the 23 and 24-year-olds Weiland took after."

John Mariucci, Minnesota coach who brought his team here Friday night for a series with North Dakota, said he wanted to stay out of the controversy. "We are not concerned, because we have only Minnesotans playing on our team. We have lots of kids to draw from. But we certainly welcome any Canadian students."

EZ PREPS FOR ROCKY

CHICAGO (AP)—Ezard Charles former heavyweight boxing champion, figures his bout with Bob Satterfield next Wednesday night will be a good trial run for a possible June clash with title-holder Rocky Marciano.

"Like Marciano, Satterfield throws bombs — at least for a while," said Tom Tannas, co-manager of Charles, as the two fighters were pronounced in good physical shape Friday at an examination before the Illinois state athletic commission. Said Tannas:

"We know Satterfield is dangerous, but he's the kind of opponent who is good practice for handling a slugger like Marciano, that's why Ez took this bout."

Satterfield, listed as a light heavyweight, probably will weigh 182 pounds against Charles, who intends to scale between 188 and 190.

Satterfield, 32, has scored 25 knockouts in a 32-won, 14-lost, 2-draw record, including knockouts in all four of his 1953 starts.

BASEBALL MEETING ENDS

NEW YORK (AP)—A nine-man committee of major and minor league baseball men, reviewing the structure of the game, adjourned Friday without making any announcement.

Charles Segar, secretary to commissioner Ford Frick, said the committee will meet again "in about a month."

Branch Rickey, Pittsburgh Pirates general manager, said the members had agreed to make no comment. The commissioner's office will make public any information that is to be released.

The meetings were understood to be largely exploratory with revision of baseball's draft laws regarded as the most pressing problem.

MANCHESTER, England (AP)—Manchester City, an English League division I soccer club, Friday signed a 23-year-old Canadian — without ever seeing him play.

Barrie Takes Easy 6-2 Win Over Montreal Royals

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Barrie Flyers, undefeated in their last five games, have moved into fifth place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A group standings.

A win tonight over Jonquiere Marquis could boost them into a fourth-place tie with Kitchener-Waterloo Greenshirts, provided Greenshirts fail to win at Trois-Rivieres. Three weeks ago Flyers were in last place.

Mother Has Hands Full With 10 Pups, 2 Children

REGINA (CP)—Mrs. Ed August has her hands full with a battery of feeding bottles, two children, a worried husband, two telephones that ring continually and 10 pups.

The house work is being neglected. The August children aren't getting the same loving care. Mrs. August has dark circles under her eyes.

The reason: Pups, four too many.

Fraya, their mother, can look after only six. The Augusts bought baby bottles and started making formula.

RIBBONS RESENTED

But that didn't work. Fraya pulled off the red ribbons the Augusts tied on a series of small tails to identify the pups. No one knew which pup had been fed.

Augusts then appealed for help in finding a foster home; a place where four of the pups could receive natural mother's milk.

That is when the telephones started ringing. More than 100 persons called within 24 hours, including a Toronto newspaper man who asked that one or two of the pups be shipped him air express.

Some had helpful suggestions on how to bottle-feed the pups. But most thought the Augusts were giving them for free.

WORTH AT LEAST $100

Not so. Some day they may be worth $3,000. Their minimum value will be $100 each.

Fraya, a rare weimaraner imported from Germany, surprised everyone with her litter. The species usually has only two pups, three at the most.

Fraya apparently is going to keep all of them. Some one suggested that the Augusts use Fraya half-and-half with formula. Now the pups are being fed in shifts and are doing fine.

"Between feeding pups, looking after the kids and answering telephones, I'm nearly crazy," Mrs. August said Friday. "But if I can pull the pups through it will be worth it."

She said she and her husband plan to sell the pups—when they're off the bottle.

The Rev. L. V. Bigelow opened the meeting with a devotional period and then presided for the business session.

Highlight of 1953 work was the changing of the Havelock Baptist Mission's status into the Fellowship Baptist Church. The new church was organized in April and its minister, Mr. Bigelow, was ordained into the ministry of the church in June.

[illegible] Clark, gave the reports for the general fund, the building fund and missions, and all showed increased receipts over last year and a balance on hand in every department.

Mrs. Bigelow, secretary-treasurer for the Sunday school, gave a report showing that workers in this department are steadily building up a very effective organization. Last year the school had the highest average attendance, and a record attendance of 73 was made.

Mr. Bigelow reported on the spiritual progress of the work. Approximately 500 pastoral calls were made and the evening services showed an increased attendance over the previous year.

The following officers were appointed: Clerk of the church, E. T. Brummel; treasurer, D. Clark; secretary-treasurer, Sunday school, Mrs. L. V. Bigelow.

A THUMB TO SUCK—The tiny baby usually sucks his thumb a little. But the happy, healthy little child in time grows out of this habit which causes too many parents anxiety.

FOR PARENTS ONLY:

Thumb Sucking Is Common First Year Of Baby's Life

By NANCY CLEAVER

"If only our baby didn't want to suck his thumb! Granny scolds him—I've slapped his hands and even painted bitter aloes on his thumb nails, but nothing stops him." a mother said anxiously. "Don't tie his hands or use a thumb-guard!" her friend advised. "That just made our Janey furious . . . In time she grew out of this habit—and then I wished I hadn't fussed so much about it!"

Parents might as well expect their small infant to suck his thumb! Babies need to suck. During the first year of a child's life, sucking during the feeding time is one of the main sources of pleasure. This instinct is strongest in his first six months, then it usually gradually lessens and is replaced.

In primitive tribes and in homes where a baby is fed, not by the clock, but "on demand," (when he cries for his meal,) thumb sucking is uncommon. A baby should never be hurried away from the breast or the bottle. He should have time to enjoy his food while the mother holds him in her arms. The mother who forces her child to drink from a cup at a very early age, and makes him forego the pleasure of sucking his milk, may find that the baby substitutes his thumb for a nipple.

RE-DIRECT ATTENTION

It is the rare infant who does not suck his thumb once in a while! A habit is easier to prevent than to break once it is firmly established. Giving baby a sterilized rubber ring to bite and suck, or handing the older baby a clean toy to hold, will often re-direct the youngster's attention away from his thumb.

Child specialists who have studied this, point out that repitition of anything that gives pleasure tends quickly to form a habit. The essential gratification which thumb sucking gives a baby or small child tempts him to engage in this activity when he is unsatisfied for any reason. Approximately one child out of every three or four sucks his thumb to some extent after baby-hood is left behind.

Only when this habit is long-continued it is serious. When the hand is pressed on the roof of the mouth or the lower jaws, the shape of the mouth and the formation of teeth may be harmed. Cases of very sore thumbs and mouth damage are comparatively rare.

Thumb sucking is fairly common. Mother and dad must do their best not to get upset. Nagging or punishing a child for this only makes it worse. Trying to reason with a tiny child or discussing it with another adult in his hearing only concentrate the boy's or girl's attention on thumb sucking.

If thumb sucking persists into the third and fourth year, parents usually look for suggestions from their own physician. The doctor, as a rule, does not prescribe an artificial way to force the child to stop. But rather he attempts to find the conditions under which the child resorts to thumb sucking. When the parent can remove the emotional cause, the thumb sucking will usually gradually disappear.

Mothers often observe that a child sucks his thumb when he is tired, or hungry or not feeling well. Perhaps he is shy or upset. Many children go through the day without thumb sucking until bed time.

Changing the child's routine with more rest or earlier hours for meals and bed may help. A doctor, after a routine physical examination, may prescribe a tonic or make a suggestion which will improve the child's general condition.

Occasionally a child who is in excellent physical condition sucks his thumb because he is bored. He needs interesting play material to keep him busy. If he is three or more he is beginning to long for companionship of other children his own age. Mother would do well to make provision for regular playtime with other little chums, rather than worry about thumb sucking. He'll leave it behind, sooner or later!"

Plan Re-Opening Millbrook Church

MILLBROOK (ENS)—The re-opening and dedication of St. Andrew's United Church will take place January 31. The church has been redecorated, a new oil-heating system installed, a cement floor laid in the Sunday school hall, washrooms with hot and cold running water put in, the church re-wired, new light fixtures installed, a new platform at the end rather than along the side of the Sunday school hall, and a new primary room has been built. Since the middle of October the congregation has had to worship elsewhere.

The speaker for the afternoon was Mrs. C. G. Boyd who introduced the material for the year's study, "A Voyage of Discovery" and "Where'er the Sun." She dealt with the Chinese situation in Canada and China. In doing research work in this connection here, Mrs. Boyd discovered that in the local Chinese community there are 60 people, of these seven are women, six or seven boys and one small child. Since the immigration laws were changed in 1947, it is now possible to bring in the wives and families of the men, but it is far from easy. Even those who are eligible for entry must live in Hong Kong six months before applying for entry into Canada. The Chinese work in Canada has progressed greatly and there is a new sense of security due to revised immigration laws and the ability of the Chinese people to enter into all walks of [illegible]

Mrs. Boyd referred her audience to an excellent article which appeared Tuesday entitled "Trade with China." She read portions of it and recommended the reading of it in full.

The speaker then dealt with the nature of the work in China, emphasizing the importance of frontier witness and the restrictions imposed by Communism but felt assured that as in the past through Christian thought both Christians and non-Christians have been aroused through persecution. Down through the centuries, wave after wave of opposition has battered at the church in China, but each succeeding wave has found that church a little stronger than before. This latest wave is more terrible than any other, but behind the Bamboo Curtain, the crurch is still confident.

Montreal Cinderella Brides Renting Wedding Dresses

MONTREAL (CP) — The high cost of getting married has brought with it in Montreal a new era of "Cinderella" brides—complete with wedding dresses that must be returned after the ceremony.

Managers of rental agencies, who will provide everything from veil to shoes for the big day, are welcoming the change. They say the rental business is on the upswing. One agency claims it outfits more than 30 brides a week during the summer months, when cupid is at his busiest.

Most customers are working girls who don't want to pay the $200 or $300 needed to buy a wedding dress. The agencies say they can serve the same purpose at less than half the cost. And since few dresses are used again after the wedding day the bride can save up to $250.

Cost of renting a dress varies with the number of times it is used. If the girl has a particular style in mind and wants to be the first to wear the dress the agency will make one up for her and charge from $50 to $100. Shoes, veil and all other accessories are included in the rental price.

For the second and third customers the price drops to $25 or $30. Bridesmaids' outfits can be rented within a $15-25 price range.

White is the favorite color among the customers, the agencies say. Tulle and net are the most asked-for materials.

"Regardless of the price of rental the investment is less than what the bride would pay if she were buying one in a store," one agency manager points out. "You wonder if many brides rent their dresses? Well, we're still in business, aren't we?"

Fine China Art Assoc. Topic

As Mr. Thomas O'Connor of Peterborough remarked during his talk at the Woman's Art Association meeting Friday afternoon, "Women best appreciate fine china."

So it was that his talk and films giving the history of Wedgwood china and illustrating how patterns and color are put on pottery clay were very much appreciated. The program not only informed the ladies of the beginning of their precious Wedgwood pieces and the many skilled craftsmen and artists required to produce each piece but they also learned to distinguish different types of earthenware and pottery.

Mr. O'Connor commenced his remarks by naming the first thing man made in pottery — a red clay flower pot — and remarked that his sample was not much superior to the very first one. He said the making of a cup and saucer was the next step. Exhibiting a perfectly plain cup, he remarked "Some of the finest porcelains are made without any decoration, and an undecorated piece of china may be the more expensive."

The clarity and pureness of the clay used in old china indicates the skill which the ancient potters had. Jasper pottery created by Josiah Wedgwood in 1740 to '45 was an improvement on the fine Wedgwood clay that no one has been able to imitate to this day. So it is pieces of Jasper that are most treasured in collections throughout the country.

The translucency of some china is due to the content of the clay and the firing. Bone china, for which England is so famous, is so-called because bones of ox only are burned and put into the clay. Mr. O'Connor told that the English potters used to import their ox bones from Argentina but since Peron became ruler that has been difficult and they have started saving the bones of English animals and find they do just as well.

"There is no difference in a fine continental porcelain plate and a fine English bone china plate, except for the bone content" he explained. "Some of the former lend themselves better to decoration," he added.

In speaking of the coloring, and firing, sometimes after the application of each color, he advised that gold is always an overlay and is put on over the glaze, because it cannot stand too great a firing. Therefore, he cautioned that gold will come off any china which is repeatedly washed in strong soaps or detergents.

He also had a caution about pouring hot liquids into fragile china. "Do you put your cream and sugar into your cup before your tea?" asked Mr. O'Connor. Those who don't already were advised to change to the English custom because it is followed knowing that the china will break from the expansion caused. He also warned them not to make tea in their good china teapots, but in the old brown Betty, transferring it when drawn to the warmed china pot.

Mr. O'Connor was very heartily thanked by president Mrs. Ford Turner. His samples of fine china, including a decorative Coronation souvenir bowl worth $130, were examined by the ladies during the tea hour following.

Mrs. Vaughn, Mrs. V. Gray, Mrs. H. Hill, and Mrs. W. Wilson served refreshments.

Continuing the Story of the Greek Ship Found Off the French Coast

We learn the ancient Greeks and Romans had handled drinking vessels for export to the various countries along the Mediterranean coasts and further afield. These vessels were massed produced in the thousands of dozens by a wooden type of stamping, were of good design and finished in a black lacquer that gave them a lustrous finish.

This has thrown our modern archeologists, as our beliefs were only the quality used these, but everyone then as now were free to buy luxury items.

The more we delve into ancient history, the more we are humbled by the fact of the marvels of our forefathers.

THE STRAIGHT, rounding coat and fitted coat make up the important silhouettes this spring. There's great variety in styling of the straight coat and even in the length. We show the fitted coat (left) in navy worsted with moulded shoulder line. This Ben Zuckerman design has horseshoe collar, is single-breasted. Dress-and-coat ensemble (centre) comprise one of spring's outstanding fashions. This particular design is by Mollie Parnis, with dress and coat in grey silk wool and worsted alpaca. There's a purse silk lining in the coat. Dress is moulded to the body. The seven-eighths length coat (right) in navy suede is an important spring silhouettte, has binding of grosgrain and single rhinestone button at neck. This Ben Zuckerman design is lined in white taffeta. Such coats are worn with narrow, simple skirts. News in coat fabrics is the trend to those that are lightweight and crisp.

Easy's The Word For Spring Coats - Straighter, Softer

By GAILE DUGAS
NEA Woman's Editor

NEW YORK (NEA)—Though the fitted coat is playing a return engagement this spring, the loose flared coat has undergone drastic changes. In its new form, it is straighter and slimmer, with rounded shoulders and sleeves, low-cut neckline and generally simple look.

This new, easy line in coats starts at the shoulder line. Some coats taper, some are perfectly straight but all have an easy softness that characterizes the look of all the new spring fashions.

Cupola is a new fashion term invented to describe one of spring's coat silhouettes: the one with bell-shaped shoulders. This rounded look extends to the sleeves and to the body of the coat itself. And it's a definite departure from the voluminous greatcoats of seasons past.

The fitted coat has extra importance this year because of the fitted and Empire lines in dresses. Fabric for the fitted, or princess, coat may be a very lightweight one this spring: alpaca or mohair (silk blend), silk and worsted mixtures. These lightweight fabrics are characteristic of many spring coats and of suits and ensembles, too. Put this fabric trend down to our changing climates and our liking generally for fabrics far lighter the year round than those we wore ten years ago.

Fur-trimmed coats appeared last spring; they're back in force this year. Not for everyone, perhaps, but for the woman who needs a second dressy coat, this might be it. Or she might pick one of the jewelled coats that are at their very best in silk or fleece. These come in both very short and long versions, are for daytime or evening.

Color choices vary in different parts of the country. But navy, beige, black and gray are liked in cities the country over, with pastels a close second.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Readers' Saturday Column

QUESTION: I want to know have you a recipe for canning beef and pork.—Mrs. Roy McE.

ANSWER Yes, I have the method, but it requires pressure cooking, which is the only method of canning meat that I recommend.

I will assume that you will use a pressure cooker and glass jars.

Cuts of meat commonly used for roasts or steaks are best for canning, for cuts that contain more connective tissue and bone may be canned as stew meat, hamburger, or other products utilizing small pieces, such as chili concarne, or may be used in soups. Wipe pieces of meat cut small enough to go into jars, remove bone and gristle, and leave on much of the fat for flavor. Cover with water, bring to boiling, and gently boil until the largest pieces of meat are grey, not red, at the centre. With sterile forks, or spoons or tongs, transfer pieces of meat to sterile jars, add 1 teaspoon salt (or a little more if desired) to each quart, fill jar to within one inch of top with boiling hot broth, and immediately put on sterile top. If using screw top sealers partially seal by screwing metal band tightly and then loosening slightly, but never unscrewing more than 1 inch. If using spring-top sealers, partially seal by pushing the long wire bail into groove, but do not spring down the lower bail. If using vacuum-type sealer dip lid in boiling water, put in place, then screw metal band as tightly as possible. Stand each jar as it is completed in pressure cooker containing hot water to about 1 inch depth. Jars should be standing on cooker rack (trivet). Lal cover on cooker while you prepare next jar. When all jars are ready, pour water into cooker to the height recommended by the manufacturer of your cooker—sufficient to prevent the cooker boiling dry during long processing. This water should be hot, but add it by pouring down side of cooker, not splashing jars. Fasten cooker securely. Heat, allowing petcock to remain open until steam escapes in steady stream, 3 minutes. Longer for a very large pressure cooker. Heat should be fairly low and steady during this period, to prevent fluctuation. Process pint jars at 250 degrees Fahr. (15 lbs. pressure for 85 minutes; quarts 100 minutes. As soon as time is up turn off heat, and as soon as pressure falls to zero, open petcock very slowly. Slowly remove the cover and allow jars to cool, away from draughts. Some of these instructions would be different if you are using tin cans and have your own seaming machine.

QUESTION: Will you please give me some tiups on Altitude cooking (8,000 feet to be exact)? I would like the information for friends of mine . . . quoting from their letter: "It takes ages to boil water, vegetables take hours to cook, constarch puddings turn out liquid, fried eggs are unrecognizable, and our doughnuts simply disintegrate into the fat" . . . they also wonder what changes to make in cake recipes.—Doris G.

ANSWER: Any references I make here are to 8,000 ft. altitude. In all cake recipes add ¼ cup of sifted flour. Increase baking temperature by 25 degrees. For each teaspoon baking powder called for in cakes or other mixtures leavened by baking powder reduce amount to ¼ teaspoon. This is also true of baking soda.

The State Experimental Station of the University of Wyoming, Laramie, Wyoming, will give you detailed information on this subject; also the Experimental Station at University of Colorado, Ford Collins, Colorado. So tell your friend to write directly to them, as their research departments are working at high altitudes on this subject constantly.

Find Complaining Old Man Big Problem

DEAR MISS DIX: My 80-year-old father is becoming quite a problem. He is now living with a member of the family, but is unhappy because there are young children in the household. He has lived with all of us from time to time, and he has complained constantly. My mother-in-law lives with us, and my father doesn't get along with her. Because I am the only one without youngsters, others of the family think I should send my mother-in-law away, give up my job and take Dad in. I know he wouldn't be happy even then, since the apartment is small and he complained when he was here before. The problem is not a financial one.

DORA G.

ANSWER: Elderly people have a difficult time adjusting themselves to a situation that includes no contemporaries. Surrounded by young folk, they are sadly aware of the fact that their own days are coming to an end. Your father would be far happier in the company of his own generation, even though they were strangers.

The best place for him would be a rest home, or residence for elderly people. This is by no means a heartless idea, as some people might suppose, but a constructive solution to a difficult problem.

DEAR MISS DIX: For two years I have been going steady with a man twice my age (I am 22). I am very much in love with him, and he says he loves me, yet though he proposed two years ago, he made no definite plans for our marriage. He gives as reasons for postponement: age difference and the fact that he is a travelling salesman and would be away much of the time. Neither of these reasons seemed important to me. He has proved his love for me in so many ways that I cannot understand his attitude toward marriage. DELLA R.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Avoiding the marriage issue usually is accepted as direct proof that a man doesn't love a girl. Your interpretation seems to be that your friend's actions prove his devotion. Perhaps you are deliberately closing your mind to the facts. If so, it's about time you opened your eyes. You are being woefully misled, and I can see no marital future for you with this beau. Cruel as the advice may be, you had better face the facts and plan your life along other lines.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: When I was 18, I fell in love with Billie. We had to put off marriage, but we lived together for awhile and I became pregnant. Our bay was born while Billie was overseas. She is almost two years old now, and loved by both Billie's family and mine. Her father is out of service now, and though he buys all the baby's clothes, he's never said a word about our being married. H. K.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You seem to feel that Billie loves you, and since you admit loving him, I can't see what stands in the way of marriage. Perhaps this is the one case in a thousand that calls for a little family interference. Since you young people can't work things out for yourselves, the parents might. Certainly everything possible should be done to bring you and Billie together, if chiefly for the baby's sake. That your young man has a sense of responsibility is shown in his desire to do everything in a material way, that he can. Perhaps he just needs assurance of your love.

DEAR MISS DIX: A young man about 25 has recently moved into our neighborhood. I see him every day, but don't know much about him. He has quite captured my heart, with the result that I can't interest myself in anything. How can I get his attention? I am 16.

RHODA D.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: Before your unrequited love goes too far, how about finding out something about your handsome hero? Perhaps he's married. It's very difficult for a youngster of 16 to attract the attention of a man so much older. After all, to him you're just a child. Better turn your daydreams into other channels.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: Sara and I have gone steady since she was 14 and I 16. During the five years of our friendship, she never had girl friends and I was the first and only boy she ever dated. Now, she is working, and making many new friends, and seems more interested in social activities with her girl friends than she is in me. D. W.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: You girl is discovering what she should have known before—the convivial companionship of girl friends. You both made a mistake in monopolizing each other so completely through the very years that should see the building of friendships. Try to understand that she is beginning to balance her life, and that her intention is, by no means, to eliminate you. Learn to share her friendship and to live a more social life.

Church Marks Week Of Prayer

OMEMEE (ENS)—The first of two meetings to mark the week of prayer was held in Trinity United Church, Monday evening.

The Rev. A. W. Smith, rector of Christ Church, was the speaker and took for his subject, "The Journey of Life." He spoke of the value of prayer along the road, pointing out the miracles of the Battle of Britain and of Dunkirk, which followed national days of prayer. He was living in England during the war.

The second service was held in Christ Church on Thursday evening when the Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt gave the address. Speaking on "Guidance for Life's Journey," he stressed the importance of each individual to God and the fact that He has given us both a guidebook and a guide. Special prayers were read by both clergymen and hymns suiting the theme were sung at both services.

6—In Memoriam

ARCHER—In loving memory of Rev. W. R. Archer, B.A., who passed into the Homeland on January 10, 1952.
—Fondly and proudly remembered by his wife and family.

EVANS (nee Bella Pooley)—In loving memory of my dear daughter who passed away January 10, 1936.
A page in our book of memories
Is gently turned today.
—Ever remembered by mother and sisters Irene and Nancy.

STOREY—In loving memory of Fred Storey who passed away January 9, 1951.
Nothing can ever take away
The love a heart holds dear
Fond memories linger every day
Remembrance keeps him near.
—Ever remembered by Sid and Elsie.

STOREY—In loving memory of Fred Storey, who passed away January 9, 1951.
We often sit and think of him when we are all alone,
For memory is the only friend that grief can call its own;
Like ivy on the withered oak; when all other things decay,
Our love for him will still keep green and never fade away.
—Ever remembered by his wife and family.

SNELGROVE—In loving memory of Mrs. Herb Snelgrove, who passed away January 9, 1946.
Gone is the face we loved so dear,
Silent is the voice we loved to hear;
Too far away for sight or speech
But not too far for thought to reach.
Sweet to remember her who once was here,
And who, though absent, is just as dear.
—Ever remembered by husband and sister.

WAND—In memory of Edmund Wand who passed away January 10, 1953.
We miss you Ed and your cheery smile,
Our thoughts are with you all the while.
—Always remembered by wife and family, till we meet again.

WHITWHORTH—In loving memory of my wife, Maryann Whitworth, who passed away, January 9, 1943.
Thy will be done", seems hard to say.
When one we loved has passed away,
Some day, perhaps we'll understand
When we meet again in that better land.
—Ever remembered by her husband William and family.

Tough-Acting Bandit Forces Safe Open

TORONTO (CP)—A tough-acting bandit Friday night forced manager Louis Abroms, 40, of an east-end hotel to open his safe and hand over $1,304 in cash and $216 in cheques.

Before leaving, he ripped out the telephone cords and locked Abroms in his office.

Envoys Talk Peace

MEXICO CITY (AP)—The ambassadors of both the United States and Russia conferred Friday with President Ruiz Cortines—and both spoke of peace. U.S. ambassador Francis White and Russian ambassador Anatole Kulazhenkov said that in the years ahead there should be major progress in solving major problems between the East and the West.

Newly Rich, Suffocates

VIENNA (Reuters)—An old Austrian gardener who had just been told he had inherited $120,000 from relatives in the United States was suffocated here Friday night by the fumes of a gas jet he had forgotten to light. Franz Wendl, 65, had recently received a letter from the U.S. informing him that relatives there had left him the money.

TEARFUL ERROR—Constables Charles White and Les Halstead, of Hamilton, were moved to tears by a real sob story. And they weren't the only ones. The entire police force burst into tears when a tear gas bomb was recently let off by mistake in the garage at Central Police Station. The bomb was let off by a mechanic who mistook it for a signal flare.

Bavaria's Gala Oktoberfest Draws 100,000 Every Day

The conundrum of Germany continues to intrigue me, and I think I may be on the way to understanding. Here in Bavaria I have met many people who correspond to Tom, Dick and Hortense back home, and whose generous, evidently genuine hospitality has been overwhelming. Then something happened which bolstered my morale exceedingly, and gave me a certain feeling of belonging, writes John Gould from Munich, Bavaria, to The Christian Science Monitor.

IN GAYER MOODS

For one of those silly reasons, a number of people have approached me on the streets and asked me directions. That happens all over. In Boston or New York, I am able to give the customary answer and say, "I'm a stranger here myself . . ." I tried that first in Paris. A motorist drove up and unloosed himself, asking something about the route to so-and-so, naming a place I never heard of, and probably never will. Sometimes, in my gayer moods, I proceed to give handfuls of directions, and around home I can sometimes get a tourist up into the wilds of Litchfield Plains and hopeless lost.

But in Paris my reaction was to shrug my shoulders like a native, and murmur something about being a stranger here myself. This has happened since a fantastic number of times, but on the day in question I squared my shoulders, made inward resolution that I would join the society, and I did my best. I made out very well.

The inquiry came from a stalwart Bavarian farmer who was dressed in the native accent, looking like any farmer anywhere who had put on his "other ones" to take a holiday—fairly reeking with the exuberance of being in the big city with nickels jingling in his pocket. He merely asked directions.

I smiled as warmly as I know how, grasped him with good Rotarian friendliness by his green lapels, and told him to speak slowly and with patience, that I was a stranger here myself, and would do my best. Now, money can't buy the pleased expression that came into his face. I've met dozens of businessmen here, and they exude a kind of continental politeness that, to an American, will always seem forced and somewhat false. Not this. The man and I were suddenly on good terms, and he said clearly and distinctly that he was looking for the Oktoberfest.

LIKE STATE FAIR

Now I hadn't seen this Oktoberfest, but I had planned to the next Sunday evening, when it was scheduled to close after several weeks of gaiety. It is a kind of State Fair thing, held each year since the beginnings, and it has become a sort of National Bavarian Celebration, perhaps ranking with our World's Series, or the cherry-blossom swing through Washington. Being Bavarian, it is said to be largely so—with gustatory splurges, but also with shooting galleries, carousels, souvenir booths, and all such as that.

Everybody since I first set foot in Germany had asked me not to miss the Oktoberfest, since it shows the German people in their gaiest mood. I knew where it was, because at night the lights of the area flood the sky, and I had been near it by trolly car and taxi while on other errands.

So I acted sly with my man, taking on that expression that suggests I do not wholly approve of the course he is taking, a kind of tch-tch look of surprise, for the Oktoberfest is much greater by inference than it turns out to be in fact. You would look and act that way if your resident justice said the only thing he ever read was Moon Mullins and Gravel Gertie. My man looked appropriately sheepish, and explained that he and his wife were having their first outing in a long time.

I pointed up the street, indicated the electric cars, and wished him a good time. He shook my hand, introduced me to his wife, who also shook heartily, and away they went into the Munich hurly-burly. I felt as if I had conquered something worth while, and when the couple turned at the first cross-over and waved back at me before they started across, I felt as if Bavaria wasn't quite as strange to American notions as I had thought.

Even the most lighthearted must be depressed here by souvenirs of history. The infinite energy of the German people has smoothed out many a rubble heap and put up the building again, but there is still plenty of rubble. Munich people live with it, and seem to take it as a sad but inevitable consequence of the war. I think they do resent many of the details of the occupation, but the bombing is merely history and a fact that can be readily reduced to "c'est la guerre."

I have done my stint of perusing the bombed places, and have naturally wondered if the terrific destruction can become a permanent lesson in the follies of war.

Secure Food For Canaries

FERRARA, Italy (AP) — Ever hear of flea fishing?

Scores of boys and unemployed men are making a living at it in the swamps and lakes of the Po river delta here. The fleas sell by the pint and wind up in cellophane packages on the world market.

The odd industry goes back over a century. A Ferrara sea captain sailed home from the China seas to retire. He brought back a few buckets filled with goldfish and poured them out into a little lake near here.

Apparently the same buckets contained Chinese water fleas. They bred by the millions and almost annual Po delta floods spread them throughout the swamplands.

Recently, someone got the idea the fleas were a health food for canaries and fancy tropical fish. Boys skim them from the water with fine-mesh cloth nets. They are fattened on ox blood, then dried and pressed into cakes. These are packaged and shipped.

Hughes Studio Fined $25,000 For Film

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Howard Hughes' RKO studio was fined $25,000 Friday by the movie code administrator for exhibition and advertising of Jane Russell's latest picture, "French Line."

The movie was given a premiere at St. Louis last month without the production code administration's seal of approval.

Joseph Breen, production code administrator, termed it "offensive because of indecent exposure" during a dance number by Miss Russell. The studio took no appeal from Breen's ruling and failed to make the changes he suggested in the picture and its advertising.

Married Women Allowed To Teach

KITCHENER (CP) — Women teachers in Kitchener who marry in future won't have to quit their classes and their blackboards after one year as at present.

The public school board decided Friday night to change the one-year rule but the contracts for newly-wed women teachers will be on a year-to-year basis.

Previously, a woman teacher married during the summer holidays could teach only for one year and if married after Sept. 1, could finish that year and teach for one more year.

Leaf Ball Team Trades 3 Players

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League today announced the trade of three men to Charleston of the American Association for Don Griffen, 29; a catcher.

Griffen, expected to be the Leafs' regular backstop, hit .290 for Charleston last year.

Eight Children Perish In Blazing Houses

MEDWAY, Me. (AP) — Flames that broke out while their parents were away turned a one-room home into a blazing death trap for three sleeping children Friday night, raising to 11 the tragic five-day child fatality toll in Maine fires.

Cause of the blaze was no determined.

Eight other Maine children perished last Monday in two separate fires—five at Old Orchard Beach and three at Sebago Lake.

ALONE IN HOUSE

BELTON, S. C. (AP) — Five Negro children, sleeping in a room that their mother had rented only three days before, perished Friday night in a fire that destroyed a farmhouse near here.

Police said the children were alone in the five-room frame house while the mother, Mrs. Mary Williams, was shopping. Other occupants of the house were away visiting friends.

Latin Americas Plan First Fair

By ALFONSO MAURIA

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—The first "fair of the Americas" will open Jan. 14 in Argentina's Mendoza province in the foothills of the Andes.

The accent of the fair will be on Latin America, its products and industries. Chile, just across the Andes from Mendoza, will be the largest foreign exhibitor. Altogether, 14 Latin American countries and a number of Argentina government departments will have exhibits.

The fair will occupy 50 acres in the 2,000-acre General San Martin Park. A flood-lit night club and gambling casino are under construction on an island in the park lake.

A few miles away, in a natural valley behind the "Cerro de la Floria" (hill of glory)—named in honor of Gen. San Martin's march across the Andes during the war of independence — an open theatre, carved in natural stone, is nearing completion after four years' work. It will have capacity for nearly 100,000 people.

Rare tropical foods, hardwoods of Brazil heavier than water, and unusual minerals found in the Andes will take their place in the exhibits at the side of domestic products, wool, pottery, silverware, plastics, engineering products and Argentine motorcars.

Authorize Export Of Power To Ontario

WASHINGTON (AP)—The U. S. federal power commission Friday authorized Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation, Syracuse, N. Y., to export up to 250,000,000 kilowatt-hours of electric energy annually to the Ontario hydro-electric power commission.

The power to be exported will be generated at the steam and hydro plants of Niagara Mohawk and will be transmitted over facilities of the St. Lawrence River Power Co., Massena, N. Y.

The commission said the export of the power "will not impair the sufficiency of electric supply within the United States." Niagara Mohawk at present receives electric energy from the Ontario commission.

Police Detain Lord Montagu Again

LYMINGTON, Eng. (Reuters)—Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, 27, Oxford-educated bachelor peer, was detained by police here today.

Details of the charge were withheld until a special session of local justices is held tonight.

Montagu was acquitted last month of a charge of a homosexual attack on a 14-year-old Boy Scout on his vast estate near here, but was ordered to stand trial again on a second charge of indecent assault against the boy.

Three policemen called on Lord Montagu at his home at dawn today. He went with them to the local police station where he had breakfast.

Target Of $120,000 Set For Festival

STRATFORD, Ont. (CP)—A target of $120,000 has been set for the capital fund campaign of the Stratford Shakespearean Festival of Canada Foundation, the campaign committee announced Friday night.

The campaign is scheduled to open Feb. 1. A foundation spokesman said $120,000 was the amount needed to assure the festival's continued success.

Seek Arab Boycott

CAIRO (Reuters)—The powerful Arab League Council will be asked to boycott British goods because of Britain's "hostility" to member countries, reliable Egyptian sources said here today. The proposal is expected when the council discusses Anglo-Egyptian relations at its 20th meeting, which started today.

Important Freight Rate Ruling To Be Made

By JOHN LEBLANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—One of the most important freight rate decisions in Canada's history will be delivered by the board of transport commissioners early this year.

An entirely new concept of Canadian rate-setting is at issue. A board decision favoring a railway proposal would add many millions of dollars to Canada's annual freight bill.

Because of its potential effect on the economy, the board has spent months drafting its judgment, due this month and expected to be one of the longest in years. It will embody the results of a special board audit of Canadian Pacific Railway accounts.

CPR PROPOSAL

The CPR is the chief advocate of the proposed new system, which calls for Canada's greatest change in rate-making in a half century.

At present, the board establishes rate levels from time to time on the basis of the current financial requirements of the CPR, which it designates the "yardstick" line for this purpose.

Now the CPR wants the board to switch to the so-called "rate base and rate of return" method used for some public utilities. This would give it a set annual return on a net investment base, which the railways having permission to hoist or lower rates within that ceiling.

The company has asked the board to designate its investment base as $1,100,000,000 and allow it a 6½-per-cent yield on that amount. Estimates made by opponents of the proposal, which include all provincial governments except Quebec and Ontario, have been that this would mean a rate-increase potential of up to 30 per cent.

HUGE BOOST

That could mean around $150,000,000 a year on top of current annual freight costs.

However, the CPR has told the board it will settle—for now—for a nine-per-cent increase, and its application included a formal request for that amount. This would run to about $50,000,000 a year for the major lines.

The government-owned Canadian National Railways has taken a neutral stand on the general question of a rate-base system. But it has told the board it will accept a nine-per-cent increase if it should be granted.

The Canadian Pacific's application was made originally in July, 1952. The board held hearings on it last February. Then, after some months of consideration, it called the parties together again in October to hear evidence and argument on one phase of the CPR's finances.

SPECIAL AUDIT

Meanwhile, it sent its own auditors into the company's offices to check CPR accounts. A lengthy report from the auditors is expected to be included in the commissioners' decision.

While the board's decision is being kept secret, some freight rate experts express doubt that the tribunal will grant any increase on the basis sought by the CPR—that is, without proving immediate financial need.

They note that, in granting the last increase of seven per cent last March, the board expressed "concern" over the ability of the Canadian economy to sustain successive rate boosts.

Any increase on the CPR terms, too, would be sure to stir up a storm, both among the provincial governments and in Parliament. In the last few years, there have been clamorings against increases granted by the board on the basis of current financial need of the railways.

40 Years Since Henry Ford Set $5 A Day Minimum

DETROIT (AP) — Forty years ago this week Henry Ford gave the industrial world a jolt it long remembered. He established the $5 a day minimum wage in his factories.

Factory wages then ranged from $1 to $2.50 a day, depending on skill.

Ford's action was of tremendous significance, socially and economically. It brought instantaneous criticism as well as praise.

"Industrial suicide," some of Ford's fellow manufacturers wailed.

"Just social justice," Ford replied.

"It will ruin the Ford company and others with it," cried the critics. "Ford is trying to buy the workers' souls."

"It is a sound thing, economically and socially," Ford retorted, "and the time is not far distant when none can fail to realize it."

The industrial bombshell Henry Ford dropped on his competitors, of course, did not ruin them or the Ford Motor Co.

Detroit then had a population of 658,000 persons. Ford employed about 30,000. But there were many thousands of others idle at the time. The day after announcement of the new wage scale 15,000 persons gathered at the gates of the Ford plant seeking the $5 jobs. Thousands of others were attracted from other sections of the country.

It was a milling mob that required squads of police to keep in order. The influx of outsiders subsided only after the company announced only Detroiters would be given immediate employment.

That was 40 years ago. Ford built 265,000 units in 1914. Last year its output totalled about 1,550,000 vehicles.

Liberals Threaten To Upset Strong Man Of Honduras

By PAUL SANDERS

TEGUCIGALAPA, Honduras (AP) — Honduras, the least-developed of the Central American republics, is working up to its hottest election fight in 20 years—if a coup doesn't prevent the balloting set for next October.

Charges of "dictatorship" and "communism" bounce back and forth dozens of times each day.

The big issue is whether the country is to continue in the grip of its strong man, 77 - year - old former president Tiburcio Carias Andino, or is to have "new deal" reforms pushed by moderates, the Liberal party and left-wingers.

The conservative followers of Carias in his National party see the Liberals as heavily infiltrated with Communists. These charges bring angry denials from Liberal leaders.

The Liberals want revision of the concession held by the United Fruit Co., the country's biggest concern. The fruit company pays the country's highest wages for farm labor, but the Liberals contend that Honduras isn't getting enough financial return from the firm's operations.

In this situation the charge inevitably arose that the Liberals were influenced by Guatemala, whose Red-dominated government expropriated thousands of acres of fruit company land, and by Costa Rica, whose government has asked revision of the company concession in that country.

GALVEZ OPPOSES CARIAS

Split with Carias on the reform issue is President Juan Manuel Galvez, a National who was the strong man's hand - picked candidate in the 1948 elections. Galvez has given the country its most progressive administration in 20 years.

When the Galvez backers — the reform wing of the National party—came out for further and sweeping advances, Carias split with them.

Without relinquishing his grip on the National party, he left the presidency in 1948 and has directed the campagn against constitutional reforms sponsored by both Galvez' Reformistas and the Liberals.

Poverty and backwardness not only background the political situation here, but make the country the target for underground Communist activity.

The country has a population of a little more than 1,500,000, about 60 per cent of it illiterate. Wages for farm workers run around $1 a day in most of the country, though somewhat higher in the fruit company operations.

Twice Kicked Out By Army Strong Man Again In Power

By PAUL SANDERS

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Three times elected president of Ecuador and twice kicked out by army revolts, Jose Maria Velasco Ibarra again has set up a strong man regime in this little South American country.

His opponents charge he has junked the constitution by arbitrary edicts and illegal acts. Efforts to concentrate power in his own hands cut short his two previous presidencies, in the middle '30s and again in the middle '40s. Both times the army applied the boot and sent him into exile.

Two days after his inauguration in 1952, Velasco Ibarra dismissed about 60 senior army officers and replaced them with men more sympathetic to him.

Elections next June will replace the Congress. Velasco Ibarra, who won in 1952 by a big plurality of the country's 350,000 votes, had a large majority in the old Congress. Besides his own followers, he had the backing of the old-line Conservative party. He also has the support of the Arne (Ecuadorean Nationalist Revolutionary Action), a fascist-like group patterned on the Spanish Falange.

OPPOSITION STRENGTHENS

The government is likely to get a rough fight in June. A new "Democratic front" of opposition elements and independents is shaping up.

Regardless of how Velasco Ibarra makes out in the new Congress, there's no doubt of his appeal to a great number of Ecuadoreans, most of whom live in poverty and long for better things. Velasco Ibarra promises them roads, schools, hospitals and a better standard of living.

Even his bitterest foes admit Velasco Ibarra is an outstandingly honest man and will tolerate not the slightest evidence of graft. They admit he is able and one of the hardest workers the country has known. But, they contend, he is impulsive, violent, and has an obsession for power.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP)—A masked bandit staged a one-man holdup early this morning on Glengarry avenue and escaped with a leatherette bag containing $400 in currency and an undetermined amount of cash.

The victim, Jack Paschuk, proprietor of the Drake Hotel at London and Glengarry, told police he was leaving the hotel with the night's receipts when the money bag was grabbed by a man disguised with a black mask.

Assist Parents In Detailing Safety Routes

Between your home and school there is some one route which is safe for your child. If you are a wise parent you will find out which route it is and see that your child knows it too and uses it.

The Peterborough schools safety patrol organization under the [illegible] is at present making an effort to assist parents in this matter. A printed sheet will be sent to parents of children attending school for the first time or to families who have moved into a new district.

This sheet will detail the best considered route for the child and what special danger points there are along it. Parents are then requested to go over the route with the child. If they discover a better route, or are quite satisfied with the suggested one, then such information will be returned to th teachers and traffic officers. In this way teachers and parents will know the child is travelling back and forth to school over a patrolled area.

To ensure that safety patrol maintain a high standard of efficiency they are to fill in a 40-question form. The questions are deesigned to test the child's fund of safety knowledge and to act also as a refresher course.

The results of the examination will b studied by school teachers and any child with a poor percentage will be given the necessary instruction to bring him up to the required standard.

Cup Of Coffee Stays 10 Cents

Peterborough restaurant and lunch bar owners today scoffed at a prediction from large cities that the 10-cent cup of coffee is just e memory, that the usual morning pepper-upper will likely cost 12c in the near future.

The cause for the predicted rise is said due to increases in coffee prices.

At present in Peterborough a cup of coffee usually 10c for the first cup and then 5c a cup for the second, third and so on. A few lunch bars especially those in the downtown area, offer the second cup free during the morning hours. Still others are placing a cup of coffee before customers for only a five-cent piece.

Norman Bowler, operator of the Rendezvous Grill, said, "I don't think we'll ever get it (the 12-cent coffee) in Peterborough. It's not for me anyway."

Mr. Bowler pointed out he offers an extra cup free in the mornings, then in the afternoon charges five cents for the extra cup. With meals he gives as much coffe as one wants for a dime.

MAKING FAIR PROFIT

At the present price, he added, the lunch bar owners are still making a fair profit.

Should the price of coffee (about 95c a pound wholesale for the best to the restaurant owners) be increased, say to the predicted $1.10 a pound, then Mr. Bowler said he would quite probably cut off the extras, the free cup in the morning, the five-center in the afternoon and all-for-a-dime at meals, for a straight 10-cent coffee.

W. C. oFntaine, operator of Babe's Place, now selling coffee at 10c for the first cup and five cents thereafter, replied to the 12-cent coffee, saying, 'Mine will stay at 10c."

"It's not necessary — we make enough now," said Mr. Fontaine. "But if the wholesale price goes up, say to $1.10, we'll leave it alone and the second cup will be a straight 10c."

As far as the few lunch bars now selling coffe for five cents, if the wholesale price goes up, so will the cup of coffe, but only to 10 cents.

Farmers' Market Has Few Buyers

A biting wind, sleet and snow cut the number of weekly farm market customers down to a handful today at the up-town market. There were only scattered sales of fowl, eggs, baking and home-made clothing.

The fowl, mostly confined to chickens and a few ducks, sold fairly well until 11 a.m. and then were very slow in moving. The chickens started at 55c and 50c a pound, the higher priced chickens gradually dropping to 50c shortly after the market opened.

The ducks, only two stalls had them in any number, were slow at 55c a pound. There were no turkeys or geese.

Eggs were the best seller on the market and by 11 a.m. the stalls were gradually bing celared. A few pullet eggs were offered at 45c but the genral price was 45c a dozen. The other prices, 55c a dozn for ovrsize, 50c for large and 45c for medium were general throughout the market.

The home baking, considering the small market, sold rather quickly. Bread was offered at 25c a loaf, white buns, 30c a dozen, brown buns, 35c a dozen, fruit biscuits 35c a doenz, cookies, 20c to 35c a dozen, pies, 50c, tarts, 45c a dozen and date loaves, 40c each.

STOUFFVILLE (CP) — A truck towing a tractor Friday kicked up a piece of ice. The ice hit Edward McDonald, who was at the wheel of the tractor, fractured his skull and knocked him unconscious. His condition was described as "fair."

RESCUE—Jacklyn Takahashi, a Lodi, California, toddler, spent several unhappy moments this week in a 10-inch water pipe before being freed. She became trapped while playing in a house under construction.

Queen Given Air View Of Mountain Causing Wreck

WELLINGTON, N. Z. (AP)—Queen Elizabeth flew from New Plymouth to Wellington today and got an air view of snow-covered Mount Ruapehu, New Zealand's highest mountain and probable cause of its great Christmas Eve rail disaster.

Experts say collapse of snow holding back waters in the 8,175-foot mountain's crater lake sent thousands of tons of water down the Wangachu river, which flooded and washed away a railroad bridge. The train, crowded with royal tour sightseers, crashed into a gorge, killing 136 persons.

The Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh got a glimpse also of the cone of mount Ngannahoe, the country's principal active volcano, but it was not giving off any smoke today.

The Queen will open New Zealand's Parliament here Monday.

New Zealanders in swim suits, shorts and cricket outfits dropped their week-end play to cheer the royal couple as they arrived in the capital.

An estimated 25,000 spectators, including thousands of children, clustered along the road. Their ranks were spotted by thousands of colorful leis, South Sea festive wreaths.

Flags and bunting brightened Wellington buildings, and a chorus of whistles from trains and ships sounded a welcome as the Queen and duke entered the city. The royal liner Gothic, which carried the two across the Pacific, joined the chorus from her berth in the harbor.

After a quiet first day in New Zealand's capital, the Queen will begin a heavy program of official appearances, broken by a visit to the Wellington race track next Thursday.

Plant Building Plans Cost $125,000,000

OSHAWA (CP) — William A. Wecker, president of General Motors of Canada Limited, said today that by the end of this year it is estimated that the three leading Canadian automotive manufacturers will have completed new building projects costing $125,000,000.

This expansion is reflected in the enlarged working force within the industry, he said in a statement. Last year the estimated payroll was $145,000,000, as against $132,000,000 in 1952.

Mr. Wecker said that during 1953 Canada's car and truck production reached a record 485,000 units, 12 per cent more than in 1952.

Lord Plunket Guest Of Queen Mother

SANDRINGHAM, England (AP) Lord Plunket, a tall and handsome captain in the Irish Guards, came here Friday as the house guest of Princess Margaret and Queen Mother Elizabeth at the royal lodge.

Lord Plunket—known as Patrick to the Royal Family—is a temporary equerry to the Queen and has been Margaret's frequent escort to theatre parties in London.

'Quake Hits Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP)—A sharp earth tremor shook the cities of Talca and Chillan south of Santiago Friday night. The panic-stricken residents, mindful of a quake which virtually destroyed the towns in 1939, rushed into the streets, but there were no reports of damage or injuries.

By-Election Called

EDMONTON (CP)—A provincial by-election in Red Deer constituency will be held Feb. 15, the Alberta government announced. Nomination day is Feb. 1. The by-election was made necessary by the death Dec. 23 of D. A. Ure, agriculture minister, who had held the seat of the Social Credit party since 1943.

1954 Will Be Most Satisfying Year

MONTREAL (CP) — This year should be a satisfying one from all important standpoints, the Montreal Gazette says today in its annual commercial review and forecast.

The satisfactory year is expected "even should the apprehended recessive adjustment occur."

enjoyed another productive, progressive and prosperous year, a continuation of pyramiding development and output since the Second World War.

"Despite the declaration of the general economic pace toward the latter part of the year, despite the 'soft spots' and sticky problems that arose, the year as a whole set new high points of advance in the major check-points of the nation's economic well-being.

"The balance of prospects—pro and con—for 1952 was that the momentum sustained in the past year would carry over into this year, as well as the soft spots and problems."

OUTPUT CLIMBS AGAIN

Key yardsticks registered further gains. Volume and value of output—agricultural production, primary natural products, industrial turnout—climbed to new high levels. Development of primary resources and expansion of productive facilities of all kinds continued on a large scale, supported by a still greater tide of capital investment both from within the [illegible]

As a result, indices for employment, earnings and spending-power reached records.

A feature of the general economic picture was "the pronounced acceleration of expenditure for new construction, especially of residential units." Housing construction should get a further fillip from projected legislation.

The review finds it significant that nearly half of Canada's net adverse trade balance was traceable to a decline of $114,000,000 in exports, "which in turn arose from shrinkage in business with all countries other than the United States."

KEEN COMPETITION

"This is plain warning to Canadian producers and exporters that countries abroad are not only better able to meet their own needs for products supplied by Canada in the post-war era but are able to pick and choose because of sharper competition from other exporting nations. . . .

"Canada also faces keener competition and the [illegible] ping prices in the [illegible] which is paralleled by surpluses in the other big wheat-exporting countries—the U.S., Australia and Argentina. . . ."

Opening 1954 Stock Market Week Strong One On All Exchanges

By BOB JOHNSTONE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The opening stock market week of 1954 was a strong one on Toronto, Montreal and New York exchanges.

Industrials issues attracted interest on all exchanges and sales were brisk for most of the week in Toronto and New York, but Montreal, although stronger, showed less enthusiasm.

In Toronto, industrials and western oils were the opening features of the new year. Manufactures, utilities and banks were the leaders, with steels and liquors close behind. Several utilities with interests in the west and the Prairie region were strong.

The new Pembina field issues continued to form the basis of western oil strength and Merrill and Canadian Collieries led the market most of the way.

Golds and base metals were also ahead on the Toronto market.

URANIUMS STALLED

The long-awaited uranium market that observers have been predicting for two months, is still not off the ground. Several times during the week, uranium issues tried futile drives.

The Friday-to-Friday Toronto index comparison showed industrials up 4.08 at 316.44, golds up 2.53 at 70.92, base metals up 1.52 at 141.01 and western oils up 4.72 at 90.85.

The Montreal market this week was strong but dull. Steels and banks were strong most of the week. Papers reversed their late-1953 trend and slipped. Mining issues were stronger and western oils finished a little higher.

The week-to-week comparison showed banks up .76 at 36.76, utilities up .5 at 93.3, industrials up 3.1 at 187.3, combined up 1.9 at 156.0, papers down 6.6 at 769.0 and golds up 2.48 at 50.97.

New York's opening session was strong with utilities and industrials in the lead. At mid-week autos led stocks lower and the rest of the week showed an irregular drop with railroads and utilities joining the fall on Thursday.

A slight recovery was made Friday but the market closed lower on the quietest session since November. The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down 50 cents at $108.10.

On the Canadian bond market, Household Finance Corporation of Delaware sold a Canadian security firm, A. E. Ames and Co., a $15,000, 4¾ per cent bond issue with a 1969 maturity date.

Seriously Injured In Car Collision

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Mrs. Margaret Cline, 43, of Brockville was seriously injured Friday when the car in which she was riding was in collision with another.

Mrs. Cline suffered fractures of the jaw, skull and ribs. Her son, Edwin, 6, and another passenger, Doris Potts, 12, of Windsor, suffered cuts.

In the other car, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Viau of Ottawa suffered cuts and Mr. Vrau had shoulder injuries. Police said the Cline car was driven by Lawrence Gamble of Windsor.

Diplomats Cleared

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Seventy-six persons, including diplomats, political leaders and army men have been cleared of charges of disrespect and subversive activities in the last two days in Argentina. In all, 538 persons have been acquitted by judges or released by federal police throughout the country since Congress in December approved an amnesty law proposed by President Peron.

Reach Isolated Village

MOENA, Italy (AP)—Rescuers finally reached the isolated Appennine village of Montemezzano Friday after a five-day battle with snowdrifts and found all 15 families safe but short of food. However, several other communities in the Italian Alps and Appennines remained cut off in the most violent series of snowstorms in 15 years. The storms have taken at least 12 lives in Italy.

Eight-Sided Ornament

less one is careful, one may be lured into trying to paint with one hand and tie nautical knots with the other. Even this interviewer took home with him "The Boatman's Manual," property of Judge Kennedy, to whom it will soon revert. Only a man as gifted and varied as Judge Kennedy has time to be eight persons in one—and has the adaptability to do it well.

A clue to Judge Kennedy's judicial disposition is in his chambers at the Court House. They have recently been modestly redecorated and the Judge has put up his private collection of 'Spy' caricatures of men of law of the last century. Judge Kennedy chuckles over the caption to the one of Lord Coleridge: "He is a classical scholar, a metaphysician and a High Churchman, and a writer who once used to split hairs in the Edinburgh Review. But unfortunately he also thinks himself a wit. Anything so superior and refined as Lord Coleridge was never known; anything so inferior and bad as Lord Coleridge's jokes was never heard even from the Bench."

Judge Kennedy has brought with him to Peterborough the wisdom gained from a large and interested experience, and the wit of a man of cultivated mind and generous curiosity. Unfortunately, there is no 'Spy' to do a just portrait of him.

Translator Wins Award

LONDON (Reuters)—Dr. Arthur Waley, who has never been to China, has been awarded the 1953 Queen's Gold Medal for poetry for the "exceptional merit" of his translations from the Chinese language, Buckingham Palace announced Friday night. Before he began to translate Chinese and Japanese prose and poetry into English, more than 35 years ago, the West knew little of eastern literature.

Escort Sure Marion McDowell Still Alive

He was with the lively 17-year-old blonde Dec. 6 the night she vanished from a secluded lovers' lane in suburban Scarborough township.

He says he was slugged by a hooded stranger who yanked open the door of the car in which Wilson and the girl were sitting. He says he saw his assailant drive away with Marion in another car—but he is not certain whether the girl was in the car trunk or inside the car.

Wilson told his story of the apparent kidnapping in an interview with writer Ken MacTaggart of The Globe and Mail. The paper published the story today under a six-column headline on the front page, with pictures of Jimmy and Marion.

The youth's views agree with the police theory that the girl, whose interests ranged from roller-skating and motorcycle riding to going out with boys, probably is alive. The police reached this conclusion after a yard-by-yard search of the township by hundreds of persons turned up no trace of a body or other evidence of a slaying.

THINKS GIRL ALIVE

"I think Marion is alive," said Wilson, who recently passed a voluntary lie detector test in Buffalo with what police described as "flying colors."

"I think she is the kind of a girl who would have to be held prisoner. She loves her family and wouldn't want to worry her mother and dad.

"It's just my hunch, but I can't making a stab in the dark, I think it must have been some guy after Marion.

"That means he wouldn't want to kill her. He wanted her bad enough to go to all this risk and trouble. So she would be alive."

Probation Officers Praised For Fine Work By Porter

TORONTO (CP)— Attorney-General Porter Friday praised the work of probation officers and agreed that county sheriffs are a fifth wheel in the present district jails setup.

Mr. Porter told the legislature's select committee on reform institutions that 24 new probation officers were appointed during the last year, making a total of 39. These officers keep people out of institutions and save the province money, he said.

He said 38 persons were placed on probation in Lincoln county in the first two months after an officer was appointed there last July.

COSTLY BUSINESS

If these persons had been committed it would have cost the province $125 a day to keep them.

Earlier, Mr. Porter agreed with opposition leader Farquhar Oliver who said he could not see where the sheriff has any place in the administration of a jail today.

"The sheriffs themselves feel they are not needed," Mr. Oliver said. James Dempsey, Progressive Conservative member for Renfrew South, said the main function of county sheriffs seemed to be to appear before county councils to argue for money to be spent on the jails. "That is a job they don't want and shouldn't have," Mr. Dempsey said.

Mr. Porter said he has "considered getting rid of the sheriff's responsibility altogether."

"I wouldn't object to it but the government feels we should go a little slow on it."

Puts Linotype Together From Manual

FORT FRANCES, Ont. (CP)—When Pfc. Gordon Kyle worked for his hometown Fort Frances Times he knew how to make routine adjustments to the newspaper's linotype machines. After serving in Korea he can assemble, tear down and recognize a linotype.

The story of how the Canadian in the United States army, learned about linotypes is also the story of how the four-page, English - language Korean newspaper Korean Republic was born.

That story was told Thursday by the Fort Frances Times.

Last August, after the Koreans bought an American linotype (Merganthaler type), Kyle was told his unit, the Korea civil assistance command, had been requested to place him on 90 days temporary duty to assemble the machine, train Korean girls as operators and Korean men as mechanics.

With a manuel in one hand, a screwdriver in the other and working 16 hours a day, the machine was soon assembled and in running order.

HAD NO PRESSES

The Republic with a "first with the news" slogan had the only linotype in Korea, but no presses. When the first edition was ready to go to press, the page forms were loaded aboard a horse drawn cart and hauled to another nearby newspaper for printing.

After everything came into the routine standard, the order was given to move the paper to larger quarters. That meant the lino had to be torn down, moved, and reassembled in it's new home in 40 hours, without missing an issue.

Some 36 sleepless hours later, everything was ready.

On December 9, 1953 the paper celebrated the traditional ceremony of Paikil. This is a holiday proclaimed on the 100th day of operation or existence of a thing. The Koreans believe that anything that lasts 100 days will succeed.

Kyle's rotation came up shortly after Paikil and he was rotated. Prior to leaving he gave the well thumbed manuals to his Korean mechanics, saying "these belong to you now."

The versatile soldier-printer phoned Fort Frances Wednesday informing his wife and parents he had arrived in Chicago and was now stationed at Fort Sheridan, near Chicago.

"TALCUM POWDER" OPERATION — Mrs. Phoebe Park, 53, a Woodstock nurse, waves cheerfully after what was described as a "talcum powder" operation in New York saved her life. Suffering from a heart condition and given only a few months to live, Mrs. Park underwent a cardopexy, nicknamed "talcum powder" operation, since it involves inserting powdered silica into the heart sac. Dr. Samuel A. Thompson, of New York, performed the operation.

Drunk Broke Trust Fine Totals $1,002.50

COBOURG (ENS) — Magistrate R. B. Baxter who gave Morley Sallows a break when he allowed him another chance last Tuesday in Bowmanville magistrate's court on a drunk charge, cracked down on him when he came before him Friday on another drunk charge.

He imposed a fine of $1,000 or four months. Sallows, 35, of Newcastle, pleaded to another chance last Tuesday in Bowmanville. He was picked up that afternoon drunk in Port Hope by Chief C. W. Graham.

"I have $100 coming to me from a fellow in Newcastle who gave me a fine, and I'll pay it," said Sallows in Cobourg police court today.

"I think I will treat you like a child. Psychologists say that when you make a promise to a child, you must keep it. I told you in Bowmanville court that if you came before me on that charge again I would give you the limit. I am imposing a fine of $1,000 and $2.50 costs or four months," sair Magistrate Baxter.

Toronto Easiest Place To Get Parking Ticket

OTTAWA (CP)—If you are a motorist who enjoys getting parking tickets, head for Toronto. You'll have more chances of getting one there than in any other major Canadian city.

Bureau of statistics figures show that in 1952 Toronto police handed out 544 parking tickets for every 1,000 motorists using that city's streets.

It's just about as good in Winnipeg—393 a 1,000—and worst in Edmonton—only 10 a 1,000.

Unemployment Increases

BRANTFORD (CP) — The national employment office here announced Friday that almost twice as many unemployed persons were registered here at the end of 1953 as were registered a year before. J. C. Harris, manager, said the situation has improved slightly since then. At the end of 1953, 3,316 persons were seeking jobs, compared with 1,940 a year earlier.

Mock Fighters Fined

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Two youths from nearby Princeton were fined Friday for a "mock fight" in a dance hall in which one had his shirt almost torn off his back. William Carson, 21, and Homer Cunning, 22, were charged with creating a disturbance. They told the court it was just a "mock fight," all in fun. They were fined a total of $30.

Street Cars To Vanish

TORONTO (CP)—Streetcars will disappear from Yonge street when the new north-south subway opens March 30 but the Toronto Transit Commission said Friday it plans to operate a bus route on Yonge street to fill in the long gaps between subway stations.

Jersey Breeders Elect New President

Clarence Johnston succeeded H. L. Bamforth as president of the Peterborough District Jersey Breeders' Club at its annual meeting Friday at Hooper's.

Mr. Bamforth becomes honorary president, Keith Larmer vice-president and Roger H[illegible]

The directors elected are Ray Kelk, Wesley Bell, James Cook, Eddie Kimball, Eric Blackwell.

Mr. Johnston was appointed director to the Federation of Agriculture and Harry Young to the Millbrook fair board. About twenty-five members were present, and F. C. Paterson, agricultural representative, and his assistant, Ken Best.

Visiting speakers were James Bremner, Toronto, of the Ontario Jersey Producers Club and Ken Fallis of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Significant of the enthusiasm of the breeders of Jersey cattle, Mr. Bremner said, was the predominance of their entries at exhibitions across Canada last year. He said owners of Jerseys were fully aware of prominence of their high test cows in the dairy industry.

UNPROFITABLE COWS

Mr. Bremner told the club members that they should be giving more study to the elimination of the unprofitable cow from their herds. Experience and tests had shown that some cows take as high as 50 pounds extra feed in producing 100 pounds of milk, as compared with the feed of the more efficient cows. Sales were down somewhat last year, resulting from the lack of volume in the export market and surplus dairy products, including market milk.

Mr. Bremner mentioned the World Jersey Bureau meeting at Guelph in July. Breeders from all over the world were expected to be at the Bureau sessions. He said it was the only organization of its kind. Mr. Bremner reported a change in medical advice in favor of high test milk in calorie count in diet. People, he said, were getting part of their calories from Jersey milk and were delighted with results in health.

Sympathy of the community is extended to Mrs. Frank Milne in the loss of her sister in Toronto, two days before Christmas.

Another man, Harold F. Cameron, 22, of Windsor, was arrested near the scene of the shooting shortly after it happened and held by police as an accomplice to Ruscior.

The man was found a short time later by another constable who took him to hospital where he died within three hours from a bullet in his lung. Dr. C. V. Mills, coroner, said an inquest will be held.

'Honest' Gambler Gives Magistrate Lesson In Art of Dice Throwing

TORONTO (CP) — Dominic Simone, 39, of Toronto, who admits to being a gambler but an "honest" one, gave a demonstration of the finer points of a dice game in magistrate's court Friday but was convicted just the same.

He was given three months in jail on a charge of keeping a gaming house.

[illegible] Dec. 15 together with 12 others when police raided what they called a gambling "castle" in suburban North York.

The "castle," police said, was fitted with steel doors, an electric alarm system and an eight-foot fence.

HAD CROOKED DICE

Police said Simone was found with $1,217 in one pocket and a pair of crooked dice tucked in his sock.

Admitting his guilt but denying dishonesty, the gambler spent more than an hour giving Magistrate O. S. Hollinrake a lesson in dice-throwing. He used his lawyer's drinking glass as a throwing cup and the court clerk's desk as a table.

When told by [illegible] with the accused, the magistrate replied: "That's the very reason there's a law against gambling."

Arleigh Armstrong, crown counsel, said Simone had been charged twice before with keeping a common gaming house.

Anderson was charged jointly with Mike Knshneryk, 31, who elected trial by higher court on a charge of forgery. Anderson's father offered to restore half the $55 which the bank teller had to make good out of his own pocket.

How to KEEP FIT after 50

In the old days fifty seemed the signal to slow down—take things easy—watch your diet—get more rest. It's still good advice. But these days you can face fifty with many interesting and active years ahead,—active, that is, if you can avoid backache and the "tired-out" feeling, due to kidney and bladder disorders, that often develop around that age. For more than 60 years Dodd's Kidney Pills have been helping men and women of all ages to keep kidneys and bladder in good order,—helping them to feel better, to work better, and get more fun out of life. If you are approaching fifty, or past it, Dodd's Kidney Pills may help you, too. You can depend on Dodd's. 54

Coldest Weather In Two Years Hits Canadians

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Parts of Canada shivered Monday in the coldest blast of polar air in two years and weather officials said there is no relief in sight. Temperatures at Ottawa, Toronto, Sudbury and Saint John, N.B., Sunday hit the lowest point since the winter of 1951-52. The low at Ottawa Sunday was 18 below, Sudbury 31 below and Saint John six below. Weather officials said similar below-zero temperatures will probably prevail in the areas Monday and Tuesday.

Meanwhile the Prairies and the Maritimes recorded temperatures about 15 degrees below normal for January.

The warmest spot in the country Monday was the west coast, with mid-40s predicted. Prince Rupert recorded 35 degrees Sunday and Vancouver 32. A chinook wind blew east from the Rockies into Alberta Sunday, giving Edmonton a high of 31, Banff 40 and Calgary 29. Similar temperatures were expected Monday.

But the rest of the country was cold. Lowest temperature in Canada—37 below was reported from Flin Flon, Man.

The low temperatures made roads in many areas ice and driving dangerous. There were many minor traffic accidents in Ontario Monday.

Exhume Body At Napanee In Investigation

NAPANEE (CP)—The body of Percy Warner Bell, 52-year-old stationary engineer, was reburied Saturday after an autopsy provided pathologists and provincial police with specimens of organic tissue on which to continue their investigation into Bell's death.

The body of the former Belleville resident who died Jan. 2 was exhumed Saturday at Riverview Cemetery. The order for the exhumation came from Toronto after several days' work by the provincial police criminal investigation branch.

Police did not disclose the results of the investigation. One report was that poisoning was suspected.

Mr. Bell's death was earlier attributed to a cerebral hemorrhage.

At Belleville Mrs. Bell said she was unaware that her husband's body was being exhumed. She said he hadn't been ill until the evening before he died. She said he complained of a pain in his back while watching television and was dead within six hours.

Must Lure Tourists

TORONTO (CP) — Governor-General Vincent Massey suggested today that Canada may interest more tourists if it improved its Canadianism as well as its coffee.

In a speech prepared for delivery to the Canadian Club here, he said that "while doing what we can to raise the standards of our coffee and of our cafeterias generally," Canadians should strive to offer the "exhilaration" of visiting a "different country."

Four Children Saved By Mother In Fire

In bed with the children when she first noticed the blaze, Mrs. Forsythe wrapped two infants in blankets and carried them outside and at the same time guided two boys, 4 and 5, downstairs. She left the children in a snowbank while she summoned help.

Mrs. Forsythe suffered slight burns to one hand and shock. None of the children was injured. Her husband was starting his car in a nearby garage when the fire broke out.

The large frame-home one mile north of here was levelled despite efforts of firemen from Port Perry and Uxbridge. Greenbank is 20 miles north of Oshawa.

Viscount Simon Ex-Chancellor Dies In Britain

LONDON (CP)—Viscount Simon, leading British jurist and cabinet minister in two world wars, died today. He was 80.

Lord Simon was formerly foreign secretary and chancellor of the exchequer.

He had been ill in a London hospital since Christmas. Early today his condition suddenly turned critical.

Lord Simon, one of the greatest legal minds of his time, gave up a $200,000-a-year practice as a lawyer 40 years ago for the greater tasks of statesmanship, and played a central part in many historical events of his time. He served under five prime ministers, and was in the thick of affairs during the abdication of the Duke of Windsor, during the Munich pact in 1938 and in the difficult transitions between peace and war.

DEFENDED MUNICH

Viscount Simon was a "man of Munich". He never ceased to maintain that the late prime minister Neville Chamberlain's Munich pact with Hitler was right.

In a book of memoirs published last year, Simon declared that the Munich episode did not add to the prestige of the Western powers. But it gave them time, he said. It was Hitler's violation of the agreement which brought the Commonwealth into the war united a year later.

"Those who seek to build up a legend of the weakness and futility of Chamberlain and his cabinet at the time . . . ought to indicate what is the preferable course, which, in the circumstances of 1938, Britain could have taken," he said.

During his long career, Simon received honorary degrees from seven universities including two in Canada—McGill and Toronto.

Comet Plunge Kills 35 Near Elba

Famous Author, Pilot Among Dead As Plane Explodes

PORTO AZZURRO, Elba. — (AP) — Planes and ships searched the stormy, freezing Tyrrhenian sea off Elba's Point Calamity today for the bodies of 20 persons still missing in the crash of a British Comet jetliner. A fishing boat recovered the bodies of the 15 others aboard Sunday.

The Singapore-to-London pride of British air transport plunged into the sea between Elba, Napoleon's island of exile, and the isle of Montecristo, off the northwest coast of the Italian peninsula.

Pilot of the jetliner was Capt. Alan Gibson, holder of the Distinguished Flying Cross, whose Canadian-born wife, Elizabeth, was waiting for him with the couple's four-year-old twins and baby son in London.

With Mrs. Gibson were her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Archibald, who operate a fishing camp at Timagami, Ont., and recently arrived in Britain for a visit.

NO SURVIVORS

There were 29 passengers and a crew of six, including Gibson, aboard. Today British Overseas Airways Corporation had not officially given them up for lost, but a senior airline official in Rome said: "I believe there are no survivors."

Fishermen here said even if anyone survived the crash, he could not have lived long in the frigid waters.

Though BOAC officials in Rome and London were skeptical, a preliminary investigation today indicated the aircraft exploded in the air, killing those aboard in the blast.

Dr. Belina Delfino, who spent al night examining the 15 bodies recovered from the crash, said today an explosion which occurred before the crash apparently ripped off all their clothing. He said al were dead before they entered the water.

Of the 35 persons aboard, three were Americans, one was a Syrian, three came from the Persian gulf oil state of Bahrein and the remainder including all members of the crew, were Britons.

Gibson, a veteran of the RAF who had a total of 5,800 flying hours to his credit, met Elizabeth Archibald and her parents during

Port Hope Driver Killed Car Skids, Strikes Tree

COBOURG (ENS)—First highway fatality of the new year in this area occurred late Saturday night when a car driven by Reginald Lock of Port Hope crashed into a tree on No. 2 Highway between Cobourg and Port Hope killing the driver. The car was wrecked by the impact. Lock's neck was broken and he sustained head injuries. His body was found outside the open right hand door, near the tree. He had been riding alone.

Tire marks leading to the scene, indicated, police said, that the car had proceeded about 180 feet along the south side of the highway.

The westbound automobile angled off into the ditch, tearing large patches of bark from the tree before it swung around to come to a stop facing east. The highway was slippery along the borders but traction was good in the centre and why Mr. Locke's car left the road is not known.

A native of England, Mr. Lock came to Port Hope with his parents when he was a young boy and had resided there ever since. Thirty years of age, he was a veteran of the last war and was employed at the Port Hope Sanitary plant. He is survived by his widow, who was Irene Brown and two children, Sherin, age 5, and Jimmy, age 12. Also surviving are his mother, Mrs. Adam Lock; two brothers, Dick and Albert of Port Hope and three sisters, Mrs. R. Hood of Port Hope, Mrs. A. Riley of Grafton and Mrs. M. Heenan of New Toronto.

Driver Jumps As Truck Hit

BELLEVILLE (CP)—The driver of an inter-city highway transport had to jump for his life here early today when his vehicle jack-knifed on the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks at the cemetery crossing west of the city and was struck by the Montreal-Chicago Flyer.

Clovis Gordon, 4, of Prescott, Ont., told provincial police the wig-wag started as he approached the tracks. He applied his brakes and the tractor-trailer assembly jack-knifed and stalled on the tracks.

"I had just time to jump out and attempt to flag the train, but it was no use," he said.

The engine carried the wrecked transport more than 300 feet up the track. Damage is estimated at $30,000.

Police said the railway locomotive was also damaged and had to be run to Trenton for repairs. The engine and all 15 passenger coaches remained on the track.

Two hours later most of the coaches were still at the scene of the accident while the second section of the same train was pulled up behind. A following freight was held up at Belleville station.

Plane Strikes House, 12 Die

SHREVEPORT, La. (AP)— A blazing plane crash killed the presidents of Braniff International Airways and Texas Eastern Gas Transmission Co. and 10 companions Sunday night.

The plane smashed into an unoccupied house and burned for more than two hours, killing 10 wealthy passengers and two pilots returning from a weekend duck hunt in the Louisiana marshlands near the Gulf coast. There were no survivors.

The dead included Thomas Braniff, of Dallas, Tex., president of Braniff, and R. H. Hargrove, of Shreveport, president of Texas Eastern, which operates the famed "Big Inch" and "Little Inch" gas pipeline to the east.

The bodies remained unidentified early today because they were badly mangled and charred.

United Gas said the passenger list also included: Chris Abbott, 65, Hyannis, Neb., one of Nebraska's leading bankers; Edgar Tobin, 58, San Antonia, Tex., head of a large aerial mapping firm; Justice R. Querbes, Sr., 61, director of Shreveport's First National Bank; Randolph Querbes, Sr., 59, his brother, a wholesale electrical company head and E. Bernard Weiss, Shreveport, vice-president of Goldring's Inc., a clothing chain.

Believes U.S. Senate Will Pass Seaway Bill

WASHINGTON (CP) — Senator William Knowland (Rep. Calif.) Senate majority leader, said today he personally believes the Senate will pass the bill providing for U. S. participation with Canada in construction of the St. Lawrence seaway.

Knowland spoke to reporters after Republican congressional leaders met for nearly two hours with President Eisenhower at the White House. They discussed legislative plans for the next few weeks.

A proposal that Congress approve the U. S. taking part in the seaway project was contained in Eisenhower's State of the Union message to Congress last week.

Knowland said today that while he expects the measure to pass the Senate, he looks for "considerable debate."

House of Representatives Speaker Joseph Martin noted that in the past "the house has been very strongly against" the seaway project.

Viennese Composer Oscar Straus Dies

Police Asked To Take Lie Tests

Woman Helps Ritchie Flee Detroit Police, Open Joint Account

WINDSOR (CP)—Don Ritchie, fugitive "key witness" in the Walter Reuther shooting investigation, was charged at noon today with the attempted murder of Reuther.

A warrant for Ritchie's arrest was issued in Michigan, and authorities there were expected to take immediate action to have a fugitive warrant issued in Windsor.

Detroit officials at the same time decided to ask two police officers involved in the case to submit to a lie detector test.

How serious the disappearance of Ritchie is to the prosecution of four men already charged in the Reuther shooting emerged with admissions made by prosecuting authorities in Detroit today.

FLED BEFORE SIGNING

Ritchie fled his Detroit police guards Friday before he had signed a statement essential for the extradition of Clarence Jacobs to the U. S. to face trial in the 1948 shooting of Walter Reuther.

A signed statement given to Detroit authorities by Ritchie also is inadmissable in U. S. courts against the four men charged with the crime, if Ritchie does not return to Detroit. However further evidence has been obtained since Ritchie crossed to Canada and went into hiding Friday night.

Joseph A. Bannigan, assistant prosecutor, said that Ritchie, on the morning when he escaped, was to have signed an affidavit involving Jacobs.

JACOBS IN JAIL

Jacobs is being held in the Essex county jail.

Electrical Workers Strike In Britain

LONDON (Reuters) — Several hundred electrical workers, acting on secret orders from the Communist-led Electrical Trades Union, went on strike today at key industrial construction sites throughout Britain.

Britain's first atomic power plant under construction at Calder Hall, Cumberland, was among the first targets of the "guerrilla strike" campaign which the ETU planned following a deadlock over wage claims. Thirty - three electricians walked out at Calder Hall. The main production plant at nearby Sellafield, where plutonium is produced, was not affected.

All strike targets are understood to be new construction sites and no interference with electricity supply or industrial production is forecast. Oil refineries, steel plants, car factories and airports are expected to be involved.

The 203,000-strong ETU have declared that 2,000 men will be called out in a week of lightning stoppages. The climax will be a national 24-hour strike of 40,000 electricians on contract work next Monday.

India Offering Compromise PoW Plan

PANMUNJOM (AP) — A high source said tonight the Indian command is considering a new plan to solve the critical problem of releasing war prisoners that has left the Indians in a blazing crossfire between Allies and Reds.

The source, whose name and nationality cannot be disclosed, said the formula is designed to by-pass the issue of whether the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission will free some 22,500 prisoners at midnight Jan. 22.

The allies have demanded release of the PoWs, the Reds have demanded they be held.

MAY SMASH WAY OUT

It is considered probable that if the commission doesn't approve the release, anti-Red Koreans and Chinese will smash their way out of their neutral zone compounds.

The Indian proposal would throw the problem back to the Allies and the Reds themselves, the source said.

The source said the Indian plan is to turn the anti-Red prisoners back to the Allied side and the pro-Red prisoners back to the Communists. They would be held until the two commands agree to their disposition or until another neutral body is set up to handle the problem.

The source said Lt.-Gen. K. S. Thimayya, Indian chairman of the NNRC, will stipulate that should either side release its prisoners the commission would be in no way to blame.

OUTNUMBER REDS

The source said the Swedish and Swiss delegates on the NNRC would vote with him outnumbering the Communist Czechs and Poles.

Earlier the commission took up the issue of what to do with the PoWs.

At a 20-minute session, Maj.-Gen. Jan Svenstrom, the Swedish delegate, proposed that the commission back the Allied demand that the prisoners be released on Jan. 23. He urged a quick discussion and decision.

The Reds insist the prisoners be held until their fate is discussed for 30 days by a Korean political conference. Preliminary negotiations for the conference were broken off last month by U.S. ambassador Arthur Dean after the Reds charged the United States with perfidy.

ASK UN MEET

Since then, Communist leaders have urged the UN to call a special meeting to take up the problem.

The Indian government announced Monday it is formally requesting that the assembly meet "at an early date" to discuss Korea.

An Indian foreign ministry source had said earlier a request was sent to the United Nations in New York Sunday asking that the assembly meet Feb. 9.

The government announcement called for the session to open before the repatriation commission is dissolved, which is expected in late February.

Approval of 31 of the 60 UN members is needed to reconvene the assembly.

PREPARING FOR PRISONER RELEASE —Near Panmunjom, Korea, American Marines put up barbed wire barricades along the route to be taken by North Korean and Chinese POWs when they are released. The Indian guards at Panmunjom plan to turn loose 22,200 of these POWs one minute after midnight Jan. 23, and they will be housed near the barbed wire areas until they are sent wherever they desire to go.

Dulles, Zarubin Begin Talks

WASHINGTON (AP)—State Secretary Dulles and Soviet ambassador Georgi N. Zarubin begin talks today on when, where and with whom the United States and Russia may negotiate on the peaceful uses of atomic energy.

Their first session, scheduled in Dulles' state department office was to be private. Indications were that little or no information would be given out.

These are preliminary discussions on procedures for a full dress conference later.

Dulles' main reported purpose is to try to determine whether the Soviet government is sincere in its agreement to hold atomic discussions or whether it is merely going through the motions because of the pressures of world public opinion and the needs of Moscow propaganda.

Dulles was said to favor holding the later conference to a small scale and to think there might be some advantages in holding it outside the United Nations, where all previous efforts to negotiate international atomic agreements with the Russians have failed.

Building permits in North Monaghan last year amounted to $406,200, reported by Bruce Johnston, municipal clerk today.

Permits were issued for other houses, but two of them were taken into the city with the new west end subdivision. Two on the Stinson property were not begun.

There were no farm buildings included in the 1953 permits. Rock Haven Motel was enlarged to 28 living units by the permit to build ten more last year.

Wrong Serum Shipment Flown To Austria Second Package Sent May Save Boy's Life

INNSBRUCK, Austria (AP)—Ending a trouble-plagued, 4,500-mile trip from Lansing, Mich., a supply of vital blood serum arrived today for an eight-year-old Tyrolean boy who has been slowly bleeding to death with hemophilia.

Within 20 minutes after the precious vials of anti-hemophil globulin were received at Innsbruck Children's Hospital, doctors began injecting the serum into young Gottfried Eder, son of an Innsbruck merchant.

The doctors said though little Gottfried's condition was still critical, they had every hope of saving his life. He had been given a blood transfusion early this morning.

The vital serum was brought on the last 80-mile leg of its trip in a jeep station wagon which battled through a blizzard and deep snowdrifts.

Earlier a package of medicine was flown from [illegible] wrong kind. A second shipment was immediately forwarded by plane again.

Early Inquest Planned Into Helen Boyle's Death

TORONTO (CP)—Police said today an early inquest is planned into the death of Helen Boyle, 24, laboratory technician at St. Michael's Hospital who died Thursday night of injuries suffered in her sixth-floor office the night before. Police say they think she was murdered—struck crushing blows on the head with a blunt instrument. Hospital doctors say the injuries could have resulted from a fall.

Detectives worked through the week-end without finding any substantial clues.

TWO CASES LINKED?

They have considered a theory that a brutal-minded assailant may have been responsible for the attack on Miss Boyle and also the Dec. 7 attack on a nurse in an Iroquois Falls hospital.

They have found nothing in the background of the attractive brunette laboratory worker at Toronto St. Michael's Hospital to suggest anyone bore her a grudge. There was nothing in the laboratory where she was found Wednesday night which a thief might be after.

TOOK MOHPHINE TABLETS

The Iroquois Falls attack on 24-year-old Doris Downey of Timmins also occurred in the dead of night. Her attacker crashed a blunt instrument on the back of her skull and made off with 40 morphine tablets.

Police said a 28-year-old former orderly at St. Michael's, whom they arrested Friday and questioned for hours is no longer under suspicion. He is being held without bail, however, remanded for a week on a vagrancy charge.

Miss Boyle, who was born in Peterborough, died 26 hours after being found unconscious. A post-mortem Friday established that it was a case of murder—not accidental death from a heavy fall. The weapon was thought to be either a wrench or a length of pipe.

India Asks UN Assembly Reconvene Soon

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—AT India's request, UN assembly president Mrs. Vijaya Lakshmi Pandit today asked for a poll of all members on the question of reconvening the assembly Feb. 8 or 9 to deal with the Korean situation.

UN officials said they have received from Mrs. Pandit a formal request for such a poll. They said it would be made immediately. Approval of the 31 members of the 60-nation assembly is required before the assembly can be reconvened.

In New Delhi, Indian officials insisted the action was not intended to delay the freeing of Korean war prisoners who have refused repatriation. Deadline for the release to civilian status of such prisoners is Jan. 22.

Comet Plunge

the Second World War while training with the RCAF in Toronto.

DEATH WITHOUT WARNING

One farmer today told of hearing the explosion and seeing "pieces falling toward the sea." followed by another explosion and a flash. Elba's chief surgeon, after examining the recovered bodies, said they died from a concussion, with the force coming from below, and were already dead when they hit the water.

"All their faces were serene and in calm repose," the surgeon said. "They showed no look of terror. Death must have come without warning."

The Italian air ministry and a six-man commission from London began an investigation. The group included representatives of the British ministry of civil aviation, BOAC and the de Havilland Aircraft Company, makers of the eight-mile-a-minute jet.

BOAC said 10 of the passengers were believed to be children returning to British schools after spending Christmas with their parents abroad.

WILMOT AMONG DEAD

One of the bodies recovered was tentatively identified as that of Chester Wilmot, 42-year-old Australian war correspondent and author whose controversial book, The Struggle for Europe, was an international best seller.

Another body was that of the plane's stewardess, 23 - year - old Jean Evelyn Clark. She had joined the flight at Karachi, when the plane's regular stewardess became ill with ear trouble. Friends in London said Miss Clark had planned to marry soon.

Darkness and heavy seas brought a temporary halt to the search for bodies late Sunday but it was resumed at dawn, today. Sunday the seas were calm though near freezing temperature. Overnight high winds sprang up, tossing the tiny boats about and increasing operating difficulties.

U. S. and Italian planes circled over the crash area. Searching below were Italian naval ships from mainland ports and scores of fishing boats from Elba.

It was the seventh accident involving a Comet airliner and the third in which fatalities occurred. Last March one of Canadian Pacific Airlines' sleek speedsters crashed in a takeoff at Karachi, killing all 11 persons aboard. Two months later another crashed in a thunderstorm near Calcutta, killing 43.

The latest ill-fated Comet was flying an extra scheduled run from Singapore to London, via Bangkok, Rangoon, Karachi, Bahrein and Rome. It left Singapore early Saturday and took off from Rome to London in mid-morning Sunday. It crashed into the sea 40 minutes later.

BOAC officials in Rome discounted another fisherman's report that he saw several persons parachute from the plane before it went into its final dive. The officials said there were no chutes aboard.

Company officials present were E. D. Fox, secretary, and R. V. Hicks, legal counsel. Union officials were William Mahoney, the union's assistant Canadian director, Leo Behie, Timmins area supervisor, and Harold Degurse and George Robin, union representatives at the mine.

Police Asked

Wayne County prosecutor Gerald K. O'Brien has voiced fear that Ritchie may be hunted by the underworld associates of the men he is said to have accused.

WOMAN SIGNED CHEQUE

The prosecutor said a woman may have been the key to Ritchie's escape. O'Brien reported an attractive young woman was with Ritchie when he bought a car in Chatham, Ont., Saturday. She signed the cheque for it: "Elizabeth White." The cheque was on a joint account Ritchie opened Friday in a Chatham bank with a $3,500 deposit.

The woman, introduced by Ritchie as his wife, was with him during his first two days of protective custody, O'Brien said.

The prosecutor said he is trying to find out whether she got a message or money to him.

"If she gave him money that would explain the big deposit, but it wouldn't explain where it came from," O'Brien said. "We are very much interested in finding out how they came into possession of so much money so fast. The answer might explain a great deal."

It was Ritchie who put the finger on four men arrested recently and charged with the attempted murder and conspiracy to murder Reuther, CIO and United Automobile Workers' union president. One of the men, Clarence Jacobs of suburban Riverside, is Ritchie's uncle.

The other three are Santo (Sam) Perrone, 58, of Detroit, still at large, Perrone's son-in-law, Carl Renda, awaiting a hearing and Peter Lombardo, serving a five-year prison term.

KEPT UNDER WRAPS

American authorities approached Ritchie after he served a month in jail here for petty theft. They kept him under wraps as a mysterious witness but his escape brought his identity to light.

He was traced to Windsor by investigators and on to Chatham where he bought a car and the trail was lost. Police traced dozens of tips during the week-end and watched the home of Ritchie's mother and his girl friend, Betty White, 27.

Police described Ritchie as a floater and small-time thief. He gave Detroit police a signed statement that he took part in the Reuther shooting. Police said he is a key witness and their case against the other men may collapse unless he is found.

Windsor police officials poohpoohed the idea that Ritchie had anything to do with the crime. He has been known to come to police with wild stories of being robbed. Police are acting on tips in cooperation with American authorities but said they have no authority to arrest the man.

NOT IN QUEBEC JAIL

Ritchie, was not in jail here when the shooting took place, Quebec provincial police said today.

A spokesman for the force said Ritchie was arrested on a false pretences charge in September, 1947, following which he jumped bail twice before being rearrested Oct. 14, 1948. Reuther was shot in April, 1948.

Ritchie first said he was in the car with the four men when the shooting took place but later denied any knowledge of the affair, claiming he was in jail here.

MRS. JAMES DUTTON

Mrs. Jas. Dutton Dies At Home

The death of Mrs. James Dutton, Sr., occurred Sunday at her home, 239 Stewart St., after a short illness. Actually she had been in failing health for some months, and it was recalled Sunday that her last attendance at St. Giles' Presbyterian church was in September.

Mrs. Dutton was born at Bacup, Lancashire, England, and followed her husband to Canada 42 years ago. She was Abbie Ada, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Marshal, of Bacup. Mr. and Mrs. Dutton celebrated in 1951 the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding. She had been an active church member all her life, an interest which she had shared with her husband.

Mrs. Dutton was prominent particularly in the women's auxiliary affairs of St. Paul's church from the time of her coming to Peterborough. She was a past president of its Women's Missionary Society and a life member of the Ladies' Aid Society. She was also a member of the Peterborough Council of Women.

A private phase of the life of Mrs. Dutton was in the home support which she provided to her husband, not only in his business but especially in his community and civic church affiliations and endeavours.

SUSTAINING HELPMATE

The citizens who recognized and appreciated the earnest desire of James Dutton to do his part in citizenship, to give of his time unsparingly to elective and appointed offices in the welfare of Peterborough, realized the assistance and encouragement which he must have received from his wife. Such experience in community matters sometimes brings reverses. To Mr. Dutton, his wife had been a gentle sustaining helpmate, gracious in her home and beloved by many friends. She will be particularly missed by her friends of St. Paul's church.

Mrs. Dutton leaves her husband, two sons, Thomas Marshall Dutton of Toronto, and James Dutton, Jr., of Peterborough; and her sisters, Mrs. F. Flitcroft, of Carlisle, England, and Mrs. C. Cuthbertson, of Hollywood, Cal. The body is resting at the Kaye funeral home, 539 George St., until the private service Tuesday at 3.30 p.m., conducted by the Rev. C. G. Boyd of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, assisted by the Rev. G. D. Smith of St. Giles' Presbyterian church, Park St. South. Interment will be at Little Lake cemetery.

Appeal By Hutson Rejected By Court

TORONTO (CP)—An appeal by Mervyn Hutson, 29, of North Bay, against conviction on a charge of murder in the death of a three-year-old girl was turned down today by the Ontario court of appeal. Hutson will be hanged Feb. 9 as sentenced when convicted Nov. 5.

Hutson, a former railway gang cook at Englehart, was convicted of the sex-slaying of Susan Hutchins. The girl's body was found in a clump of bushes on the city's outskirts on May 21, 1953, the day after she disappeared from a store in downtown North Bay.

Ruscior, who recently came here from Timmins, was one of four men suspected of a clothing theft, who attempted to escape when surprised by police.

Cook Assaulted In Restaurant

Walter Cowling of 304 Park St. walked into the kitchen of the Churchill restaurant and hit William Cinese on the face. When a cook interferred on Cinese's behalf he received the same treatment.

This allegation was made in court Monday when Cinese, who works at the Churchill, charged the 45-year-old printer, Cowling with assault.

Cinese and the cook, George Manos, speak English hesitantly and there was some difficulty in sorting out their evidence. However, Magistrate W. R. Philp Q.C. was convinced that an assault had taken place and he told Cowling that he had no right to go into the kitchen.

Cowling protested that the kitchen was a public place and that anyone could inspect it for sanitary reasons. The magistrate took the other view.

Cowling said that both gentlemen (Cinese and Manos) had been a little excited and "they don't know what they're talking about". He had gone to see Cinese about some money owed and a rather brisk argument had ensued. Cowling considered that any blows he might have struck had been purely in self defence.

Stating it was not a serious case of assault Magistrate Philip fined Cowling $5, costs $8.50.

Author-Columnist Dies

Must Produce Seal's Jaw To Get Bounty

OTTAWA (CP)—To collect bounties on harbor seal in Newfoundland, the fishermen must produce a seal's lower jaw.

Newfoundland fishermen kicked [illegible] bounties last year, the federal fisheries department, which pays $10 for each adult seal destroyed, and $5 per pup.

Biggest single payment—$240—went to John Badcock of Bay Roberts, Conception Bay, for five adult seals and 38 pups killed at Holton, Labrador.

INTRODUCED IN 1952

Bounties for harbor seal were introduced in October, 1952, after fishermen complained that the seals were destroying their salmon nets. Most of the 766 seals on which bounties were paid during the first year were killed along the Labrador coast. But herds were found in all areas, including Burgeo on the southwest coast.

Hunters also can sell raw, salted sealskins for $2 each and dressed skins for $5 to $7.

For eating, say fisheries men here, the harbor seal has an agreeable flavor and texture—"if you like seal meat."

No Connection Nurse's Opinion

TIMMINS (CP)—Doris Downey, 25-year-old Timmins nurse who was struck down Dec. 7 by a flashlight-wielding intruder at Anson General Hospital, Iroquois Falls, said today she did not think the attack on her was connected in any way with the death of Helen Boyle, 24, in Toronto St. Michael's Hospital last week.

The Timmins girl pointed out that the person who attacked her made off with 40 morphine pills. There was nothing in the Toronto laboratory where Miss Boyle worked to attract such a thief. Miss Boyle died of skul fractures which might have been caused by fall or by a blunt instrument.

Tractor Trailer Plunges Through Wall, Driver Hurt

PORT HOPE, (ENS)—Bob Bunyon, Etobicoke township transport driver was trapped for half an hour Sunday night in the cab of his tractor trailer when it collapsed around him after the vehicle had plunged through the wall of a garage near the foot of Walton St. hill.

While the Port Hope fire department stood by, ready to put out any outbreak of fire, workmen with acetylene torches cut away the wreckage to free Bunyon's legs. Taken to hospital, conscious but suffering severe pain, Bunyon was found to have both legs broken near the ankles.

BRAKES FAIL

The brakes of the big transport failed to hold it as it swung around the base of Walton St. Hill on to Mill St. Unable to cut the corner any sharper, Bunyon drove into the wall of a vacant garage just around the bend. The impact tore out the thick brick and concrete wall as the front of the tractor crumpled up like an accordion.

The crash woke up most of the people on that end of Walton St. and police arrived to find Bunyon trying to free his legs. He was [illegible] side of the cab as the impact occurred.

Fortunately the tanks held diesel fuel instead of gasoline. It was also fortunate that there was no nearby oncoming traffic. Using a cutting torch and crow bars, police and volunteer helpers extricated the driver and a waiting ambulance rushed him to Port Hope hospital.

Top Advertising Consultant To Address City Merchants

Three hundred Peterborough merchants have received invitations to hear the views of North America's top advertising and merchandising consultant, Clyde Bedell of Chicago.

This visit from Mr. Bedell, who will lecture in the Trinity United church hall from 3 p.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday, January 13, is being sponsored by The Peterborough Examiner in response to a request from the retail section of the chamber of commerce. The session is intended to show merchants how their advertising dollar can do a more effective job.

The Examiner hopes that all invited will avail themselves of this first hand knowledge and realize the opportunity to start the new year with some new angles on two of the most important store functions.

LECTURED IN AUSTRALIA

Besides being considered North America's leading consultant, Mr. Bedell has extended his influence to countries as far afield as Australia, where he lectured in 1950. In 1934-35 he created the first national sales training program that the Ford company had used in a number of years. Consequently, 1935 was the only year in the 10 preceding the war, that Ford beat Chevrolet in units sold.

He spent 13 years promoting sales and advertising for Butler Brothers and Marshall Field & Co. On occasions during this period he spent sums of up to $2,000,000 a year in mail advertising and newspaper space. He received a three-day response on almost all advertisements run. In 1942, by which time he was with the fair in Chicago, he was one of the highest paid sales promotion managers in America.

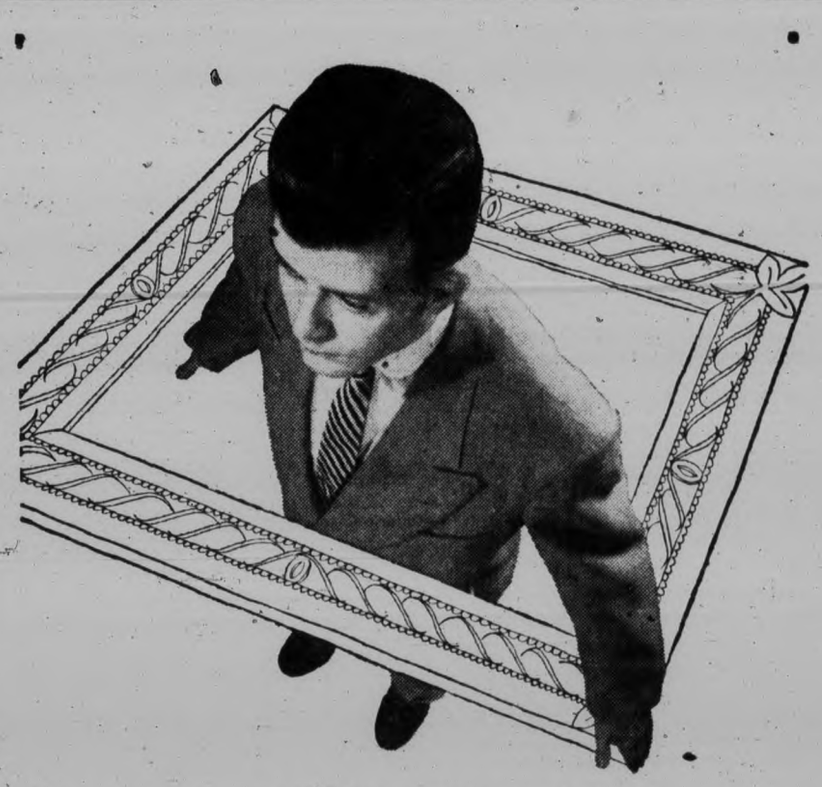
INDEPENDENT CONSULTANT

Since 1944 Mr. Bedell has been working as an independent consultant, principally serving leading newspapers and stores from coast to coast.

He has also published several books. One, entitled "The Seven Keys to Retail Profits," broke all records for a text on retailing. "Write Advertising That Sells" became an immediate best seller in advertising and has remained so to this day.

For five years he lectured at Northwestern university school of commerce. His methods and ideas were bought directly and used by such organizations as Ford Co., Elizabeth Arden and Swift & Co.

Merchants who attend when he visits Peterborough will soon realize one thing. Mr. Bedell does not come to talk. He conducts a clinic, with examples of good and poor advertising and explanations to why some advertisements fail while others succeed and of tested merchandising methods.



The man who should be pictured in 3 dimensions

Usually he is regarded simply as a man who is providing financial security for his family. But if you could see him in true perspective against the background of his community — and even the whole country — you'd realize that he also benefits his fellow-citizens in many important ways.

Take such useful public works as new roads, bridges, schools and hospitals, for instance. He often helps to create them — because a large part of his premium payments is invested for him by his life insurance company to help finance their construction.

Or note the progress that science is making in the war against disease. Here, too, this man plays a part. For life insurance companies contribute funds to vital medical research projects that promote better health and longer life for all.

Moreover, by safeguarding his family, he performs another service for his fellow-citizens. For by doing so he makes sure that his family will not be a financial burden to others.

So, if you are a life insurance policyholder, be glad that in all these ways you're helping to make Canada a better land to live in!

Cobourg Comets Defeat Muskies

LINDSAY (ENS) — Cobourg Comets went into a third place tie with Port Hope Redmen in the Lakeshore League standings here Saturday night with a 5-3 win over the local Muskies. It was the first defeat for Muskies in five meetings of the clubs this season.

Buck Legrow led the winners with a pair of goals—including the winner in the third period. The Comets took a 2-1 lead in the first period, Casey scoring when his pass deflected off a Muskie, and Jack Fisher counting on a breakaway. Crawford scored for the Muskies.

In the second, Parker and Sinclair scored early for the Muskies to give them the edge, but Legrow scored the neatest goal of the night to tie it again.

In the third, Legrow scored the winner and Reeves clinched the win. Referee Red Walsh handed out 14 penalties, including majors to Harnden, of the visitors, and Crawford for a third period fist fight that ended when Crawford opened a cut on Harnden's nose with a sharp right. Lou Hennessey Muskie defenceman, and one of the team's cleanest players, drew four minors.

Up To Soldier To Obtain Counsel

CALGARY (CP) — The task of obtaining legal counsel for Pte. William Cierpisz of Windsor, Ont., charged with murder, lies with himself, army authorities said Saturday.

They said that as soon as Cierpisz was turned over to civilian authorities following the death of Pte. William Bilow, 21, of Winchester, Ont., last Tuesday, he ceased to be an army responsibility. Bilow was killed by two shots from a service rifle at Currie Barracks here.

Army officers said if he is unable, for financial or other reasons to provide his own counsel, then it becomes the responsibility of the crown.

Thieves Force Way Into Two Schools

COBOURG (ENS)—Apparently looking for money, thieves broke into two schoolhouses, over the weekend, one of them at Precious Corners in Hamilton township and the other at Quay Crossing on Highway 28. The school at Precious Corners was entered by forcing a door and the other one by breaking a window. The teacher's desk was ransacked in each case but no money was found. Provincial Constable C. Meadows investigated.

Two cars were involved in a collision on the Douro-Otonabee boundary road Saturday. Drivers of vehicles were William Hartwick, RR 9, Peterborough, and Donald Bethune, RR 1, Indian River. Total damage to both cars was estimated at $300.

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Damage estimated at $6,000 was caused by fire which destroyed a small barn on Harry Wismer's farm near here Sunday. A passing motorist spotted the blaze and turned in the alarm. Loss included a car, a tractor, two tons of hay and seven tons of coal.

Stricter Issue Of Driving Permits

We are relieved that the Highway Traffic Act now prohibits the issuing of driving licences to persons under the age of sixteen. It is no longer legal for a girl or youth aged fifteen to drive a car. A sixteen-year-old may obtain a permit upon passing driving tests, using special forms which have to be signed by the Chief of Police, the father and the owner of the car.

* * *

Old drivers are also subject to special regulations. No licence-issuing office may renew the driving permit of a person after he has reached the age of 79. A person aged 80 or more, or who reaches his eightieth birthday this year, must apply directly to the Licensing Branch in Toronto. Each of these applications is considered individually and the Department is much stricter now than formerly in renewing the licences of old drivers, requiring many kinds of evidence that they are mentally and physically competent to drive. Some local drivers aged 79 and 80 try all sorts of ruses to obtain a license. Automatically refused by one office in the district, they go to another, hoping by favouritism or other means to circumvent the regulations. Should such a person by chance get a licence illegally (for instance, through falsifying his age), he would be in a sorry position if he did have an accident.

* * *

Tightening the issue of driving permits in these ways is a hopeful sign that the Department may soon come around to a system of re-examining drivers periodically, instead of renewing their licences year by year without any concern for a driver's capabilities, other than those shown years ago when the first and only driving test was taken. The very youngest and the very oldest drivers are not necessarily the most incompetent and most dangerous.

The North-West Half Of Ontario

Before this Province is divided into four general economic areas, as announced a week ago, we had better finish our episodic survey of Ontario being made according to the nineteen economic regions into which the provincial statisticians presently divide it. Actually, we have come to the end of them with Numbers 18 and 19, which are labelled the Lakehead and the James Bay regions. As the current issue of the Economic Review for Ontario lumps them together, so shall we.

They are a big lump — 59 per cent of the total area of the Province. The population of the Lakehead region is nine times larger than it was in 1891, but 45 per cent of the people live in and around Fort William and Port Arthur (71,191 of them according to the 1951 census). The James Bay area has had a less steady growth. Between 1911 and 1921 the population decreased by 39 per cent. Between 1931 and 1941 there was an increase, but 1941 to 1951 there was a slight decrease. These sliding percentages are unimportant relative to the population of Ontario, for all told in that whole District of Kenora (apart from the Patricia section) there are fewer than 40,000 people, and there is no population centre which is not a mining camp. Red Lake, the largest, has 1,100 people.

This new and raw half of Ontario is not as new as it sounds. Most of it is underlain by the Precambrian rocks of the Canadian Shield, among the oldest hills in the world. Further, while great areas in these two regions are still uninhabited, other sections were settled in the early days of the French regime. Fort William grew up on the site of a trading post built by Dulhut (or Du Lhut) in 1678. Until the middle of the last century, of course, the Hudson's Bay Company and the North West Company held and operated the entire territory. Today nearly all the land is Crown Land (owned by the Provincial Government), apart from grants to mine and lumber companies and the tracts owned by the railway companies.

The hub of the universe which is the north-west half of Ontario is Port Arthur and Fort William. This is due to their strategic position at the head of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway. Their combined port has become one of the largest in Canada, and in providing facilities for shipping western wheat, their grain elevators are among the largest in the world. The Rt. Hon. C. D. Howe, whose home base is there, has seen to it that the twin cities do not lack for business and industry.

The Economic Review remarks that "The Lakehead Region has probably the most diversified economy among the northern Regions. Approximately 22 per cent of the labour force is employed in primary industries, twenty per cent. in manufacturing, eighteen per cent. in transportation, communication and storage, and the balance in trade, finance and other services. Despite this diversity, however, there remains a problem in employment which results from the seasonal nature of woods operations, a factor for which there is no simple solution". So all is not plain sailing, even around Port Arthur and Fort William, and even with Mr. Howe in the background.

A remarkable point about the district's lumbering industry is the disrepute in which hardwoods are held. We get this explanation: "Although hardwoods make up about half of the forests, they are not used in any quantity for pulp because better and cheaper paper can be made from the conifers; consequently these relatively undesirable trees gradually become more common and hence even more undesirable". To what a sorry name the sound, solid and beautiful hardwoods of Canada have come. Incidentally, we are glad to report the assurance that there is no over-cutting in the Crown forests of the region.

In this survey we have given too little place to mining, particularly iron mining. Steep Rock, Algoma and Marmoraton companies in 1952 produced 2,717,490 tons of iron ore. Only four of the ten producng gold mines of the area are now in operation. Mining wages (iron, gold, silver) in the Lakehead area averaged $80.22 a week last October.

Agriculture is of little importance in the two regions. The Precambrian rock is too near the surface, and the great divide is almost at the Lake Superior shore. From it all rivers flow north to the Arctic.

In case these facts, figures and lonely wastes seem cold, wild and remote from snug southern Ontario, may we remind our readers that at Gore's Landing, Rice Lake, south of Peterborough and only twelve miles from the Lake Ontario frontier with the U.S., residents last week turned off their house lights and put on their flash lights to watch wolves crossing the ice from the islands to the shore?

Newspaper Paradoxes

As late as half a century ago newspapers were still conducted in ways which would shock readers today and bring down on the heads of proprietors and editors white-hot wrath, parliamentary investigations and court injunctions. Then most newspapers printed only the news that served their own self-interests and their politics. They brazenly favoured their advertisers, and ran such things as patent medicine advertisements of a kind which reputable papers now reject. They had enemies—the people in the opposite camp—but they were not criticized for being unscrupulous and partisan, because the people who bought the paper were equally partisan. Nobody criticized the press as a whole for its very nature.

Commenting on this condition and the change today, C. E. Lindstrom, editor of the Hartford Times (Connecticut), listed some telling paradoxes, the first being that today when newspapers have a livelier sense of ethics, fair play and responsibility to inform, criticism of newspapers and the press generally is sharper than ever before. Other paradoxes:

"In those bad old days, people talked about the power of the press. They don't do that any more! Many seem to think that the press hasn't much of any power nowadays, but we'll look into that presently.

Another paradox is that while they ask for fairness and objectivity, people don't actually want it at all; and while newspapers are desperately trying to be so, the readers don't seem to know what objectivity is.

There is the familiar paradox that the more advertising a newspaper gets the more independent it is of its advertisers.

There is also something of a paradox in the circumstance that while the public is increasingly finding fault with newspapers, they are today buying more of them than they ever did before.

But the most baffling of all paradoxes is to be found in the most frequently heard criticism of the monopoly in the one-newspaper city, the riddle being that, too often to be merely a coincidence, the admittedly best newspapers in the country have a monopoly in very large and populous territories. How do you account for it?"

We leave the paradoxes for our readers' musing.

NOTES AND COMMENT

A book for children called The Wonderful Story of How You Were Born has been banned by the Illinois State Library. Which suggests that down there it isn't a wonderful story; it's a smutty secret that everybody knows and nobody will admit.

There are now a very large number of shopping days before Christmas, and every potato and Brussels sprout you buy between then and now contributes to your enjoyment of the 1954 Christmas feast.

New Travel Tradition For Young Folk

By ALISON SETTLE

INTERNATIONAL holiday travel is changing the outlook a[dditions] of Britain's young workers. [ng] people, most of whom leave school at fifteen, and who work in factories in industrial cities, [have long been noted] for their close affec[tion for their neighbourhood] many never [travelling further] than a few miles from home and place of employment except for their annual holiday to country or seaside.

✧ ✧ ✧

NOW that is changing; and one reason for the change is the activities of the officially recognized "Central Bureau for Educational Visits and Exchanges." Set up six years ago by the United Kingdom organization connected with the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, the bureau originally offered its advice chiefly to scholastic authorities which wanted to send abroad groups of young people for further study. But the bureau also offered its services to youth clubs; and through these clubs, young factory workers got to know about the chance of becoming acquainted with young people of their own kind in foreign countries during holiday visits or exchanges. They made up groups anxious to discover ways of living outside their own national boundaries, and asked the Central Bureau for assistance in planning hospitality, arranging for group passports and for currency exchange. Now some go camping with young people of many nations; some join in cycling tours; others go as guests to foreign homes, with a promise of return hospitality in Britain. They have started a new tradition of travel.

✧ ✧ ✧

ONE DIFFICULTY which the bureau faces is the well-known British reluctance to learn foreign languages. The secretary of the bureau, Miss V. M. Atkins, says that if young workers had even some slight facility in another language, the holiday would become fully enjoyable from the first day; although as it is, the language difficulty is usually overcome within a few days. Boys competing at sports or singing round a camp fire soon break down the language barrier. And it is noticeable that when the holiday ends, correspondence flows between the countries — although the young British travellers continue to write in their own tongue, convinced that some translator will be found.

✧ ✧ ✧

GIRLS have a greater facility for learning languages; but the presence of girls in a group, so fully accepted in British youth clubs, proves alien to the ideas of many other people. A second difficulty in organizing exchanges arises because few other countries have the equivalent of the British youth club, which is kept entirely free from political or religious affiliations.

✧ ✧ ✧

WHATEVER the difficulties, the bureau sees that they are overcome. More and more young factory and office workers are asking how they can exchange views and visits with similar young people abroad. Most are timid of inviting individual, and unknown foreigners into their homes; but once group travel has made the young people acquainted, this barrier breaks down.

✧ ✧ ✧

STAYING IN homes, camps or youth hostels, young British people are closely questioned about conditions at home. And when they return it is surprising how much more observant they are of local conditions. Any who excel in sport are at once made welcome: so, too, are those who can contribute national songs or dances. Groups which take with them puppet plays or which can stage a simple play are everywhere sure of invitations. Groups of folk dancers taking with them their regional costumes are likely to be overwhelmed with hospitality, as are any who sing Scottish, Irish or Welsh songs.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE NEWEST groups to receive constant offers of hospitality are those skilled not only in square dancing but in making the calls: although these may be in a foreign tongue, they are already understood internationally.

Capitalist Baldonia

(New York Herald-Tribune)

Somehow, a writer in the Moscow "Literary Gazette" heard about the "principality" of Outer Baldonia and denounced it as an extreme example of capitalist "savagery" because the entire principality is owned by one man.

Baldonia is a tiny island off the Nova Scotia coast which was bought in 1949 by Russell M. Arundel for $750. He proclaimed its "independence," and managed to get its "legation" number listed in the Washington, D.C. telephone book. It is in his office.

During the tuna season, the island is a rendezvous for fishermen. Otherwise its population consists of a few sheep and birds. Arundel has invited his Soviet critic to visit Outer Baldonia during the tuna tournament next September.

How Police Reckon Speed of Wreck

By R. F. RODGERS, M.A., Mathematician-Physicist, RCMP Crime Detection Laboratory, Ottawa; in The Mounted Police Quarterly.

HAVE you ever wondered how the scientist can estimate the original speed of an automobile involved in an accident? all you need is a little mathematics and a few facts . . .

For example, consider the following recent automobile accident in the Maritimes.

The driver, in a 1950 Plymouth sedan, skidded 72 feet across the highway. He then plummeted down an eight-foot ditch and skidded 98 feet through the clay swamp ditch. After this, he struck and uprooted a tree, and travelled 32 feet (horizontally) through the air before coming to a stop.

The driver said he was travelling at 45 mph. Don't look now, but at what minimum speed would you say he was going before he started to skid. Seventy miles per hour? Or 80 miles per hour? The determination of this answer is an interesting problem.

HERE is how it's done:

First of all, we start at the end and work backwards. How fast was the car moving through the air? A little calculus shows that the minimum speed would result if the car leaves the ground at an angle of 45 degrees to the horizon. In such a case, its speed would be 21.9 mph. If the angle differs slightly from 45 degrees, the speed would be greater, and the effect on the initial speed is even less.

Hence we may take 21.9 mph as the speed just after uprooting the tree.

Next on the order sheet as we continue to move back is the tree. How can we accurately estimate its effect upon the car's speed. Astually, we don't have to make an accurate estimate. The effect of the tree is so slight that even an appreciable error in the estimation will have only a negligible effect on the final answer.

The tree had a trunk diameter of four inches. Now, it was estimated that three men pulling fairly hard could uproot a one-inch diameter tree. Since three men could exert a combined force of 500 pounds, the force required to uproot the larger tree would be 500 x 16 — 8,000 pounds. This is so because the larger tree has a cross-sectional area 4 x 4 — 16 times greater than the smaller one.

If we take this force as acting through one foot, the mechanical work done by the automobile is 8,000 foot-pounds. Since the automobile weighs 3,155 pounds, and the passenger 280 pounds, this work produces a loss of 1.5 mph in speed. Hence the speed just before hitting the tree is about 23.4 mph.

Skidding in the ditch is the same, in principle, as skidding along the highway. That is, if we know the final speed, the distance skidded, and the friction coefficient, we may compute the initial speed. As we know the first two factors, the problem boils down to finding a suitable friction coefficient. This was experimentally in the following manner:

An open clay region was made wet until it represented fairly closely the description of the clay swamp in the accident. A suitable car, with brakes locked, was dragged over this wet clay.

A spring balance, kindly lent to the writer by the National Research Council, showed that the average force was about 915 pounds. Since the test car and contents were found to weigh 3,700 pounds, the adopted friction coefficient was 915/3700 or 0.25 very nearly. This gives a speed of about 35.3 mph at the beginning of the swamp skid.

✧ ✧ ✧

NEXT, the effect of falling down the ditch must be considered. Those of you who remember your high school physics will recall that the loss of potential energy in falling must equal the gain of kinetic energy. This gain is about 3.6 mph, so the speed at the end of the highway skid is about 32.2 mph.

Finally, the effect of the road skid must be considered, and then we have solved our problem. The friction coefficient for a wet, hard-surfaced and level road is usually about 0.525.

Using this value, we get a speed of about 46.5 mph just before skidding. Since the friction coefficients adopted may differ slightly from the actual values at the accident, the driver could have been travelling at about 45 mph, as he said, although calculation shows that he was probably going slightly faster.

How fast did you originally guess the car was travelling? It pays to make the calculation! Incidentally, this shows that the calculation can be favorable to the accused, although it usually shows that he was traveling at excessive speed.

'Too Many Sane'

(Christian Science Monitor)

In Crowborough, England, Charles Macey won £5 (about $14) for bouncing up and down on a pogo stick 12,000 times in 95 minutes. Mr. Macey, it is related, also once played 216 holes of golf in 16 hours (he is a golf professional), walked six miles in less than an hour twirling a yo-yo, and walked backward 16 miles.

His philosophy on such matters he sums up in the comment that there are "too many sane people in the world." One may not wholly go along with that opinion. Possibly the sane people don't do enough insane things to get their share of attention. Some think the world needs more sane people rather than fewer.

But a great deal of so-called insanity or merely erratic behavior could be condoned if it took such relatively harmless forms as bouncing on a pogo stick or twirling a yo-yo while walking backwards.

But the disconcerting situations arise when someone goes in for marathon golf while the car is waiting to be washed, or delights year after year in walking backward into the 1890's, or seems always to be jumping up and down about something or other without the aid of a pogo stick.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

There were together Simon Peter, and Thomas called Didymus and Nathanael of Cana in Galilee, and the sons of Zebedee, and two other of his disciples. Simon Peter saith unto them, I go a fishing. They say unto him, We also go with thee. They went forth, and entered into a ship immediately; and that night they caught nothing.

But when the morning was now come, Jesus stood on the shore: but the disciples knew not that it was Jesus. Then Jesus saith unto them, Children, have ye any meat? They answered him, No. And he said unto them, Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find. They cast therefore, and now they were not able to draw it for the multitude of fishes . . .

As soon as they were come to land, they saw a fire of coals there, and fish laid thereon, and bread . . . Jesus saith unto them, Come and dine. And none of the disciples durst ask him, Who art thou? knowing that it was the Lord. Jesus then cometh, and taketh bread, and giveth them, and fish likewise.

This is now the third time that Jesus shewed himself to his disciples, after that he was risen from the dead. So when they had dined, Jesus saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs. He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord; thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my sheep. He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep. (John 21:2-6, 9, 12-17.)

Open to The Sea

(L'Evenement Journal, Quebec)

Following this event (sailing of a convoy of troops from Quebec in 1917), Mr. Gobeil, former deputy minister of Public Works, published a study on the practicability of winter navigation as far as Quebec. He concluded that the service was possible, while conceding the obstacles which might be presented by ice in the Gulf of St. Lawrence. In spite of that, technicians believe it possible to keep the river open between Quebec and Montreal. This winter the experiment will be tried of preventing an ice bridge from forming between Sorel and Three Rivers. From this experiment it is to be presumed that there are people who foresee that ocean navigation will before long be prolonged by several months on the St. Lawrence and not only as far as Quebec. In that speculative calculation a milder Quebec climate is taken into account,—a possibility not yet determined on.

On Ordering a Meal

(Brantford Expositor)

Too often securing a meal in a restaurant is an exercise in patience on both sides. Nothing sets the operation off on the wrong foot more surely than for the customer to peruse the menu as if he were a lawyer trying to fathom the traps in the fine print under the main type of a contract.

If you are sailing on the "Queen Mary" where the bill of fare is a yard long and you have a week to make up your mind, there is some point to heavy deliberations over a choice between Beef Stroganoff and Hommard L'Armaricaine.

Playing the gourmet in lesser circumstances is cheap showmanship. The place isn't staffed with the prodigality of a government bureau. Other hungry customers are waiting while the ditherer makes up his vacant mind, and no wonder the waitress becomes something less than an amiable blonde.

CAHA Against Jr. Transfers

By AL VICKERY

WINNIPEG (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association will continue to negotiate with the National Hockey League for a new professional - amateur agreement, but will stick to its guns on two vital points, transfers of junior and juvenile players.

At the association's two-day semi-annual meeting here during the week-end, delegates supported a western proposal banning the west-to-east transfer of juniors and branch [illegible] players by the NHL, which has said it will terminate its agreement with the CAHA, June 30, 1955.

The NHL objects to the continuance of the restriction on moving juniors from west to east, imposed by the CAHA for the seasons 1952-53 and 1953-54. The pros claim the agreement is no longer beneficial to them.

The CAHA's negotiating committee, however, was instructed to grant three other points requested by the NHL when the two groups continue their dickering.

They are: Use of uniform rules; a revision of financial arrangements on Memorial and Allan cup playoffs; and provision for a ban on tampering with players on professional, senior A, junior A and junior B clubs.

REPORT EXPECTED

It is expected a further report on the negotiations will be given at the CAHA's annual meeting in Vancouver May 9-13.

The week-end meeting also adopted a new financial set-up for junior and senior playoffs.

The proposed schedule submitted by secretary-manager George Dudley of Midland, Ont., was adopted with one change, following a motion for approval by Harry Foxton of Portage La Prairie, president of the Manitoba branch.

Under the schedule, proceeds of each series will be paid to the clubs participating in that series, with certain deductions: Clubs taking part in the most games will get a larger share of the profits.

Deductions will be made for the CAHA budget, around $75,000; for normal expenses such as travelling meals, etc., and for an insurance fund to cover losses on any series. The surplus will be distributed each year to the participating clubs according to games played. Dudley had originally proposed a five-per-cent deduction for the insurance fund. Foxton's motion raised the deduction to 15 per cent.

Biggest opposition came from Saskatchewan representatives. President Gordon Juckes of Melville said:

"The rich would get richer, and the poor poorer. We are killing [illegible] hockey."

[illegible] of apology will be sent to the Trail club for the mix-up in which the Smoke Eaters had been told at one stage that they would make the six-to-eight-week jaunt.

Earlier, the association gave moral support to Toronto Lyndhursts, Canada's representatives in the world championships at Stockholm Feb. 26-March 7, and approved Kenora Thistles' tour of Japan in March.

Dudley said that despite the "hysterical" criticism that the Toronto team was "too weak" to represent Canada, he thought the senior B Lyndhursts were "the right type of team to represent us over there."

Kenora, last year's western intermediate champions, were given the nod to tour Japan over Trail Smoke Eaters, previous year's western champs, because of an [illegible] agreement.

Little Yid, Irish Lizard Grand National Favorites

By STERLING SLAPPEY

LONDON (AP)—The Grand National and the Derby—two races here Britons turn out nearly a million strong, forget their troubles and bet a few bob—will be raced March 27 and June 2.

Hottest early favorites for the Grand National, far and away the world's toughest steeplechase, are Little Yid, Irish Lizard and Early Mist, the 1953 winner.

Others with an air of class who can last the four-mile, 856-yard course at Aintree with its 32 jumps are Ordinance, M'As-Tu-Vu, Glen Fire and Mont Tremblant.

M'As - Tu - Vu, owned by Queen Mother Elizabeth, picks up sentimental backing on that score. Mont Tremblant is rated one of the finest jumpers in Europe but probably will be asked to carry a heavy burden.

A field of between 30 and 45 jumpers is expected and a turnout of about 350,000 spectators. The ancient course, just north of Liverpool, is jammed with a crowd of that size almost every year.

Last June 600,000 covered the infield and lined the outside rail 10 deep to see the Derby, run at Epsom Downs, south of London. Landau, Infatuation, Royal Challenger and Darius are among the better-liked three-year-olds eligible for the mile and a half Derby. Landau runs under the Queen's colors.

Irish Sweepstakes annualy are based on the Grand National and the Derby.

Just a cut below the two big races in prestige and interest is the St. Leger, run annually at Doncaster, to the north in Yorkshire. Although the date has not been determined officially, Wednesday, Sept. 8 probably will be hte day.

Two other classic races, the 2,000 Guineas and the 1,000 Guineas, will be run at Newmarket, Wednesday, April 28, and Friday, April 30.

Other big racing dates include: Lincolnshire handicap at Lincoln, March 24; the Oaks for fillies at Epsom, June 4; King George and Queen Elizabeth Stakes at Ascot Heath, July 17; Goodwood Stewards' Cup at Goodwood, July 27; the Cesarewitch at Newmarket, Oct. 13 and the Cambridgeshire at Newmarket, Oct. 27. The date for Manchester November handicap has not been set.

Richard's Verbal Bodycheck Sets Hockey World In Whirl

MONTREAL (CP)—The pen is mightier than the hockey stick, even when both are used by Maurice Richard.

The hockey world found itself on its ear during the weekend, upset by a verbal bodycheck by the terrible-tempered Gaul, who is worth as much to Montreal Canadiens as the Montreal Forum, some say.

The National Hockey League star unleashed a newspaper blast at Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL terming him a "dictator."

The Rocket fired his salvo Friday in his regular column, called "The Hat Trick," in the French language weekly Samedi - Dimanche. And just to make sure no one would think the dictator charge was a slip of the pen, Richard accused Campbell of a few other things, including the charge that he discriminates against French-Canadians.

When Campbell read the piece he confronted Frank Selke, manager of Canadiens, and demanded what he was going to do about it. Selke said little except that he would speak with Richard before issuing a statement, possibly not until next week.

Richard attended the usual pregame conference at the Forum Saturday, leaving promptly afterwards without comment. Earlier, he confirmed that he wrote the story and added "When the storm caused by this article has blown over, I will explain my thoughts more clearly."

London Rink Wins Detroit Curling Trophy

DETROIT (AP)—The Michigan Cup, top trophy in the 68th international curling classic, went to the Jack Nash rink of London, Ont., Sunday after its first event 10-6 victory over B.C. Phippen of Sarnia.

In the second event, J. C. Preston of Brantford, scored a 12-11 victory over Joseph McGlynn of Detroit to capture the Detroit Cup.

J. Nelson Brown of Detroit skipped off with an 11-8 triumph over Fred Rubbra of Montreal in the third event for the Cornwall Trophy.

The Irwin Palmer Cup, signifying the fourth event of the finals, was taken by Thomas Moran of Wawatosa, Wis., with a 11-9 win over M. J. Chilton of Sarnia.

Bud Royle Hits 326

In the Mercantile Bowling League in the southend last week, Ted Williams had high triple of 710, including games of 265 and 246. Bud Royle's 326 was top single. The 7-0 wins went to Mustangs, Combines, Turner's and Seabrook's over UCO, Cherney's, Austins and Pet. Express; the 5-2 victories were taken by Charlotte Credit No. 2, Jets, Dominion, Ackison and Bob & Betty over Canoe, Pet. Co-op, Loblaw's, Tent & Awning, and Charlotte Credit No. 1.

M. Knights Leads

M. Knights had high three of 725 and top single of 311, as well as a 240, last week in the Lucky Strikes Ladies' Bowling League. The 3-1 victories were taken by Callaghan, Parsons, Gibbons and Reed over Butcher, McBride, Miles and Graham in that order.

Senior lacrosse club had a weekend meeting but hadn't yet decided on a coach or manager for 1954. A committee of Bob Peirson, Ken Kingston, Bob Curtin, Mick Magee and Dootch Vitarelli will check further into these appointments and report back to an early executive meeting. Meantime, Dr. J. R. Epping and Ken Kingston have been chosen vice-presidents of the club to replace retiring Paul Irwin and Gordon Dobbin. Ray Tanner has been added to the executive, and one or two more are being considered. Bill Blaby has been named treasurer. The club is thinking of taking over the junior club, also, since Frank Paterson won't be sponsoring the juniors this year. Trailermen [illegible] preparing [illegible] Peirson as a player next season.

Lacrosse executive is still battling for a $2,000 cut of the $26,000 or so taken in by the CLA in the lucrative Mann Cup series in Victoria last september. CLA offered Petes a mere $500 and has even held that up on the say-so of the OLA which claims $432 cut from the OLA final games in Peterborough. Local club didn't send that in as they claimed $200 in bonds from Hamilton and Brampton for defaulting league games here. OLA says there are previous claims 'gainst these bonds. What a mess! OLA prexy Art Brown plans an early meeting of the senior clubs to see how financial troubles can be straightened out an to get an idea on 1954 entries. CLA wanted a hefty bond to give Petes the Mann Cup and were told to jump in the lake. Guess the CLA still has the cup somewhere in Toronto. Ho, hum.

Sparks From the Rocket

The Rocket started fireworks early this year. Maurice Richard stuck his neck out last week by writing a bitterly critical column on NHL prexy Clarence Campbell in a French-Canadian paper. Campbell now insists on Canadiens discipling their star or he (Campbell) will do so. We're inclined to sympathize with the fiery forward as Campbell loused up that sentence in the Geoffrion-Murphy mixup (admitting Murphy started it but giving Geoffrion the stiffer sentence), and also for his letting NHL coaches pop off. Seems a coach can say anything about Campbell but a player can't. However, the Rocket went a bit too far and will have to pay some way or other. Authority must be respected, even by stars.

When the fifth - place Hamilton Cubs beat Quebec Frontenacs 3-1 in an OHA junior "A" upset last week, Bill Stewart of Peterborough got the third tally for Coach Jim Skinner's squad. Son of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Stewart here, husky Bill looks to be well on his way toward a pro berth in the Detroit Red Wings' chain as he finishes up his junior days. He was a fine young puckist with the junior "B" Oddfellows here ere going to Oshawa Generals in "A" company a couple of years ago. With the new Hamilton junior "A" entry—sponsored by the Wings—this season, Bill is up near the top in club scoring, and is sure to go further. Good stuff.

Junior Petes Rolling On

Junior Petes showed their class Saturday night in Port Perry when they beat the Flyers (an Oshawa outfit playing in Port Perry) 6-4 to lengthen their lead atop the OHA junior "B" pack. Fine work by Red Creighton's hustling young pack, the whole squad starring from Goalie Delahey out in this speedy encounter. Best junior team seen around these parts in many years. They play the second-place Lindsayites on Scugog ice tomorrow, and then take on Midland here Wednesday eve. Port Perry dropped to third slot with the Saturday reverse. Jim Morrow clicked for three goals while Larry Ball scored two and helped on two more. Murray Byrne was in on two, and Paul Doris, Heffernan, Bill Coyle and Gary Kearns each figured in one. Nice going, boys.

Senior "B" Petes travel tonight to Belleville for an OHA engagement, and then rest till Friday when Orillia comes up this way. Saturday scraps saw Kingston turn back Oshawa as Orillia were beating Belleville, so now the K's and Pontiacs have hopped over Petes into second spot by one point, both being tied for the second rung back of Oshawa. However, the Petes can again take second place tonight if they win in Belle Villa. A real race, eh? Oshawa now has 28 points, Orillia and Kingston 25 each, Pets 24 and Belleville just 12. Race is more than half over, winding up in a bit better than six weeks. Four clubs will make group semi-finals by then.

NHL Referee Storey Has Rough Sunday

BOSTON (AP) — Referee Red Storey of the National Hockey League had a rough time in Sunday night's Chicago-Boston game at Boston Garden.

First he had to help linesman Herb Galla[illegible] call offsides when the second linesman failed to appear for the game. Then Storey was flattened when a player's stick accidentally struck him in the face.

He was cut inside the mouth but no stitches were needed and he finished the game.

Young's Point Ties Up Game In Last Minute

YOUNG'S POINT (ENS)—Warsaw and Young's Point battled to a 4-all tie in an East Peterborough Hockey League game at the Lakefield arena on Friday night. Playing conditions were good and a fair crowd was on hand.

Scoring got underway early as J. Fawcett netted D. Heard's pass at the 37 second mark, and J. Blewett (J. Fawcett) got Young's Point's second goal at 2:50. J. Darling received a hooking penalty and about a minute later L. Lonsberry (H. Darling) opened the scoring for Warsaw. D. Evans, of Warsaw was given the gate for cross-checking at 5:12. Two more quick goals, one by J. Barcroft (K. Fawcett) at the 7 minute mark, and a retaliation by J. Williams (D. Evans) at 8:18, completed the scoring for a while, but play remained fast and rugged. Finally, at 14:24, A. Griffin netted a pass from J. Williams to make it 3-3. The period ended without further scoring.

The pace was stepped up in the second period as each team tried unsuccessfully to break the deadlock. The only penalty of the period went to J. Barcroft for tripping.

At 4:16 of the third, V. Clements (H. Darling) put Warsaw one goal up. Play roughened somewhat, with V. Clements receiving a boarding penalty, followed by G. Payne for tripping, and J. Barcroft for cross-checking. With about two minutes of play remaining, Young's Point withdrew their goalie, in favor of six forwards. For almost a minute, Young's Point pressed hard but failed to score. A skirmish drew double penalties, to L. Lonsberry and K. Fawcett for roughing, and with only a few seconds remaining D Heard recovered the puck from a scramble in front of the Warsaw net, to beat goalie Wingett, and make the final score 4-4. Next Friday night Young's Point play host to Apsley and a return engagement takes place in Apsley on Saturday night.

Regents Down Central "Y" As Foul-Shooting Pays Off

It pays to know how to sink foul shots in basketball. Just ask Doug MacPherson's Regents, Peterborough's intermediate representatives in the Ontario playdowns this season. Toronto Central YMCA seniors were too close for comfort in the first and second quarters in Saturday's exhibition game at St. Peter's High gym. Then suddenly in the second half the "Y" quintet had a flurry of personal fouls. The expert foul shooting by Regents promptly sank 15 out of a possible 22 shots, helping them to a 72-55 decision over Toronto.

Central "Y", which has been playing in a YMCA senior league in Toronto, since the Tri-Bells ran away with the Toronto senior league two years ago, dazzled the Regents with shifty passing plays and almost perfect shooting in the first half. After that they seemed to tire, resulting in one personal foul after another.

CLOSE AT FIRST

Despite this senior play by Toronto, the Regents, employing a fast break, met the "Y" offence, matching it play for play. But until late in the second quarter when Dan Griffin and Bob Smith started to score more regularly, Toronto managed to keep ahead by several points.

Griffin and Smith then paced the Regents to a rally which enabled them to take a 31-29 margin at the half, after being down 12-11 at the quarter mark.

Squeezing the Toronto attack down to long, two-hand set shots throughout the third quarter, the Regents gradually went ahead on under-the-basket play by Bill Edger, Ab Stewart and Griffin. Late in the quarter the foul shots began to add to the total and at three-quarters the Regents held a nine-point edge, 55-46.

LENGTHEN LEAD

Bob Smith and Doug Galvin with neat one and two-hand set shots from around the key, plus excellent foul shooting by Dave Langhorne, more than matched the Toronto "Y" scoring in the last quarter as the Regents lengthened their margin.

The game's top scorer was Toronto's lanky Eric Wiley, who working from the pivot position in the second and third quarters, totalled 15 points. Toronto's other tall player, Bert Novis, also working from the pivot in the first quarter and then shooting from further out in the last, ran in 12 points. Opportunist Adrian Wiley was their third highest scorer with 10.

Newcomer Smith, ranging about the key area, topped the Regents' scoring with 12 points, all on field baskets. Griffin, thanks to his second quarter spurt and foul shots in the third, had ten while Don Ash, mixing baskets and foul shots in the third quarter rally, worked in 12 points.

Toronto Central YMCA — E. Wiley 15, Gundeson 3, Noivs 12, O'Halloran 2, A. Wiley 10, McCutcheon 2, Gordon 3, Fontanna 3, Hughes 5, Paskiwich.

Peterborough Regents — Burns 4, Rodger 7, J. Stewart 5, A. Stewart 6, Dibben 5, Ash 11, Griffen 10, Langhorne 8, Smith 12, Galvin 4.

Wide-Open Play Dished Up In Church Loop

Some wide-open hockey was seen in four Church Hockey League fixtures run off Saturday morning in Civic Arena. Mark St. midgets trimmed St. John's 10-2 and George St. midgets blanked St. George's 4-0. In bantam play All Saints took a 4-1 win over St. James'. Peewee tilts saw St. John's whitewash Knox 4-0 as St. James' took a 6-1 triumph over St. George's. The executive has ruled a penalty will be given any boy breaking rule six: "No player of any other organized hockey team may compete in this league." Owing to this, Terry Davis of Park St. midgets has been suspended for a game.

Anderson and Hawthorne scored in the first for George St. midgets, Casey aiding on one. Lloyd from Dinsdale was the only score in the second, while Tetlock added one next heat. D. Lustic got both St. John's goals in the other midget fray, Falkner aiding on one. Moffitt, Jim Harding and English scored for Mark St. in the first, Innis helping once. Grills added two next period. In the third, Jerry Harding, Paul, Moffitt, Grills and English tallied, an assist going to Jerry Harding.

Gilders from Weaver meant an early goal for St. James bantams. Davies twice tallied from Gilders next stanza, and Foy got another. Scolley got the only goal for All Saints in the third, Weese being in on it.

Curry for St. James and Hughes of St. George's were scorers in the peewee joust. St. James ran in four next period, J. Armour counting two and Curry and Ball one each. J. Armour wound it up with another in the third. Dalliday and Welsh hit the hemp for St. John's peewees in the first period and, after a scoreless middle canto, Dalliday and Welsh hit the lamp again, an assist each going to J. Parker and Dalliday. Play generally was clean in all four frays.

Victors Named In Tourney For Step To "A"

Hugh Gung was in on two "B" badminton titles on Saturday night at the Market Hall, taking the men's doubles with Al Conlin, and the mixed doubles with Jessie Wong.

Gung and Conlin won the men's doubles finals from B. Carley and S. Fleming by scores of 18-15 and 15-3. Wong and Gung took the mixed finals from I. Bullock and J. Johnston 18-17 and 15-9 after keen competition.

I. Bullock was runner-up in mixed and she took the ladies' doubles with M. Elson (who won the mixed consolation with P. Wright) to move up to "A" play. The new "A" players are I. Bullock, M. Elson, J. Wong, H. Gung and A. Conlin. The tourney concluded with the presentation of prizes by club president Bob Baker. The competition was conducted by Roy Johnston, while Ann Graham and her social committee were in charge of the lunch.

Campbellford Gets Win Over Hastings

HASTINGS (ENS) — After leading for two periods, Hastings dropped a TVL fixture to Campbellford 10-6 in a fast contest before a large crowd.

It was fast, clean hockey all the way, with plenty of breakaways to keep both goalies on their toes.

Morrissey, replacing the injured Mulholland in the Hastings net, performed well with the line of Caine, Killan and Allen, tops for the home club, while the Blake line shone for Campbellford.

Hastings: Goal, Morrissey; defence, McGillen, Hill; centre, Cain; wings, Killen, Allen. Alts, Burns, Moloney, Basciano, West, Oliver, Cupoli, O'Donoghue, Forde, Orr.

Junior Petes Gain 6-4 Win Over Port Perry Flyers To Top Pack By Four Points

Smiles wreathed the faces of Coach Red Creighton, members of the executive, and fans who accompanied the Junior Petes to Port Perry Saturday night, after Creighton's "best team in years" defeated Port Perry Flyers by a score of 6-4 for their 10th win in 11 starts, and tightened their lead atop the Central Ontario junior "B" group. It was a sizzling game throughout, clean, lightning fast, with Peterborough [illegible] holding a slight but distinct margin in play in all three periods, to gain a well-merited victory. Port Perry fought doggedly throughout, were particularly effective in a withering second frame; but the men of Creighton were equal to every challenge as they forged to triumph.

THE STANDING

League standing to date finds Junior Petes leading with 20 points as a result of 10 wins and four losses; Lindsay places second with 16 points—eight victories, six defeats; Port Perry have seven and seven; Collingwood four and six; while Midland Wings have a record of two wins and eight defeats to tail the pack. Peterborough plays in Lindsay Tuesday, then returns home for a Midland engagement, Wednesday night at Civic which promises to be a dandy, based on last game's showing a 3-2 Petes' affair.

Action speeded up from the outset Saturday, as both teams flew. But no scoring came, despite many brilliant thrusts either way, with netmen Hawe and Delahey very sharp. Referee Doug Calhoun pinned four penalties on Flyers in the first, as Lowell, Dykstra, Tom O'Connor, Ed Romanuk and John Chaszewski in turn committeed minor offences. Notwithstanding the shortage, however, Flyers held off.

OPEN SCORING

Diminutive Paul Doris opened the scoring for Peterborough early in a mid-frame that possibly eclipsed anything seen locally in junior ranks so far this season, for sustained speed and two-way action, when he blasted a 12-foot drive past Hawe, seconds after Chaszewski returned to the ice on his late penalty of the first frame. The time was 2:14 and skilful defence star Murray Byrne, drew the assist on the sparkler.

Lawrence Ball, latest junior sensation, whom Red Creighton is now using up front with the veterans Gord Coyle and Jimmy Morrow to good advantage, put Petes two up, less than a minute later, when he whipped a sharp drive from the left corner that caromed off Dykstra's leg into the troubled mesh of Hawe. Seconds later, fireball Jim Morrow, former star of the erstwhile Oddfellow's West-Wyatt-Morrow top-scoring trio, combined with Ball to give Petes a strong lead, when he sank a fast passout from 10 feet out, and the crowd groaned.

CAME BACK

Flyers, not to be denied, played terrific hockey during the ensuing minutes as if in reprisal, and found reward when John Chaszewski from ace Tom O'Connor, hit the mesh on a low 30-footer to the right corner. Morrow returned with Ball, who played his best game of the season, to regain this one as he drove a hard 15-footer to the right side, a minute later. Neil Attersley and O'Connor successively scored with each other's help, and a late assist from Dykstra, later, to put Flyers back in the games as the speed grew tremendous while the crowd roared.

"The best hockey we've seen this season" echoed dozens.

The final frame saw Petes methodically subdue their tough but outsmarted foes by dint of a stiff offensive, coupled with an air-tight defensive pattern, that made the homesters' best efforts fall [illegible] Delahey, who [illegible] heights in the final as his mate again outscored Flyers 2-1.

GETS ANOTHER

Ball again scored from Byrne, as he outwitted three men to blast Hawe; and Morrow for his third goal, from Kearns and Heffernan, wound up the hectic third after 11 minutes of gruelling battle; with Ken Fisher from Attersley and O'Connor adding one final tally for Ports, in the dying minutes. Referee Calhour earned plandits for his fine arbitration.

Petes: Goal, Delahey; defence, Byrne, Frizzelle; centre, Wren; wings, Kearns, Hook; alts, Ball, Coyle, Morrow, Doris, McDougall, Gardner, Heffernan, Snape.

Referee—Doug Calhoun, Oshawa.

Filchock Wins Praise From Roughriders Executive

By WILF CHISLETT

REGINA (CP)—As a rule, there aren't too many kind words for western football coaches.

George Trafton, deposed coach of Winnipeg Blue Bombers, and Bob Snyder, fired recently as Calgary Stampeders' coach, can attest to that.

But Old Fearless would have blushed had he been on hand Sunday to hear the comments of the Saskatchewan Roughriders executive at the Western Interprovincial Football Union team's annual meeting.

The fans love old fearless—Frank Filchock. And what the fans think goes double for the Rider executive, busy counting the club's record profit.

Retiring president Bob Kramer, reporting on a good year, gave much of the credit for the club's success to Filchock.

"You will all appreciate where the team would be if it weren't for Frankie Filchock," he said.

Kramer recalled how Filchock fought to take Riders from last place to the WIFU semi-final where they lost out to Winnipeg. He told how Filchock tutored young Canadian players.

And his voice broke, when he came to the part where Filchock, his only quarterback out with a leg injury, stepped into the breach himself.

Frank will be back for his second season with Regina, probably with more green stuff to line his pockets.

Still uncertain is the future of Glenn Dobbs, Riders' coach before Filchock took over. A former Los Angeles Dons star, Dobbs was sent back into the quarter slot last season and spent most of it on the bench with a leg injury. Club officials declined to say if he will be asked to come back.

Kramer recommended that the Riders' new executive bring in three top players—a quarterback, a backfielder and a tackle of the same calibre as Martin Ruby, an all-star player since coming to Riders from New York Yankees in 1951.

The Riders so far have signed five of last year's U.S. imports: Mel Beckett, formerly with Green Bay Packers; tackles John Precheck, Seattle Ramblers; Ruby; Guard Mario DeMarco, Detroit Lions, and halfback Bobby Marlow, former Alabama star.

Contracts have been sent out to end Stan Williams, formerly of Dallas Texans; centre John Wodniak, also a former Texan, and halfback Herb Johnson, who broke five WIFU records this year after leaving Seattle Ramblers.

The Riders have said they have no plans for Otto Graham, Cleveland Browns' quarterback. The team is interested in quarterback Tom Yewcic and end Don Dohoney of Michigan State.

Canadiens Bow To Red Wings 2-1; Crush Hawks 12-1

By JIM BASTABLE, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Who does Montreal fandom favor in the Richard-Campbell affair? The Rocket, of course. The fans made no bones about their man-of-the-hour choice Saturday night as Montreal Canadiens, with Maurice [illegible] usual leftwing [illegible] Hawks 12-1 in the worst National Hockey League drubbing this season. League president Clarence Campbell, the man Richard calls a "dictator," was in a box seat. The fans told him to "go home."

But as expected, all the fireworks was on the ice. The 13,950 fans just provided a noisy background.

In the only other Saturday game third-place Toronto Maple Leafs scored three goals in the first period and held off a strong offensive to defeat fourth-place Boston Bruins 3-2.

In three games Sunday, Canadiens slipped into second place by going down to a 2-1 defeat by the Red Wings in Detroit, the Bruins defeated the Hawks 5-3 in Boston and fifth-place New York Rangers pulled a surprising 4-1 upset over the Leafs in New York.

At Montreal Saturday night, the parade of goals came while Campbell was being protected with an extra detail of 15 plainclothesmen at the Forum.

The crowd booed the league president lustily between cheers for the Canadiens scorers and yelled at him between periods to "go home, Campbell; go home."

Campbell, who has yet to take or announce any intended action on Richard's charge, took it in stride.

Richard was cheered almost every time he stepped on the ice.

Richard didn't score any goals. But he gave the fans plenty to howl about as he collected four assists for a total of 25 goals and 19 assists this year.

Ken Mosdell's three-goal performance was nearly overlooked. Jean Beliveau was lost in the shuffle with his two markers. Dollard St. Laurent, Floyd Curry and Dick Gamble counted one goal each to finish up the Montreal scoring.

George Gee accounted for the Chicago goal, late in the first period.

The eight points chalked up by Olmstead tied the league record set nine years ago by Richard—five goals and three assists against the Red Wings in Montreal Dec. 28, 1944.

At Toronto, 12,809 fans saw the Leafs count on goals by forwards Harry Watson, Sid Smith and Ron Stewart. Cal Gardner and Dave Creighton scored for Boston.

Sugar Jim Henry and Harry Lumley starred in the nets. Henry made 27 stops for Boston. Lumley stopped 28 Bruins drives.

At Detroit Sunday, 15,038 fans, the largest crowd of the season, saw the Red Wings surge back into first place in the league race.

John Wilson scored the winner after seven minutes of the second period. Ted Lindsay got the first Detroit goal, 16 seconds after Ken Mosdell put the Montrealers out in front at 2:06 of the first period.

The high-flying Bruins ran the count to 5-1 before the Hawks recovered.

Ed Sandford, Johnny Peirson and Dave Creighton tallied the other Boston goals. Lou Jankowski fired two of the Chicago goals, with Larry Wilson getting the other.

No games are scheduled until Wednesday, when the Hawks meet the Leafs at Toronto and Detroit travels to New York.

Windsor Laces Hamilton Tigers 5-3

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The magic number for the winners in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A series during the weekend was five. The losers went down one, two, three.

In Stratford, the Indians laced Chatham Maroons 5-1. In Owen Sound the Mercurys regained first place in the standings by defeating Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen 5-2. Sunday Windsor Bulldogs turned back Hamilton Tigers 5-3.

In the Northern Ontario Hockey Association the Trappers of North Bay were stopped twice. Saturday they were downed 7-4 by the Greyhounds in Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Sunday they came out on the short end of an 11-3 verdict at the hands of the Indians in Sault, Mich.

The Lumber Kings dropped Sudbury Wolves 5-2 in Pembroke Saturday in the other NOHA action.

The Indian victory over Chatham Saturday was their third in the last four games and was led by Bill Flick who scored two goals and assisted on another pair. Bob Mader, Bill Cupolo and Herve Dejordy counted the other Stratford markers.

Owen Sound continued its climb with their sixth onsecutive victory while the Dutchmen remained in their rut by taking their third loss in a row. Gerry Reid with two goals and Tommy Burlington with a goal and three assists were the main cogs in the Owen Sound wheel.

Buck Forslund and Bill Hagen added single tallies for the Mercurys. George Scholes and Jack McKenzie got the Kitchener goals.

CAME FROM BEHIND

The Bulldogs came from behind with three goals in the third period to take the victory that gave them a share of third place with the Tigers.

Walt Pawlyshyn, Gary Gordon, Gord Haidy, Fred Hildebrand and Frank Bathgate shared the Windsor scoring. Leo McGinn, Murray Comfort and Jack Taylor clicked for Hamilton.

Chatham is at Niagara Falls and Hamilton at Owen Sound in the OHA Tuesday. The same night has the Indians at North Bay and Pembroke at Sudbury in the NOHA.

Castellani Advances Among Middleweights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rocky Castellani of Luzerne, Pa., advanced to the logical contender role among the world's middleweights in the National Boxing Association's winter ratings announced Sunday night.

The NBA recommended that Castellani get the next crack at the middleweight title now worn by Carl (Bobo) Olson of Hawaii. Randy Turpin, who lost a championship bout to Olson last year, was rated behind Olson.

Aside from Castellani's rise from sixth place, there was little change from the NBA's fall ratings. Once again the boxing association decreed that there is no logical challenger in sight to heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano.

The NBA did rank four men as outstanding boxers in the heavyweight division with former titlist Ezzard Charles at the top of that list. Behind him are Nino Valdez, Dan Bucceroni and Roland LaStarza.

Gaudaur President Of Tiger-Cats

HAMILTON (CP)—J. G. (Jake) Gaudaur, chosen 1954 president of the Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Big Four, shouldn't have too much trouble in his dealings with Big Four clubs. He's played with most of them.

The 33-year-old centre, whose comeback last season helped inspire the Ti-Cats to a Grey Cup, took over reins of the club at Saturday's annual meeting, when Frank Bliss, president for two seasons, stepped down to get in closer touch with his insurance business.

Florida League Frees Havana

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Florida International League directors Saturday agreed to release Havana to the International League.

Phil O Connell, president of the class B circuit, who made the announcement, declined to disclose the amount received for the release, but said it "it was on terms and conditions satisfactory to both parties."

O'Connell said that the arrangement was made by Robert Maduro, Havana owner, "without any help or assistance in any way from the International League."

Maduro also refused to say how much he had paid the league for letting his club go.

One director, who would not be identified, said a guess of between $20,000 and $25,000 would be a good one. The International League is reported to have paid $25,000 for the release of Richmond from the Piedmont league.

Bert Olmstead, Montreal, who scored four goals and four assists Saturday, equalling Maurice Richard's record, to help Canadiens drub Chicago Black Hawks 12-1.

Leo Labine, Boston, whose two goals in 39 seconds Sunday sparked the Bruins to a 5-3 victory over Chicago.

Wally Hergesheimer, New York, with two quick first period goals Sunday that set Rangers on the road to down Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1.

Ex-Boxing Champion Dies From Cancer

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP)—Rocky Kansas, 58, former lightweight boxing champion of the world, died of cancer Sunday night.

Kansas held the lightweight crown from Dec. 7, 1925 until July 3, 1926. He won the title in a 15-round decision from Jimmy Goodrich at Buffalo. He retired after losing the crown to Sammy Mandel in a 10-round decision at Chicago.

Donald MacLeod Opens Service Station

A new White Rose service station opened today on Lansdowne St., opposite McGinness Trailers Ltd. The proprietor is 31-year-old Donald B. MacLeod, a native of New Glasgow, N.S.

Mr. MacLeod has been associated with the automotive industry almost all his life, acquiring his initial experience in his home town. From 1946-48 he was an automobile dealer in New Glasgow and shortly after this accepted a position with the Truck and Tractor Co., Ltd., in Toronto. As a qualified mechanic he became parts department manager of the company after less than a year's service as a road service organizer.

During the time spent with this company he and his wife lived in Cooksville, and in travelling for the company Mr. MacLeod has become acquainted with the Peterborough area.

Late in 1953 Mr. MacLeod purchased the Lansdowne site and nearly completed building from Arnold Steele. Corresponding with the latest Canadian Oil design, the service station is ranch style construction and is equipped with all the modern facilities.

In addition to complete automotive repair service, Mr. MacLeod will deal in power lawn mowers and garden tractors and offer a service department for them as well. This will include sharpening and overhauling.

His place of residence is not established yet, but he intends to settle here, with his wife and 3-month-old daughter, Kathleen, in the near future.

Phone Battle Repulses 'Enemy Attack'

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Officers of eight western Ontario regiments successfully repulsed an attack by two "enemy" brigades in a "telephone battle" that lasted from 4 p.m. Saturday to noon Sunday.

The battle was confined to Wolseley Barracks here where officers issued commands to their regiments on the basis of reports coming in from the "field."

Western Ontario area headquarters said the scheme, "Exercise Old Fox", was designed to train reserve officers in receiving and giving commands without seeing the actual battle scene.

PLAYED TRIPLE ROLE

A staff of 20 officers from area headquarters played the triple role of enemy, division headquarters and platoons in action, working with a large cloth model of the battle territory.

Officers involved came from: The Eighth Regiment, St. Thomas; Essex Scottish, Windsor; the Kent Regiment, Chatham; 31st Field Regiment, Sarnia; 21st Anti-Tank Regiment, Wingham; 7th Medium Regiment, the Canadian Fusiliers, London; and the Windsor Regiment.

Two Hamilton Killers Buried By N.Y. State

OSSINING, N. Y. (AP)—The bodies of executed killers Maurice O'Dell and Walter Griffen were turned over to an undertaker for burial at state expense Saturday after Canadian relatives declined to claim them.

O'Dell, 28, and Griffen, 27, both from Hamilton, were electrocuted Thursday night for the robbery slaying of Donald Hurd, a Buffalo, N. Y., jeweler.

Authorities at Sing Sing Prison later received telegrams from O'Dell's sister, Mrs. Joyce Pye, and Griffen's mother, Mrs. Vera Halloran, saying they would leave all funeral arrangements to the prison.

Flattering Bandits Take $440 In Watches

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Three men walked into a jewelery store Saturday and one told the proprietor the shop had been recommended by a police officer. They left with $440 worth of watches and an $8.50 clock—all for a $2 down payment.

Proprietor F.D. Saunders said one of the men agreed to pay $2 down on a watch and leave it at the store, paying for it at the rate of $10 a month.

He did not discover the clock and watches were missing until he took stock in the evening.

FROSTY WINDOW PATTERNS — As the temperatures throughout the district dropped down to 10 and 15 below zero during the past several nights, Jack Frost has been painting his feathery designs on window panes such as shown above. But there is little consolation in his fancywork when he starts nipping at noses, cheeks, ears and toes during a short walk outside. —(Examiner Staff Photo).

Soviet Press, Radio Renew Hate Tirade

LONDON — (Reuters)—Soviet press and radio commentators, dropping the honeyed tones of their New Year greetings to the West, have launched a new propaganda tirade against the United States.

With the Berlin four-power conference of foreign ministers only two weeks off, Russia's hate machine is spreading the story that the U.S. is out to sabotage any relaxation of world tension.

Aim of the new campaign appears to be two-fold; to split the western allies and to create the advance impression that if the Berlin conference fails, it will not be the fault of Russia.

Asia comes in for special attention, implying that Foreign Minister Molotov will press his earlier demand that Communist China join the big four powers in a full dress conference on world peace.

SABOTAGE MOVES

Alev Leontiev, Moscow radio commentator, said today the United States " is trying to sabotage all attempts to relax international tension in Asia".

He claimed the United States is making trouble in Korea, Communist China, Indo-China and Pakistan.

"Political forces outside Asia" are blamed for the fact that settlements have not been reached in Indo-China and Malaya.

Soviet newspapers portray Chiang Kai-shek of Nationalist China as a war maniac threatening Asia "on direct instructions from his United States supporters".

The people of western Europe are told that their economies are depressed by United States "monopolies" preventing free trade with Communist countries.

PREDICT CRISIS

Moscow has also been warning Western Europe of a coming U.S. economic crisis.

Playing on French fears, Moscow repeats with monotonous regularity that U.S. "ruling circles" are rearming West Germany "to revive German Fascism and militarism".

Britons, traditionaly proud of their navy, are told the United States is out to take away their domination in the Mediterranean to make the area "a jumping-off ground against the Soviet Union and the people's democracies."

Red Star, Soviet Navy paper, also claims that the United States is only waiting for the British to evacutae the Suez Canal base to station U.S. troops there.

Similarly, the United States is said to have squeezed British oil companies out of the Middle East to U.S. advantage.

Queen Says Difficulties Commonwealth Challenge

By GOMER JONES

WELLINGTON, N. Z. (Reuters) The Queen today proclaimed her faith in the Commonwealth as a great force for good in the world and described present difficulties as a challenge.

"The arduous times are a challenge to us to exert the Commonwealth's beneficient influence with telling effect," she said in reply to the loyal toast at a state luncheon in Parliament House.

The Queen reaffirmed the dedication of herself and of the Duke of Edinburgh to devote their lives and energy to the advancement of their peoples throughout the Commonwealth.

FACING GREAT ERA

Saying she felt New Zealand was crossing the threshold of a great era, the Queen said:

"May you continue to seize the opportunities which here have been so richly bestowed; and may you never fail in your determination to follow the paths of peace and orderly progress to which your steps are already turned so that the generations to come will honor your names and this nation and the British people which gave it birth."

PM OPTIMISTIC

The theme of the Commonwealth's influence for good had been given by Prime Minister Sidney Holland in proposing the Queen's health.

"The greatest days of the Commonwealth lie ahead of us," he said. "Our resources are inexhaustible and given peace we can achieve much for the advantage of mankind."

Wellington people saw their first "on the spot" telecast when the royal visitors attended a civic reception at the town hall earlier in the day.

Viewers saw with excellent definition the Queen and the duke accept embroidered rugs for themselves and for Prince Charles and Princess Anne. Each rug bore the coat of arms of the city.

On behalf of the Maori people the Queen was given a carved staff and the duke a ceremonial Maori ax of greenstone, a type of jade mined in New Zealand.

Columnist Dies In London, Long Illness

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Fred J. Arnott, 47, a columnist for the London Free Press, died Saturday after a long illness.

He had been in newspaper work since his high school days, [illegible] the Waterloo Record.

He became known throughout western Ontario for his whimsical column, Facts and Fables, in the Free Press.

Mr. Arnott was born in Kitchener, the son of the late Dr. William J. Arnott. When the family moved to Tavistock he became correspondent for three nearby daily papers, the Stratford Beacon Herald, the Woodstock Sentinel Review and the Record.

He joined the Record full time in 1926 and covered the coronation of King George VI in 1937.

SERVED IN ARMY

He served as a lieutenant in the army during the Second World War until he was wounded in a training accident and discharged in 1941. He worked in a Kitchener public relations firm for a few years and joined the Free Press in 1944.

His first Facts and Fables column appeared in February 1946. In the same year he married Lorraine Whitlock of London. They have three children, one of them born two weeks before Mr. Arnott's death.

STIFF AND TIRED after a 48-hour air journey from Russia, WEEKEND feature writer Gerald Clark steps from an airplane at Montreal airport recently. Clark, the first Canadian newspaperman admitted to the Soviet Union with a working visa since 1946, will describe his experiences in a series of five articles beginning in The Examiner WEEKEND Magazine on January 16. He was allowed to go unmolested through some 5,000 miles of Russian territory, taking 50,000 words in notes and 200 photographs. He made his exit without these being censored.

Back From Month In Russia Gerald Clark To Speak Here

First Canadian correspondent to receive a working visa to the Soviet Union since 1946 is Gerald Clark, staff writer for the Weekend picture magazine which appears as a supplement to The Examiner on Saturdays. What he saw and learned after a month behind the Iron Curtain will be told in a series of five articles, the first of which will appear in Weekend on January 16.

A series from Russia has already appeared in the daily Examiner.

Mr. Clark is also slated to speak to the Peterborough Rotary club on Monday, January 18. He will tell of his unique experience as a reporter who was able to travel unmolested through 5,000 miles of Red territory, taking some 50,000 words of notes and 200 pictures.

Stiff and tired after a 48-hour air trip home from Russia, Clark's chief immediate recollections are memories of hell-for-leather Russian pilots and 'soft'' class train coaches that turned out to be hard and unheated.

A stranger to the Russian language, Clark found that English and French, with a smattering of German, enabled him to get by at times. For important interviews he invited along a member of a western embassy who acted as interpreter.

Clark used a 35 mm. camera on his outings. Three or four times he was stopped by militiamen and taken to police stations. However, his film was not confiscated and he was promptly released on identifying himself. He carried these photographs and written articles on him during his recent exit from Russia. They were not censored.

FREE TO MOVE

Clark's travels took him from Leningrad, on the Gulf of Finland, to the southern regions of Azerbaijan and Georgia, which border Turkey and Iran. Since he was not in an official delegation or an escorted group he was free to move about alone. He received no propaganda handouts, but was not entertained socially by any government agency.

Gerald Clark began his newspaper career with The Montreal Standard and later served as a war correspondent. Always with the forward groups of allied troops, he is accredited with being the first Canadian to enter a German city —Aachen. He also covered the Nuremberg and Petain trials.

Since the war Clark has been successively editor of The Standard magainze and feature writer for Weekend. The latter job has taken him on a wide variety of assignments from Hollywood and Hong Kong to postwar visits to the European cities he entered with the victorious allies in 1945.

Israel's Desert Development To Bring Economic Stability

By FRANCIS OFNER

BEERSHEBA (OFNS) — Israel is now engaged in a big road building programme to improve communications in the Negev, the southern and largely desert half of the country, on the agricultural and mineral development of which the Israelis pin much of their eco[illegible]

During the last five years, 30,000 Israelis have been settled in the Negev, which, except for a northern belt formerly cultivated by Arab settled nomads, has for centuries been a forbidding wilderness. Scattered over 70 communities, these pioneers are paving the way for the hoped-for settlement of half a million people who will help bring economic stability to Israel.

The road building programme now under way is designed to link the Negev's agricultural, industrial and mining enterprises with the rest of the country. A new 150 mile highway, now being built by Israel army engineers, cuts through the heart of the desert to shorten the distance between Beersheba, the capital of the Negev, and Eilat, destined to become Israel's Red Sea trading port. This follows the completion of a fifty-mile asphalt road, connecting Beersheba with the potash plants at Sodom, at the southern end of the Dead Sea, where in Biblical times Lot's wife turned into a salt pillar. The building of another two hundred miles of Negev highway has been given top priority in the planning of Israel's future construction projects.

The successful beginnings of an ambitious farming effort can already be seen around a number of experimental stations and recently-founded collective and co-operative villages. Two hundred and fifty thousand dunums (62,500 acres) of land have so far been brought under cultivation, and irrigation schemes have been developed. Since the firs[illegible] during the British Mandatory regime in 1946, a network supplying some thirteen million cubic metres of water a year—all of it drawn from wells in the Negev's northern parts—to three widely scattered groups of settlements has been brought into full operation.

The streams of the wadis (valleys or stream-beds) which for thousands of years let the rainwater run aimlessly to the seas are this year being harnessed in many desert regions, where dams have been built by the joint efforts of Israel and American Point Four engineers. Substantial quantities of rainwater have already been accumulated in the reservoirs at Kibbutz Shuval, Gerar and Kfar Yeruham to help these settlements over the long dry summer.

DIVERT RIVER WATER

A development out of all proachieved is expected if and portion to what has so far been when the Israelis succeed in overcoming the financial and political difficulties involved in the diversion of water from the Jordan and Yarkon rivers to the Negev.

The exploitation of mineral resources also forms part of the Negev development efforts. Potash, phosphates, kaolin and silicate sands are already being mined in quantities which for this country are not negligible. Copper, iron ore, rock salt and bituminous rock have also been found but the profitability of their exploitation has not yet been proved. Oil prospecting, so far with no results, is also proceeding.

Pioneering urge, desire to revive the Biblical days in a twentieth-century setting, and defence considerations make up the strange mixture of impulses underlying the Israelis' growing concern for the Negev desert, recently spotlighted by the retirement to the isolated, sheep-raising settlement of Edeh Boker of Israel's leading statesman, former Prime Minister David Ben Gurion. Just as the seven wells sunk by Abraham in this town of Beersheba decided the fate of the ancient Hebrews for generations to come, so—the Israelis feel—the future of modern Israel is dependent on their success in developing the Negev. — OFNS-Copyright.

Terrorism, Intrigue Seethe Violently Behind Moroccan Scene, But French Grip Unshaken

By TOM MASTERSON

CASABLANCA (AP) — Morocco, blistering frontier of French colonialism in North Africa, lives today in ominous calm with an undertone of terrorism and sabotage.

Bloody riots, rampant nationalism and oriental intrigue have failed to loosen the firm French grip on this country. If anything, the French are stronger than ever after playing a behind-the-scenes role in deposing nationalist Sultan Sidi Mohammed Ben Youssef and hand-picked Sultan Mohammed Ben Moulay Arafa.

Some believe the former sultan's exile averted a possible civil war between him and his long-time, pro-French antagonist, 80-year-old Sidi Thami El Glaoui, lord of the Atlas, leader of more than a million fierce Berber tribesmen and one of the wealthiest men in Morocco.

As Pasha of Marrakech, El Glaoui has long championed Franco-Moroccan friendship. His [illegible] only through close ties with France.

The tough, heavy-set French resident-general for Morocco, Augustine Guillaume, is determined to see that things go just this way.

The U.S. in two years has spent $300,000,000 to build five giant air bases in Morocco, three of which now are nearing completion. Behind this is the fact that Morocco, by its strategic location, is a vital link in the free world's defence line.

But it's the individual Moor who holds the key to success or disaster in plans to make Morocco one of the bulwarks of Western defence in the Middle East.

His life has improved in 40 years of French protection. He lives longer, thanks to French-sponsored health programs. He has seen desert tracks replaced by some 6,000 miles of modern highways. The Movie Column

Urges Actresses To Keep Their Glamor

By BOB THOMAS

Despite her tender years, Anne is an acting veteran. She started as a fashion model before she was five. She was in radio at seven, TV at 12 and was signed by MGM when she was 15. Later, for 20th Century-Fox, she got the title role in "Lydia Bailey," a big costume drama. Then she got lost in the shuffle on the big lot. Now she is winding up her contract with a loan-out to RKO for "Susan Slept Here."

In her three years at 20th - Fox, she made only three pictures, and those in the first year. I asked her what happened.

"I think the thing that did it was a role I did in 'Dream Boat'," she remarked. "I played Clifton Webb's daughter, and the character was a female Webb. Throughout most of the picture, she was a dull girl who wore glasses and lacked glamor.

"The picture was fun to do, but I don't think it was good for me. I think all the producers and directors on the lot considered me as sort of a character type of actress after that. I wasn't given any roles.

"If I had to do it over again, I probably would turn down the picture. It's different for someone who is established — like Elizabeth Taylor — to do such a role. The public is familiar with what she is like ordinarily. But I was a new personality, and people figured that was the kind of girl I was."

After her present loan-out, she becomes a free-lance.

Most players leave studios with the statement that the separation was by mutual consent. Anne is frank enough to admit that she is being dropped.

"A present, the studio is booming two young girls — Marilyn Monroe and Terry Moore," she said. "They have a few young girls around 17 that they are grooming. Otherwise they're letting everyone go. The studio isn't making enough pictures to keep a big contract list working."

Capsule review: 'The Glenn Miller Story" is a glossy version of the band leader's life. As with man success stories, there is not enough conflict along the way to make an exciting screen play. But the Millers are played ingratiatingly by Jimmy Stewart and June Allyson and the familiar music comes through in authentic style. Those who danced to his music are sure to suffer a nostalgic twinge and probably shed a tear or two at the tragic ending.

Top Red Farms Among Best Poor Farms World's Worst

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW

LONDON (OFNS)—As the deadly seriousness of the issue behind the struggle for heavier food production in the Soviet Union becomes clear to more and more officials in Moscow, the Soviet press becomes daily more outspoken. And in its denunciation of bad farming it is displaying for all to see the abysmally backward [illegible] of a century of collectivisation—on all but the very best farms.

N. S. Khruschev, First Secretary of the Communist party, started this frank talking with his milestone speech last September in which he severely criticised Soviet agriculture. But his facts of past and present production were so overlaid by optimistic prophecies about the future that they could not make their full impact. Latterly, however, the press has been supplementing his figures with detailed accounts of local shortcomings all over Russia.

The state of animal husbandry is still little short of disastrous. Khruschev had already confirmed that the livestock population in 1953, with far more people to feed was still considerably below the 1928 figure. But vital statistics are not enough. And the latest reports show that not only are there far too few animals on the Soviet farms, but even these animals are largely inferior.

SOME NIGH, AVERAGE LOW

In an attack on the lack of provision for the feed of stock, and especially for winter feeding, the Soviet Press tells us that although the "October 12" collective farm at Kostoroma managed to obtain more than 5,000 litres of milk from each cow during the year, the average milk yield for the whole Kostoroma province was barely in excess of 900 litres. The same thing is happening in Vologda. "advanced Vologda milkmaids" have been obtaining 4,000 to 5,000 litres per cow, but the region as a whole averages only just 800 litres.

Compare this with British figures. The model collective of Kostoroma average was less than 200 gallons, and that of Vologda a good deal lower. The national average yield for Britain is 620 gallons: and even this is regarded as a national disgrace by many farmers, thousands of whom obtain more than 1,000 gallons per cow—while the special Kostoroma figure is equalled and surpassed on the most advanced farms.

GOOD FARMS OASES

The picture that thus emerges is of a handful of farms where good modern herds have been built up and scientifically tended, and are equal to anything the world can show; but these are oases in a wilderness of primitive farming. Although the best Soviet farmers and agronomists have little or nothing to learn from the West, the mass of Russian farmers are hopelessly behind—and there are not enough good men to go round and raise their level by precept and example. This is the real situation behind the failure of Soviet agriculture to develop properly. And it is not a situation which can be remedied overnight.

No-one expects a 200 gallon herd to be transformed into an 800 gallon herd at the wave of a wand in Moscow. The first thing to do is to change the peasants' attitude towards livestock. This attitude is best revealed in the persistence, in spite of years of exhortation, of the peasants' failure to feed their animals properly. In the past two months the Soviet Press has once more been been full of complaints from the most varied regions, of failure to build winter quarters for cattle; of failure to produce enough silage, hay and straw; of failure to gather in before the snowfall even such straw and hay as exists. Once more tens of thousands of animals will die this winter because they cannot be properly fed and housed.

MARGINAL LIVING

It is an attitude that goes back a long way. A Russian peasant thinks in terms not of butter and milk, but of bread and potatoes. For centuries his livestock has been marginal. Each family had its cow, and that cow was fed in summer tethered on waste ground, and in winter taken into the shed adjoining the cottage and just kept alive on straw and scraps. In the spring it came out into the light of day again, an object of skin and bone. If it could not be kept alive, it was killed and eaten. It was probably barren. And if it was not, its milk yield was minute.

To this day, the mass of Russian peasants on the collective farms find it hard to sacrifice land which might be growing corn and vegetables for summer grazing or for winter fodder crop. A ton of grain in the barn is, in their eyes, worth infinitely more than the promise of better milk yields and more calves for years ahead. And this deep instinct has been aggravated by past government policy, which has demanded from the peasants more grain than they can sometimes grow.

NEED FOR SPECIALISTS GREAT

This is the fundamental reason for the failure of the government's livestock policy. This is why the need for sepcialists and scientific farmers has become so great that the transfer of agricultural scientists from city offices and laboratories to the farms themselves has become a number one priority. And the primitive atmosphere of such farms, and their remoteness from all ideas and material and cutural amenities, explains the reluctance of the specialists to leave the cities. It is a vicious circle.

The visitor to Russia who has seen the excellent show farms would find the squalor of the average farm hard to believe. He [illegible] find it easier if he [illegible] the most modern farms of England or France or the United States with the comparatively primitive economy of the innumerable smallholdings which exist in these countries. The difference is that the proportion of modern farms is far higher in the west than in the east; and that the level of the primitive farm in the west is far higher than the level of the primitive farm in Russia.

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Frank Stewart Rutherford, former Ontario deputy minister of education best known for his contribution to vocational training in the province's schools, died Sunday. He retired in 1951.

Dr. Rutherford joined the Ontario department of education to organize [illegible] in 1925 and director in 1931. He was appointed deputy minister in 1946.

The university of Western Ontario gave him an honorary degree in 1949 in recognition of his services to technical training.

He was instrumental in bringing about establishments of provincial technical institutes, including the Provincial Institute of Mining at Haileybury.

Situated atop the Wendelstein mountain in the Bavarian Alps, the church was erected in 1889. In the background, at left, are the Kaiser mountains, and at right are Hohe Tauern mountains. Commons To Debate New Housing Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons will launch debate on the government's new housing bill, one of the session's major pieces of legislation, when members reassemble Tuesday following their 26 - day holiday recess.

The government is anxious to put the measure into effect as soon as possible, and the debate will continue until it is given second reading — approval in principle. It is expected the debate will continue for more than one day. Then the bill will go to the [illegible] committee.

Officials say they hope to have the new plan in operation by March 1.

INTRODUCED LATE

The bill amending the National Housing Act was introduced by Works Minister Winters a few hours before Parliament recessed Dec. 16.

It changes the down payment under NHA loans to 10 per cent of the first $8,000 of the lending value of the house and 30 per cent of the remainder, from the present flat 20-per-cent down payment.

The life of mortgage loans will be extended to 25 years from the current 20, and chartered banks will be allowed to enter the mortgage lending field for the first time. Mortgages will be insured, at a premium of two per cent of the loan.

The measure does not specify the interest rate under the new mortgage plan. This will be set [illegible] cabinet [illegible] now is 5½ per cent.

JOINT COMMITTEE

The Commons Tuesday will also be asked to approve establishment of a joint Commons-Senate committee to consider how capital and corporal punishment and lotteries should be dealt with under the Criminal Code.

Those questions will be given separate study while Parliament undertakes the more complex task of the complete revision of the Criminal Code.

The Commons-Senate committee will have 17 members of the Commons. The Senate, which reassembles Jan. 19, will be asked to name members to the committee.

Wins $5,000 Prize Will Aid Fellowship

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. [illegible] Alloway of Oshawa told her husband she'd give anything she won in a Canada-wide contest towards the international work of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship.

She won first prize—$5,000. Saturday she presented a cheque for that amount to Dr. I. H. Erb of Toronto, the fellowship's Canadian president. The money will help establish a summer camp in British Columbia for young members of the fellowship.

Stand Taken On Controls Questioned

Opinion Is Divided Over Question Of Retaining Controls

[illegible] comments on the removal of rent controls by the province was not long in coming, with opinion divided over His Worship's intention to work towards municipally - controlled rents in Peterborough.

Opposition came in the form of a letter, signed only "A Taxpayer," which prompted the mayor to issue a statement regarding letter-writers who neglect to append their names.

"Whether the letters come from property-owners, tenants or anyone else, if they don't sign their names, the letters will go just as far as the waste-paper-basket," he warned.

ASKS FOR STUDY

The anonymous letter questioned His Worship's right to retain rent controls and asked him to give the matter "more consideration than a hasty decision."

"It was we, the taxpayers and home owners and property owners who got out and voted for you in the recent election because of your promises of economy and reduced taxation, etc.," the letter stated. "It is we, the property owners and taxpayers who own property in the city and who pay taxes, who support civic functions and are largely responsible for paying the salaries of the mayor and members of the city council. It is not the tenants, a large number of whom are here today and gone tomorrow, who are shouldering the responsibility of supporting the city and paying for local improvements, etc.—the cost of which you yourself have stated publicly to be extremely high.

"Premier Frost has said that the provincial government is giving up rent controls because they are not needed and, besides, 80 per cent of the province is already decontrolled. What right have you, as mayor of the city of Peterborough, which has one of the highest tax rates of any city in the province, to say that you will do all in your power to see that rent controls are not lifted? Do you not feel an obligation to the home owners and property owners as well as to the tenants? Do you not feel that something so important is worth more consideration than that?

"You say 'some landlords will knock the devil right out of the working man' and you foresee rents of $100 and $125 as quite possible. I happen to have some rented property in the city, all of which is rented to very good and reliable tenants who have good jobs (not what you would call a workingman) and not one of them found themselves able to pay over $70 for a bungalow. What makes you think I could get $100 or $125 from a workingman?

"Two of my tenants have television sets and they all drive cars and I own neither. My sole source of income is from my rented property and after I pay taxes and make repairs, I don't have enough left to maintain myself and my family—I can't afford those luxuries which the tenants have.

"I think most landlords feel as I do. They are not so much concerned about getting higher rents as they are about not having anything to say about their own property which they have worked hard to get and now find themselves hardly able to keep.

15 Below, May Get Colder What Weatherman Offers

By DAVE WHITE

Just when we were making the big talk about it being a mild winter and all that, along comes Jack Frost and throws a sneak punch. Peterborough people, like everybody else in Ontario, still haven't got over the chilling effects of the blow.

All of which is a big build up to say it's [illegible] cold outside, and [illegible] friends, it's [illegible]

Cut the chit-chat and tell us the news you say. Well here it is: The thermometer went down to 15 below zero Sunday night, says Jim Harrison, the city's official weather recorder. At 9 a.m. it was 11 below and by 12 noon a wan sun had only managed to boost the mercury to five below.

33 AT BANCROFT

Up Bancroft way, somebody left the refrigerator door open. An Examiner agent reports that it dipped to 33 below there Sunday night. Thats a record for the district this winter. And in our book 33 below is cold enough to send a Siberian huskie dog whimpering back to the fireside.

And what do the weather boys have to say about it all? Nothing to gladden anybody's heart. Just a gloomy "there is still no end in sight of the cold weather in Ontario . . . North winds will bring more arctic air southwards over the province tonight and Tuesday."

Thanks boys . . . For nothing.

The only people who seem to be getting a charge out of it all are the plumbers and the two-truck crews.

Sunday and early today there was a brisk demand for plumbers to come and thaw out frozen water pipes. One of them, after a happy comment on the upswing in business, had a sociological comment which we pass along:

"On a morning like this you can expect a number of calls from people who have frozen water pipes. But things aren't like they used to be (clearing of the throat) [illegible] Homes are better heated and the plumbing is looked after better. Result—fewer freeze-ups. Now back in the depression days homes weren't heated so well and the plumbing wasn't so good. We'd have far more calls than we do now."

Thank you, sir, for that discerning observation on plumbing habits in Peterborough over the last 20 years. And civic historians and gatherers of local folklore, please note.

At church time Sunday morning, and again early today, garages with tow trucks were swamped with calls for aid from stalled motorists. Most of the victims accepted the inconvenience good naturedly which proves something or other.

Companies that depend on wires for communication are having a rough time. The sudden cold contracts the wires and there have been a large number of breakages.

Snapping of the wires interrupted the teletype from the Canadian Press in Toronto to Belleville and Peterborough in eastern Ontario, and to London in western Ontario. The teletype to CHEX was off from shortly after 11 p.m. Sunday till 7.50 a.m. today. The Examiner's wire was also disrupted for three quarters of an hour, but was going again at 8 a.m.

SHORT CIRCUIT

Some southenders thought that a power failure for an hour and a half Sunday night was somehow the fault of the weather. Actually, it was caused by a truck slamming into [illegible] Wandes [illegible] S. The impact caused the wires to sway and touch each other, resulting in a short circuit that plunged the southend into darkness.

Because it was Sunday and an awkward time of day there was a delay before the utilities commission were able to get repair crews on the job.

Bell Telephone reported "spotty" trouble. Temporary dislocations were caused by wire breaks west of Lindsay and in the Marmora area; however these were soon fixed and normal telephone service resumed.

A roundup of overnight temperatures shows that while we may have been plenty cold, our neighbors in other district centres were even more so. So that boasting or complaining will be cut to a minimum we publish the following night lows, compiled with the help of Examiner agents:

New Building In City Add $752,000 To Assessment

Another $752,500 has been added to the total assessment of city property as the result of assessments made of new buildings completed since the rolls were closed at the end of November. The figure includes the value of only one block of land, occupied by the H. B. McGinness trailer manufacturing plant, which was recently annexed by the city from Otonabee township. Although the majority of the new assessments are on residential buildings, the Canada Dry bottling plant, Dougherty's new grocery store and the McGinness trailer plant are included in the total.

When re-assessment of the city was completed in November, the total assessment jumped from $42,397,902 last year to a new high of $59,562,390. With the court of revision now in session, this figure could be reduced by the granting of appeals. But the assessment of new buildings could offset this decrease.

The additions to the total assessment include $5,870 on land and $652,730 on buildings for a total value of $658,600 in taxable property, as well as an addition of $93,900 in business assessment.

Struck By Car, Carried 60 Feet

Serious injuries were suffered by a 38-year-old Peterborough woman at 11.50 p.m. Saturday when she was struck down by a car on Reid St.

She was Mrs. Margaret Hall, 400 Wellington St., whose injuries included a broken right arm and right leg, lacerations to the forehead and suspected chest injuries. She was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital by Nesbitt's ambulance. At 9 a.m. today doctors reported her condition to be fair.

Mrs. Hall was crossing from Marino's store to a waiting car on the other side of Reid St. when she was struck by a car driven by William E. Perry, 23, of R.R. 1 Peterborough. The injured woman was carried about 60 feet before the car was able to stop on the icy road.

The car, a 1940 model, suffered extensive frontal damage in the collision. Damage to grill and hood is estimated at $250.

Hunters Flush Three Wolves

The score on Saturday's wolf-hunt in the Kosh lake region runs somewhat as follows: three hunters — one soaked to the skin after falling through a weak spot in the ice—and two lost for three hours.

Three wolves were flushed out of the bush but they scampered to safety across the North river, and nobody got a shot at them.

The liaison was nothing to write home about, either. According to Norman Bradley, huntmaster, another contingent of hunters (from the Apsley district under the leadership of Bob Trotter) were supposed to have completed a sweep on the east side of the river and theoretically would be in a position to bag the three escaping wolves. But this pincer movement didn't materialize.

APSLEY MEN AT HOME

Seems that Bob didn't get Norman's letter until Friday and by then it was too late to round up a hunting party. Result: there wasn't any contingent of Apsley hunters and Huntsman Bradley was carrying out his maneouvre with only one pincer.

The action took place after 28 Peterborough huntsmen rendezvoused, with a couple of district "settlers" named Quackenbush who knew the country, three miles southwest of Kosh lake. They crossed Long lake and fanned out on the northern shore, then pivoted and swept the bush east to the North river.

The huntsmen, armed with shotguns only, saw three brush wolves but weren't close enough to get in a shot. They saw the three animals cross the river and thought their quarry might be bagged there by the non-existent Trotter party.

One of the hunters fell up to his waist in water when he went through ice that was weakened by an air hole. With a companion he hiked back to the rendezvous where he was given hot coffee, and his clothes were thawed out.

Two other hunters got lost for three hours and were eventually found about 7 p.m. by the younger Quackenbush.

INJURED IN CHASE

Inspector of Detectives Adolphus Payne of the Toronto police force suffered chest injury when his car smashed into a hydro pole during a chase after two youths fleeing in a car. Twenty-five patrol cars took part in the chase. Detective Payne is a brother of Stanley Payne of Western Clock Company.

OTONABEE SCHOOL OPENED: Special guests Sunday afternoon at the opening of St. Patrick's school in Otonabee included the Most Reverend Gerald Berry, bishop of Peterborough and Hon. Harold Scott, MLA for Peterborough. Seen at TOP LEFT, are (from left) Mr. Scott, Bishop Berry, Ray-Driscoll, chairman of the school board and the Rev. C. McCarney, parish priest. Ratepayers in the area packed the schoolroom for the ceremony, presided over by Mr. Driscoll. He is shown TOP RIGHT with his back to the camera while the audience listens to speakers. The modern one-room school is shown at bottom. (Examiner Staff Photos)

Bishop Berry Opens School Construction Record Set

Sunday afternoon, the Most Rev. Gerald Berry, Bishop of Peterborough, blessed and officially opened the new St. Patrick's school, situated a mile south of Lansdowne St., on the River Rd. The amazing thing about this rural school is the speed of its construction. On September 3 the first foundation work was begun. On November 15, Mrs. Keith Lucas held her first class in the completed building, which is one story of brick and concrete block. There is one large classroom with accommodation for 45 pupils, a smaller room for the teacher, two washrooms, and a furnace room.

HEATING, AIRCONDITIONING

The heating unit is of particular interest as it combines two features, heating and air conditioning. All the air that is heated and circulated throughout the building, is drawn from the outside, and consequently is fresh.

The floors are of vinyl tile (a linoleum type substance) and the ceiling of tentest. The interior of the building is colored in various shades of green.

The primary reason for the building of this school was to ease overcrowding. Students in that area of Otonabee township had previously been attending eight different schools. Some travelled as far as the Sacred Heart school in the city, while others attended the various country schools in the district. In every case the schools were jammed to the last desk.

K. O. Burkin, public school inspector in that area, pointed out in his opening ceremonies' address, that "within the next 4 years accommodation must be made for at least 250 children in Peterborough and its immediate district. This," he said, "takes into consideration those children who will have graduated from lower school by that time."

The Rev. C. McCarney with the aid of Bishop Berry and the ratepayers in that section of his parish, purchased the school grounds last August and began construction almost immediately. Authority was given by the separate school board, and volunteer workers under the direction of contractor Joseph Vaisey soon had the frame of the building finished.

Commenting about the solid construction of the building, as planned by architect, James Haffa, Bishop Berry quoted an old Scottish friend of his as saying: "That's the way I like to see a structure built — close to the ground and made of stone — built to last for eternity."

(The R's were effectively burred.)

NOT REALIZED IN CITY

Bishop Berry emphasized the value of rural people, their attitudes and ways, in the world of today. In the country, children learn the value of work. There is an emphasis on the struggle for survival which is not realized in the city. City children today, are brought up in a gadget world and it is difficult for them to emerge into the current of adult living. This element of struggle in country living produces an element of soundness in the character of rural people which makes them invaluable both to the state and the church. They are reliable and loyal and not easily influenced, because they can see life as a whole and learn to appreciate the basic principals of life and goodness.

"I sincerely hope that this school will turn out children who are not apologetic in any way for their profession, region, country or God."

The Hon. Harold Scott said "I realize the saying 'you can't keep a good man down,' but I wish that Bishop Berry might have received his higher office and could still remain in this district. He has left many footprints in the sands of Peterborough's history and this school is one of them."

The Rt. Rev. P. P. Butler, David McIntyre, reeve of Otonabee, and J. C. Doyle, separate school inspector, also expressed their congratulations at the opening of St. Patrick's school and their appreciation of the men who had made it possible.

The school board is composed of Ray Driscoll, Martin McNamara and James Heffernan. Mr. Driscoll was chairman of the program.

The school, fully equipped, will cost approximately $18,000.

Curling Rivals For 100 Years

The longest curling rivals in this country were the Scotsmen of Keene and Peterborough. It is told that the Otonabee men were curling before the game appeared here in the rude town.

A note in the Examiner of the first of March, 1861, mentions a game that was played on the Indian River "north of the bridge" in which Keene defeated Peterborough by a margin of 16 points. The Examiner commented: "We are glad to know an effort will be made to organize a club in town. A shed might be built on any of our streams at small expense and a clean rink would always be open."

Keene news two weeks later reported a fire at the farm of George Esson, destroying barn, stable and other outbuildings at a loss of $1500. Insurance was $600.

HASTY-PEES MEET

The Duffy Club's annual meeting and election of officers will be 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Legion hall. George Foster is the 1953 president. Officers of the Duffy Club (which is the Peterborough branch of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regimental Association) are asking for a good turnout of the Second World War vets, and the vets of the 27th brigade who have served with the regiment in the post-war occupation of Germany.

Condition Improving

Dr. Barcley McKone, superintendent of Moose Factory Hospital for Eskimos and Indians, who was brought to Timmins from the shores of James Bay last Wednesday by snowmobile, mercy train and ambulance, is reported today to be much improved. Authorities at St. Mary's Hospital, where he is being treated for an acute abdominal condition, said he is making rapid progress and may now be considered out of danger.

The condition of the 38-year-old physician and surgeon, a native of Peterborough, and son of Mr. J. A. McKone, was critical when railway and hospital officials co-operated to speed him to surgeons in Timmins.

Rifle Practise Given Juniors

A junior fish and game club has been organized by the Rifle Club of the Peterborough Fish and Game Protective Association.

Norman Bradley, president of the Rifle Club, said that the purpose of starting up the junior organization is to get the boys interested in the outdoor activities of sportsmen.

The program will include rifle practice, and instruction on fish and game laws and conservation by Don Blondeau. The boys, from 14 to 17 years, inclusive, will receive a thorough education, designed to make them knowledgeable sportsmen. Special rates have been offered the boys as an inducement to join.

The program is believed to be the only one of its kind among provincial fish and game associations

Last Friday they held their first meeting and about 12 boys turned up. They will meet regularly with the Rifle Club during the winter, 7 p.m. each Friday at the Armouries.

The schedule worked out has the boys doing rifle practice for an hour followed by an hour of instruction under Mr. Blondeau. The seniors then take over the rifle range.

RALPH BEARD: Indian headlines in an Indian headdress.

Indian Linotype Operator Seeks To Keep Traditions

EL RENO, Okla. — (NEA) — Ralph Beard is an Indian of all trades. The Cheyenne-Arapaho is a combination dancer-printer-writer-painter, and you never know what he's liable to do next.

Strangely, although he's one of America's leading Indian dancers, he speaks very little of his native tongue. Yet his interpretation of the ceremonial dances of his people are so expert that he's been elected a director of the American Indian Exposition at Anadarko.

But dancing is only an avocation with Beard. He makes his living setting type for the El Reno American. He went to Indian schools and learned the printing trade at the Chilocco Indian School. He's been a linotypist on several Oklahoma newspapers.

Nowadays he does more than set other writers' copy. He sets his own. Beard writes a weekly column for the American, "Smoke Signals." And he does his creating at the keyboard of the linotype machine, setting his thoughts directly into type.

In his school days, Beard was a letter-winning athlete, especially prominent in football. Later, he turned to painting and his scenes from his Indian childhood have received considerable note throughout the Southwest.

It is through his art—or arts—that Beard derives most happiness. He delights in interpreting his people in paint and dance. He spends many hours informing the American people of the many kinds of Indian dances—and also in reviving interest in Indian customs among the Indians themselves.

"Indian days are dwindling fast," Beard says. And he's one Indian who is doing his best to keep the traditions of the past alive.

Ex-School Principal Charles Yorke Dies

GLENCOE (CP) — Charles G. Yorke, 66, reeve of Glencoe and former principal of Glencoe high school, died here Saturday night.

He was a former member of the senate of the University of Western Ontario and a former president of the Western Ontario Secondary Schools Association.

He retired as principal of Glencoe high school in 1950 after 30 years service. He started his third term as reeve this year.

Mr. Yorke was born in Verona, 20 miles north of Kingston. He is survived by his widow, a son Kenneth of London and a sister, Mrs. E. L. Martin of Kingston.

Meat Cutter Has Best Chinchillas

LONDON (CP)—Va. W. Berdux of Waterloo, a meat cutter who breeds chinchillas in his spare time, won the top award of the annual chinchilla show here Saturday by the western Ontario branch of the Chinchilla Breeders of Canada.

A total of 131 entries from 31 exhibitors made the show the biggest of its kind in Canada. One breeder estimated the value of the animals on display of $70,000.

Mr. Berdux's champion chinchilla was described by the judges as "just about the acme of close knit plushiness."

James Wilson of London won the female and reserve champion awards and R. W. Warner of Hamilton took the junior championship.

FIRE DESTROYED BUILDING

FORDWICH (CP) — Fire destroyed a two-storey building Sunday that housed a billiard hall, a barber shop, Masonic temple and the living quarters of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Richards, owners. Damage was estimated at $17,000. Firemen from Wingham and Listowel were hampered by zero weather that froze their pumpers.

British Buyers Ordering Toys For Christmas '54

LONDON (Special)—Toys of all kinds, from miniature TV sets to walkie-talkies for the juvenile space explorer, will convert a dignified English health resort into a replica of Santa Claus's workshop during the week of January 9 to 15, when Harrogate holds its fifth toy fair.

Hundreds of buyers from all over the world will see and order toys for Christmas, 1954, from [illegible] will be exhibiting at the fair. In five of Harrogate's leading hotels, and a number of subsidiary halls, business worth more than $6 million will be transacted.

The trend for 1954 is towards toys with an educational purpose, a British Travel Association spokesman said. All children like to imitate their elders, and, with this in mind, toys are becoming increasingly realistic.

A manufacturer of home permanent waves has made special small packs for perming dolls' hair; miniature washing machines actually wash dolls' clothes, vacuum cleaners really do pick up the dirt, and electric irons heat up.

For boys there are building and carpentry sets, microscopes and improved cine-projectors. There are even up-to-the-minute model airplanes powered by tiny jet motors.

An official said that this modern age is reflected in the "scientific" motif for toys. Space-men's suits, complete with space-pistols, are replacing the traditional cowboy-and-Indian outfits. Guns and rifles make way for rockets launched from a mobile ramp.

Vanishing Tea Adopted By WMS

WARKWORTH — (ENS)—Mrs. A. L. Sisco was hostess at the parsonage Thursday afternoon for the WMS of St. Paul's United church.

Mrs. W. Grant Allen, president, presided at the meeting, opening with the WMS creed. Mrs. Glen Hancock followed this with the piano selection, "The Angel Choir".

Due to temporary illness of the Rev. A. L. Sisco, Mrs. Sisco installed the officers for 1954 as follows—President, Mrs. W. Grant Allen; 1st vice-president, Mrs. J. A. Greenly; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. Don Knight; treasurer, Mrs. Howard Evans; secretary, Mrs. A. E. Harwood.

After the installation of the officers, Mrs. H. E. Allan, devotional convener, was in charge of the Devotional period.

The scripture readings were given by Mrs. E. Johnston. Mrs. H. E. Allen gave a talk on New Year's greetings and Mrs. D. H. Evans offered prayer.

The collection was taken by Mrs. Howard Evans, the treasurer.

A vocal duet entitled, "Christmas Joy Is Everywhere" was rendered by Mrs. Allan Buchanan and Mrs. D. S. Thompson with Mrs. Glenn Hancock accompanying.

Mrs. Glenn Hancock was in charge of the study book to close the devotional period.

Mrs. W. G. Allen, president, led in the business meeting, discussing plans for attending the Presbyterial meeting at Brighton.

It was decided to adopt the "Vanishing Tea" plan where the society is divided into groups of six members and a hostess entertains six members at her home for tea. Each month, the group is lessened by one until the number "vanishes" to one. The luncheon fee for these teas is to be 25c.

Reports were given by the various standing committees and the treasurer, Mrs. Howard Evans, reported the allocation of $352 for the society had been sent in to WMS headquarters at Toronto.

A letter was read from Mrs. W. Barringer, an aged member who was sick, thanking the society for their kindly thoughts during the month.

ACCURATELY MEASURING the amount of water softener needed for her week's wash is the method employed by this trifty homemaker to reduce household expenses.

Reduce Household Expense Check Washday Habits

What's our pet "string-saving" economy?

Thriftier methods of everyday housework that save nickels and dimes get an attentive ear these days when budgets are not well-padded.

For example, a slight change in laundering and cleaning habits save nearly a dollar a week. It also makes a better housewife.

That slight change is to measure accurately, by the cup or the spoonful, exactly the amount of detergent, bleach, water conditioner, or cleaner recommended.

When you measured by "eye" you were dumping into the washing machine about a cup-and-a-half of detergent. Accurate measure according to the directions proved that ¾ to one cup was enough to clean clothes.

With a heavy, weekly laundry load, accuracy saves 50 to 60 cents in supplies each week.

Applying the same test to dishwashing can show you are using three times as much detergent as needed. Reducing the amount saves about 20 to 30 cents a week. The dishes are also easier to rinse and dry.

Another financially foolish habit is overloading the floor-washing water with cleaner. Cleaning powders don't cost much, but strong concentrations are hard on the floor, make sponge mop heads wear out faster and lifts the paint off the woodwork.

A pet thrift of a country friend saves her, she estimates, about three or four dollars a month. Telephone toll calls mount up fast when you have a big family who bring friends home for weekends and holidays.

She keeps a little jar marked 'Tolls' beside the telephone and about a dollar's worth of change in it. With this reminder at hand, guests are encouraged to make change and pay for their call at once.

Try this thrift tip if your children help clean up the bathtub or sink: A friend of mine discovered that a can of cleanser would last twice as long and do just as effective a job if she punched only two holes in the top instead of five or six.

Reason? The kids had been shaking out half a can every time they cleaned the tub.

How To Patch Broken Nails

Just when you want so badly to to be perfectly groomed, it will happen: A run will pop, a pimple will blossom or a nail will break. One would think these little disasters could sense a party coming.

Should a broken nail threaten your party poise, you can make it appear as good as whole. You can find kits for this purpose at drug stores and cosmetic counters.

All you need do is saturate a piece of the tissue that is provided with the solution and tuck it under the break with an orangewood stick. Tear the tissue from the booklet since a ragged torn edge is less apparent than a cleanly cut one.

After the patch has dried thoroughly, apply a base coat and then your polish. By applying your base coat freely, you help to make the patch waterproof.

The tissue and solution can also be used to reinforce a fragile nail that threatens to break. For this condition, tear off a wedge-shaped piece of tissue, and trim the wide end to correspond with the tip of the nail. Saturate with solution and lay it flat on the nail. Have rounded end extended about and eighth of an inch beyond nail edge. Smooth with moistened finger tip.

Now turn your finger over and apply solution to expose edges of tissue. Turn tissue inward over nail edge with orangewood stick that has been dipped in remover. Press firmly to inner surface of nail.

Blodgett-Hutchison

ROSENEATH (ENS) — A marriage of local interest was solemnized Saturday afternoon in Toronto when Mrs. Florence Hutchison of Fenella was united in marriage to John Henry Blodgett of Warkworth, formerly of Roseneath. The double ring ceremony was performed by the Rev. Alexander Hackson of the Baptist Church.

The bride chose for her wedding a royal blue chantilly lace and nylon dress with navy accessories and wore a corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. Milton Greene of Toronto, sister of the bride, was matron of honor wearing navy ticatina crepe with navy accessories and a corsage of deep pink roses.

Mr. Thomas W. Frost of Roseneath was groomsman.

On a honeymoon to be spent in United States they will visit the bride's brother, Mr. George Milne of Detroit. On their return they will live on the groom's farm near Warkworth.

TRAIN TRAVEL with children can duplicate a quiet hour at home if mother has the porter set up a table and bring coloring books, cutouts or jigsaw puzzles to amuse the small fry.

Travelling With Child Need Not Be Difficult

Canadians are always on the go. Throughout the year they travel across the country and back again, taking travel and great distances casually.

But for the mothers with small children who are among these travellers a trip is not a casual thing. [illegible]ng with a small child can become complicated unless the trip is streamlined by [illegible] started.

Practical hints for just such streamlining come from Mary Buchanan, travel consultant. She suggests, for instance, that if the baby's formula is complicated, you have enough bottles prepared to cover the travel time. Allow for at least one extra feeding.

And here's a tip: Fit the bottles into one of those light cardboard carriers you get with six bottles of soft drinks. These are sufficiently sturdy for the purpose, but easily tossed away.

Fix the formula just before leaving home and then, when you board the train, give the bottles to the porter or dining-car steward, who will be glad to keep them under refrigeration until you need them.

Nearly all train dining cars today stock a supply of top-quality brands of strained baby foods, so it isn't necessary to load yourself down unless your baby needs a special diet.

For children in the three-to-10 age group, pack their trip needs separate from your own. It's a good idea to let each child carry his or her own small travel case. Those lightweight and inexpensive little fabric zipper bags are ideal for carrying pet playthings, extra socks and underclothing, pajamas and slippers. And you'll save clutter in your own luggage.

In your own train case, tuck some small surprises to be handed over en route. Lollypops, a cutout or color book or puzzle will all serve to make the trip pleasant. You might even tuck in a pair of blunt-edged scissors and a bright book for cutouts. Or, the dining-car steward will give your child a box of crayons and a coloring book.

It's wise to check with the steward about mealtime schedules. Then, if possible, take your children to the diner on first call to avoid even a short wait during busy periods. You can also order a mid-afternoon snack of cookies and milk from the dining car.

Always take your child's pet sleep object, even if the small pillow or bear looks dirty. It will help him to feel at home in strange surroundings.

It's always a good idea to get an early start for your trip so that your youngsters can go through the train while it's still in the station. It's much easier to tour the cars then and let them fully satisfy their curiosity.

BABY BOTTLES SODA SWEET

Milk rings in baby bottles come off quickly if you soak the bottles in a baking soda solution. As soon as baby finishes his bottle, fill it with a teaspoon baking soda and warm water. Soda keeps milk from sticking to the sides while the bottle has to stand until it is sterilized.

Cold Sufferers Take Note

The winter winds blow — and so do many of us, now that the cold season has taken grip. There is nothing more unpleasant than a clogged up head and rasping throat. With all of the advances of medical science, no cure has yet been found for the common cold.

Doctors do know, however, that if we take extra care of ourselves during the winter months we are less likely to contact this miserable malady. And, that if proper care is taken once a "code id da doze" or "frog in your throat" does set in, it won't set you back with a more serious illness. Here are some pointers on how to make recovery from this prevalent ailment more speedy and pleasant.

When you feel a cold coming on try to get lots of rest, in bed if possible. If bed rest is impossible, curtail your activities — a few days curled up with a good book may prevent a few weeks flat on your back with something more serious.

Drink lots of liquids, especially fruit juices and warm clear soups. Eat lightly and of nourishing foods.

Every three hours on the first day, and two or three times a day thereafter while the cold persists try the folowing: to the juice of one fresh lemon add ½ glass of water and ½ teaspoon baking soda. Drink while still foaming. Baking soda, which is pure mild bicarbonate of soda, helps your system maintain a natural alkalinity — thus reduce the acidity brought about by a cold.

If it's a head cold, hot compresses on your forehead for a few minutes very few hours, followed by nose drops, will relieve congestion. If you have a sore thoat, or cough, gargle with a solution of ½ teaspoon baking soda in one half glass warm water. A soda gargle helps to rout the frog from your throat, as well as soothe your rasping voicee.

Try to isolate yourself as much as possible. You won't get rid of your cold by giving it away.

If the cold persists, or if you run a high fever, by all means, call your doctor.

Slim, Silken, Feminine New '54 Look

By DOROTHY ROE

NEW YORK (AP) — The new look in spring fashions is slim, silken and feminine.

This was evident today as New York designers opened a crowded week of spring fashion showings for some 150 visiting fashion editors, revealing what U.S. women will wear in the Easter parade.

Year-round, weather-wise fashions are the big news of the new collections, designed for wear in almost any season. The new light-[illegible] will [illegible] summer, some going on into winter beneath fur coats.

Having discovered in past seasons that the weather is likely to jump straight from winter to summer, designers are showing low-necked, short-sleeved suits, coats and dresses of featherweight fabrics. The dress-and-jacket ensemble in fur-trimmed silk print is one of the important styles of the season, as is the silk tweed suit and the dark silk fitted coat.

The narrow silhouette is almost universal in daytime clothes, shown in Empire sheaths and high-waisted suits. The line through the midriff is skin-tight and will permit no concealing drapery to hide excess poundage. So we may expect a wave of dieting just before Easter.

WIDE CUMBBERBUND

Designers achieve the high-waisted look in many ways, some suits have skirts which read to just below the bust, to meet a fitted jacket which ends at this point. Some coats are belted just below the bust, or have half-belts just below the shoulder-blades in back. There are dresses which are seamed or tucked from bust to natural waistline to achieve the moulded midriff look, and suits which employ a wide crushed cummerbund for the same effect.

Smooth, ladylike styles are the order of the season, in luxurious fabrics and sophisticated cut.

New suits do tricks, displaying such innovations as peekaboo jewels half hidden by a slot or pocket flap, handkerchief pockets in the elbow, button-in vests or collars of linen or pique, stick-pin flowers stuck in a pocket.

Instead of summer furs, one designer shows filmy crispy organza stoles for wear with suits, coats and dresses. Sheer lace - trimmed linen collars and handkerchiefs with tweed suits are another whimsy of the same house.

SHORTER SKIRTS

There's a softly feminine touch even to the most tailored costumes, which have smoothly rounded lines above the belt, petal lapels, open necklines, dressmaker detail in rounded pockets, jewel trimmings and accessories.

Expert workmanship reaches a new high in this season's ready-made fashions, which have the feminine shape built-in, through skilful cut and carefully moulded inner construction. This year a dress retain its shape even when hanging in the closet.

Skirts are on the average one inch shorter than those of last season, though the difference is imperceptible in many collections. The short-lived threat of knee-length skirts is past, and the usual length is mid-calf, the most becoming line for most women.

IT TAKES TIME and practice to be able to apply make-up in a way that will truly highlight your best features and minimize defects But the improvement you can make will be more than worth the effort. Using two or three shades of powder base, for example, can do wonders for the contours of the face. Our square-faced girl applied a dark base (lower centre) along the jaw line. She'll lengthen her chin by touching it with a light base. Now (right) she stops to adjust earrings before leaving for the day. She wears her hair fluffed slightly over temples to balance width of jaws. Coat collar also helps to add illusion of length. The long-faced girl (upper centre) applies lipstick here, adding a bit of fullness to lips that will help shorten chin. She has applied dark shadow to chin, light to sides of face. Her sweater's round collar (left) helps to shorten chin. Fluffed hair adds width.

DOROTHY DIX

Friction With Her Sisters Widow's Chief Complaint

DEAR MISS DIX: Since I lost my husband ten years ago, I have lived with my two sisters, one married and one single. I am 50 years old, have a good job, dress well, and am told I don't look more than 38. I have a married son; he and his wife would like me to live with them, but I feel each married couple should be alone. There is frequent friction between my sisters and myself and it is making me very nervous. As a consequence, I have considered moving to California (I now live in the East). I could be transferred to the Pacific Coast branch of my company, and also could make my home with a cousin. Do you think the change would be desirable?

Mrs. X.

✧ ✧ ✧

CHANGE WOULD BE WISE

ANSWER: Almost everyone benefits at some time from a change of scenery; in your case I think the suggested move would be especially wise.

For one thing, there's no burning of bridges involved; if you don't like the new surroundings, you can always return to your home town. There's no guarantee that friction will be nonexistent between you and your cousin. If you don't find her congenial you can always try living alone for a while.

You certainly will find new friends and new activities, which will overcome the shyness that has suddenly come upon you. Whatever you do, don't let shyness and nervousness become a chronic condition. Bear in mind that you are setting out to acquire new experiences, to find a different outlook on life, and to establish yourself, once more, as a person, rather than an emotional dependent on your sisters. Continued domestic friction is enough to make a nervous wreck of anyone, so consider yourself lucky that the opportunity for complete change is available to you, and make the most of it. Good luck!

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 18, a high-school graduate with a good job. For some time I have wanted to join the Waves. At first my family approved, but now they are reluctant to let me go. How can I make them see things my way

G. L.

ANSWER: Take Mom and Dad along for a talk with the enlistment officer at the local Navy recruiting office. Nothing clears the atmosphere as well as a thorough knowledge of a problem. If your family learns the details of Navy life from official quarters, either they'll be satisfied to let you go ahead, or else they'll have the right answers to deter you. There are many advantages for you in the service, if you are the right person to accept them.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I have been going out with a young man for the past four months. I love him, and he loves me. However, he is a widower with a three-year-old boy. Should I keep on going with him. He's 26 and I'm 23.

B. W.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: If you continue going with the young man—object matrimony—you must be prepared to be the right kind of mother to his son. If you have the necessary patience, love and generosity to care for the youngster, the chief obstacle will be overcome.

Of Interest to Women

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Start Out The Day With Bowl Of Oatmeal

In our city lives and works an ear, nose and throat surgeon who is beloved by all who know him.

While I know there are dozens of doctors working themselves into early graves for their patients I don't know one who works any harder than this man.

I met him in the hospital corridor and we stopped for a chat for a minute and I asked him how he kept up the pace he set for himself. He said "For one thing I don't set the pace — my patients do. But as far as [illegible] cerned I eat lots of [illegible] out in the morning with a bowl of oatmeal tucked under my belt."

From a surgeon such advice should be heeded.

Furthermore I had to hunt through seven cookbooks to find the table of proportions for making cooked cereals of all kinds thick and thin.

When Pete's home I make porridge for him about every morning without ever consulting a cookbook. (He eats it oozing with dark brown sugar and flooded with cream.) But I have serious doubts about whether I have done my duty or not to my readers when it comes to cooked cereal recipes.

I'm forever carrying on about eating your fruits and salads and an optimum amount of meat and milk, but fear I am taking too much for granted regarding this basic food—cereal grains.

Before going any further I want to stress the importance of eating the whole grain. When we think of the rugged geniuses that Scotland has produced, you know there may just be some connection between them and the rolled oat. The ideal routine for serving cereals is to serve them every other day for breakfast (serving an egg for breakfast — or both — on the inbetween days), and varying the kind of cereals you serve every time. Thus your family is receiving the benefits of the various minerals each of the grains contains.

This little fact should not be ignored simply because you cannot see the minerals in an oat or wheat grain. They are there.

When you hear lamentations from your friends or acquaintances about how often they or their loved ones are sick — wonder, and wonder seriously, if they are eating mineral-bearing foods, OR if they stick strictly to white bread, cream of wheat, or other white flour and refined, packaged, pre-cooked, pre-digested, pre-everything foods.

On the market are whole wheat cereals with added wheat germ, mixed whole grain cereals with added wheat germ; rolled oats and of course, oatmeal, cornmeal — that wonderful yellow grain high in Vitamin A. When you buy cereals study the package for all its contents.

When I make porridge I add fresh wheat germ (11c per lb.) to every batch, regardless of what the package contains — for good measure.

GENERAL RULES FOR COOKING CEREALS

(1) Always use a double boiler.

(2) To each cup uncooked cereal add 1 teaspoon salt.

(3) Have salted water boiling in top of double boiler, but over direct heat, and slowly stir in the cereal until it begins to thicken. Then place over boiling water in bottom of double boiler, cover and cook, stirring occasionally.

CORNMEAL: Proportions are one of cornmeal to 6 of water. So if you are serving from 4 to 6 people you would use 2/3 cup cornmeal to each 4 cups boiling water. Add, if you want to follow my practice, ¼ cup fresh wheat germ, or more, for maximum nutrition and flavor. Cooking time varies according to your taste, and the age of the eater. If he is an infant give maximum cooking time. I cook ours 10 minutes.

CREAM of WEAT: Same as cornmeal, but be sure to add wheat germ to this too-refined product.

ROLLED OATS: Proportions are one of rolled oats to 2½ cups of boiling water. Cokoing time varies anywhere from 5 minutes for Scottish folk, ½ hour, for my family, to 1 hour or more for lots of people and infants.

WHOLE WHEAT OR MIXED CRACKED GRAINS: This varies according to taste but 1 part of cracked whole wheat or other grain to 4 cups boiling water pleases the average porridge lover. Cooking times: same variations as rolled oats.

for health and flavor's sake use dark brown sugar as your sweetener.

OTTAWA (CP)—Trade in outstanding securities between Canada and other countries in October led to a favorable balance—or capital inflow—of $4,500,000, the bureau of statistics reported today. The inflow was $800,000 in the preceding month and there were outflows in the five months before that.

Marlies Have Perfect Weekend Score Two League Victories

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Hamilton Cubs, who tried to improve the efficiency of their team by having a "Mr. V" hypnotize their players Saturday night, went to sleep in more ways than one.

The channels got crossed up and instead of the expected beautiful dream the Cubs received a nightmare.

It seems the Cubs dozed off while Toronto Marlboros carried away a 6-2 Ontario Hockey Association Junior A victory before 2,300 fans, largest crowd of the season in Hamilton.

Marlboros completed a perfect week-end by coming from behind a two-goal deficit in Toronto Sunday to defeat Trois-Rivieres Reds of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association Junior A series 3-2.

The twin victory hoisted Marlboros to within one point of St. Catharines TeePees and Toronto St. Michael's Majors who are tied for first place. The Dukes have a game in hand over St. Catharines and two over St. Michael's.

The Majors climbed into the deadlock with the TeePees by blasting St. Catharines 5-1 in Toronto Sunday.

St. Michael's, weakened by the loss of two of their top players, dropped a 3-2 decision to the Black Hawks in Galt Saturday. The Collegians were without Ken Gribbons who was left in a Montreal hospital for an operation after suffering a fractured cheek bone during an interlocking game there, and centre Jack Caffery who was out with a gashed hand after it was stepped on by a skate.

Kitchener - Waterloo Greenshirts retained their hold on fourth place by taking a 7-4 home-ice decision from Trois-Rivieres and Barrie Flyers travelled to Jonquiere, Que., where they edged out the Marquis 8-7 in the other Saturday games.

Rightwinger Gerry James scored two third-period goals to spark the Dukes to their Sunday victory. Trois-Rivieres had taken a 2-0 lead on goals by Guy Gendron and Leon Michelin. Dave Jackson counted the other Toronto goal. A record Toronto junior hockey crowd for this season—8-012, sat in on the twin bill.

In the second game, St. Michaels' rookie Bill Colvin opened and closed the game's scoring. Ken Linseman, Dick Duff and Paul Knox counted the other Irish goals.

In Hamilton, James, Tom McCarthy, Jack Bionda, Wally Maxwell, Bill Harris and Dave Jackson shared the Marlboro scoring. Marlin McAlendin and Ed Louttit notched the Hamilton goals.

St. Michael's and Galt traded goals for two periods before Red Crawford clicked with the Hawks' winning marker in the last period. Neil McDonald and Ed Switzer scored the other Galt goals. Jim Logan and Colvin shared the St. Michael's output.

Trailing 3-2 going into the third period at Kitchener, the Greenshirts spurted a four-goal outburst for their victory over Trois-Rivieres. Graham Joyce led the Greenshirt attack with two goals.

Bud Horne, Fred Glover, Bud Jones, Greig Hicks and Doug Vaughan added singles. Harvey Lalonde, Jean Lambert, Jean Cossette and Andre Therrien scored for the Reds.

A four-goal outburst late in the game salvaged the 8-7 victory for Barrie over Jonquiere. Twenty-six penalties, including eight five-minute majors, five 10-minute misconducts and a match-misconduct were assessed during the fray.

Four goals by Barrie's John Martan highlighted the show. Other Flyer goals were scored by Cleland Mortson, with two, and Arnie Smith and George Raneiri. Claude St. Jean notched three for Jonquiere. Roger Landry added two and Gerry Normand and Claude Chabot rounded out the total.

Galt is at Kitchener, Trois-Rivieres at St. Catharines, Barrie at Quebec Frontenacs and Hamilton at Montreal Royals in games Tuesday night.

NORTH BAY (CP) — Ontario sports reporters Sunday undertook to raise $44,000 in the next three years to build a main lodge at one Ontario camp for crippled children and a cabin at another.

The executive of the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters Association, at a meeting in conjunction with its annual bonspiel agreed to pay for construction of a $36,000 lodge at Lakewood on Lake Erie near Port Colborne and an $8,000 cabin at Northwood near Kirkland Lake.

Funds for both projects will come from the association's annual $25-a-plate Sports Celebrity Dinners. The 1954 dinner, from which net proceeds are expected to run to nearly $20,000, is scheduled for Feb. 18.

At the bonspiel, association members were guests of the Granite Curling Club, radio station CFCH and the North Bay Nugget.

BLASTS CAMPBELL

TORONTO (CP) — Charlie Conacher, former Toronto Maple Leaf star and Chicago Black Hawk coach, Saturday criticized National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell for not taking "a firmer hand in protecting his referees from the attacks of league governors."

Conacher blamed Campbell for having brought on himself all the trouble which was climaxed by a smarting criticism from Montreal Canadiens' Maurice Richard in a Quebec French-language newspaper.

Richard charged Campbell for his recent actions in handing out fines and game suspensions, was a dictator and was partial against Montreal Canadiens.

Conacher said he thought Richard should be "dealt with properly" for that but added "if Campbell had taken a firmer hand in protecting his referees from the attacks of league governors he would have avoided this whole trouble."

Garnett was commenting on a statement by Wall's manager, Jim Jones, in Toronto alst Thursday. Jones, in Toronto last Thursday, the British Boxing Board of Control to arrange a bout with the Edmonton fighter.

"They told us they can't force Cockell to defend his title but I'd like to know why not," Jones said. "If a champion refuses to put up his title then he loses it."

Walls, a 25-year-old native of Puce, Ont., is Canadian heavyweight champion and now fights out of Toronto.

Basketball Star Suspended For Gambling

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP)—Jack Molinas, 21, who had a good chance of being named the U.S. National Basketball Association's "rookie of the year," instead appeared a near certainty today to be the first player expelled from the league for betting on NBA games.

The Fort Wayne Piston forward, former Columbia University star, was in the position of trading his career and a salary of $9,600 a season for about $400 in gambling profits.

The NBA suspended Molinas indefinitely and president Maurice Podoloff left little doubt that the six-foot-six Molinas is finished in pro basketball. Molinas is entitled to a hearing before being expelled automatically at the end of the season. But Podoloff said he doubted that Molinas will ask for one.

The tall youth told The Associated Press he had bet only on his team to win.

ALMOST IN TEARS

"I've never done anything dishonest in my life," Molinas exclaimed, almost in tears.

Podoloff said in New York that Molinas offered to play without pay if the league would give him a chance to redeem himself. The NBA president turned him down.

Deputy chief inspector Edward W. Byrnes of New York said that a Bronx candy store operator had been questioned in connection with the incident.

Byrnes identified the man as Isidore Ratenski, about 54, who had been released but told to report for further questioning today.

New York newspapers Sunday night reported that bookmakers had stopped taking bets on Fort Wayne games after the Pistons' game with Boston Dec. 15. Odds favoring Boston jumped sharply just before the game, it was reported. Boston won 82-75, with Molinas scoring 20 points, 18 of them in the first half.

Podoloff also said Molinas reported he gained about $400 including refunds of telephone calls.

European Towns Snowed In By Hundreds

LONDON (AP) — A blizzard roaring in after three days of steady snow blocked traffic and isolated hundreds of villages in Western Europe today.

Workmen fought to clear storm-bound highways.

Meanwhile fishing boats put out into the storm-tossed Mediterranean to hunt bodies and wreckage from a BOAC Comet airliner that crashed with 35 aboard Sunday near the island of Elba.

Rescue vessels plowed through heavy seas searching for possible survivors of two Swedish ships which vanished in a Baltic storm Sunday.

Twenty men were missing, 17 from the 1,175-ton freighter Nedjan and three from a small fishing boat.

SHIP ON FIRE

The 5,418-ton Norwegian motorship Tudor limped into Hamburg harbor today after catching fire during the night in the storm-whipped Elbe estuary.

German firemen ran out hoses to fight the blaze.

Southern Germany was tied up by a heavy snow storm which blocked roads, cut off hundreds of Bavarian villages and caused one fatality.

The Munich street department called it the heaviest fall since 1929 as drifts stacked up three to four feet.

The Bavarian Alps were a skiing paradise. Germany's highest peak, the Zugspitze, reported about 10 feet of snow and temperatures ranging around zero.

30 HOLIDAYS CHOKED

More than 30 state highways were blocked and the autobahn between Munich and Stuttgart was choked with stranded cars and trucks.

One man was killed in the Bavarian Alps by an avalanche.

In the Alpine areas of Austria, highways were blocked by masses of snow while other roads were closed for safety reasons.

Thirty automobiles were trapped between two huge avalanches and were unable to move on the highway leading through the Salzbach valley in Salzburg province.

In the Vienna woods, the Austrian capital's well-known winter-sport area, 170 skiers met with accidents, the Vienna ambulance service said.

THIRTEEN VILLAGES CUT OFF

Thirteen Belgian villages in the eastern Ardennes were cut off by huge walls of snow.

Frigid weather swept northern Italy with temperatures below freezing. Bitter cold in the Caserta area of southern Italy was driving wolves down from the hills into the plains.

Most of Britain enjoyed a revival of "Indian summer" weather. A soft sunny hand was laid over much of the country. Many Londoners tossed aside their overcoats as the temperature climbed to the 50s.

Denmark was similarly blessed but heavy rain was predicted.

France and the Netherlands were overcast as temperatures rose and both countries expected rain.

Grant Howard Sentenced To 13 Months

Grant Howard, 26-year-old Peterboruogh man who was convicted last week on two charges of assaulting females, and Monday on a further charge of assaulting his mother, was sentenced in court today to a total of 13 months definite and four months indefinite imprisonment, by Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC.

Because Howard has a substantial list of previous offences it is considered most unlikely that he will be given any parole and will almost certainly spend 17 months in prison.

The charge heard today concerned the assaulting of Howard's mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Howard. As a result of the assult Mrs. Howard suffered a broken arm and was unable to testify in court. Howard pleaded guilty and agreed with the text of information laid by Crown Attorney John A. Bradshaw, QC.

On the charge of assaulting a woman at the Empress hotel a sentence of five months definite and one indefinite was imposed. For his assault on a 16-year-old girl Howard was given one month definite and one month indefinite.

The charge of assaulting his mother was considered most serious by the magistrate who imposed a seven month definite and two months indefinite sentence.

Howard was also accused of being mentally ill, but after two doctors had delivered negative reports, the charge was dismissed.

A further charge of resisting a peace officer in the course of his duty is slated to be heard Tuesday. This charge was originally laid in 1950.

Stand Taken

"It is generally known that rent controls are not needed in Peterborough. Anyone can rent a house or apartment today in the city and at considerably less than $100 too. Just look at the 'For Rent' signs on the city streets. Just consult the real estate men."

In answer to the letter, Mayor Graham referred to a telephone call he received today from the widowed mother of three children, who lived in "what I would consider a tumble-down shack."

The woman's only income was a pension of $109 a month and, until last Thursday, she was paying $35 a month rent for the "shack." That day the landlord appeared at the door with a renewal of lease, raising the rent to $50 a month. With no alternative accommodation, the woman had signed, so that now practically half her meager income is swallowed up in rent.

"In the first place, I don't think the landlord had the legal right to raise the rent, with controls still in effect," His Worship commented. "But, in my opinion, this is a typical example of what will happen when rent controls are lifted."

After receiving the call, the mayor called in the assessment commissioner, who revealed that the assessment of the property in question had been increased only $50 last year.

"So there's no excuse for raising the rent on that score," His Worship remarked.

Mrs. John W. Todd

Funeral services for Mrs. John W. Todd, formerly Katherine S. Attwood, 85, of Lakefield, were held from St. John the Baptist Anglican church on Saturday. Burial was in Hillside cemetery. The Rev. L. J. Delaney, assisted by the Rev. J. Cranston, officiated.

Pallbearers were: J. Huddert, F. Crawford, E. Grier, W. Smith, E. Northey and B. Dench.

ESPANOLA (CP) — Richard Robb, 42, of nearby Turbine died in hospital here Sunday night from injuries suffered when the car he was driving was struck by a train at the Turbine-High Falls railway crossing Saturday. Espanola is 40 miles west of Sudbury.

French, Rebels Play Deadly Hide And Seek

SENO, Indo-China (AP)—French parachutists and North African troops kept up a "deadly game of hide and seek" today with Communist-led Vietminh guerrillas in the jungle northeast of this French-held Laouan fortress.

[illegible] than 1000 casualties among their rebel enemy and asserted they had wiped out any serious Vietminh menace in central Laos.

They are fighting one of the most important battles of the seven-year war against Ho Chi Minh's rebels. It is a battle without regular front, on no fixed position, in a quadrangle 25 miles square.

The French commander, Gen. Gen. Andre Franchi, declared the Vietminh no longer are capable of mounting an attack on Seno unless they receive substantial reinforcements from other fronts.

AIRCRAFT ENGAGED

The parachutists and North Africans pressed their attack today on rebel units trying to reach the shelter of a plateau to the north which might prove inaccessible to the French. Franchi's artillery and the air force pounded their columns day and night.

The Vietminh battalions and the pursuing French wheel and turn through the dense jungle without pause, each laying ambushes for the other. Engagements are of extraordinary violence.

"It's a deadly game of hide and seek," said one parachutist, "after hours of marching through the jungle at a kilometre an hour, we suddenly come upon the Vietminh —or they surprise us. Then everything explodes on all sides."

CLAIMS 500 KILLED

The big Vietminh loss was claimed after the French said they smashed an assault Sunday on Seno and launched their powerful counter-attack. Gen. Franchi claimed at least half of the 1,000 Vietminh losses were killed. He gave no figures on French casualties but said they were considerably below those of the enemy.

Seno is about 50 miles south of Thakhek and a few miles east of Savannakhet, in Laos. The Vietminh invaded the area Dec. 22, virtually cutting Indo-China in two. Laos and the neighboring states of Viet Nam and Cambodia make up Indo-China, a part of the French Union.

Brodrick, St. Catharines; Charles Hooper, Gormley; Don Thompson, Picton; Gordon Smith, Lombardy; H. Shantz, New Dundee; Alden McLean, Muirkirk; Garnet Rickard, Bowmanville; George Atkins, Bronte; H. L. Craise, St. Catharines; C. W. McInnis, Iroquois; Louis Davis, Dobbington, and K. M. Betzner, Waterloo.

Police Hold Woman In Hull Shooting

HULL, Que. (CP)—Quebec provincial police today were holding a woman in connection with the shooting Sunday morning of a 34-year-old man in his home about six miles north of here.

The woman was identified as Mrs. Therese Chalut, 36, of Limbourne, Que.

In hospital was Leo Regimbald, 34, also of Limbourg, shot through the mouth with a rifle. His condition was serious. Police said Regimbald gave them a statement from his hospital bed.

Police said the shooting occurred after a quarrel at a family party. After the shooting, Mrs. Chalut called neighbors who brought Regimbald to hospital.

Charge Truce Violations

TOKYO (AP)—Peiping radio said today the Reds accused "the American side" at Sunday's meeting of the military armistice commission in Korea of making 302 illegal air sorties over Communist North Korea between the signing of the armistice last July 27 and the end of 1953. The broadcast quoted a dispatch from Kaesong dated Jan. 10.

Knights Of Columbus Pay Tribute To Bishop Berry

At breakfast in their club rooms Sunday morning, Peterborough Council of the Knights of Columbus paid tribute to Bishop Berry, who is leaving the city about the last week of this month to assume his appointment as Archbishop of Halifax.

Prior to the breakfast the members paraded to St. Peter's Cathedral and received holy communion in a body at the 9 o'clock mass which was celebrated by His Excellency.

Speaking in behalf of the council, Peter A. Moore, advocate, outlined [illegible] Catholic church in Peterborough during the last 128 years from the first log chapel at the corner of George and Charlotte Sts.

Mr. Moore said this growth had come about by the devotion of many generations of Catholic families under the guidance of a line of Bishops beginning with Bishop Jamot in 1882. He mentioned that in the Sermon on the Mount, Christ called His apostles the salt of the earth, the light of the world because it was through them and their successors that goodness was to be spread through the world.

That Bishop Berry had faithfully carried out the apostolic authority was evidenced, Mr. Moore said, by the scope of his activities. Two new churches were consecrated in Peterborough and its immediate vicinity, St. John the Baptist and the Assumption, fifteen priests were ordained, five schools built, the monastery of the Precious Blood erected, and also a new wing at St. Joseph's hospital.

Grand Knight J. L. Paquette presented Bishop Berry with a token of remembrance of Peterborough Knights and assured him that he would always remain in the minds and prayers of the members. The gift was marine binoculars.

BE WORTHY CITIZ[illegible]

Bishop Berry expressed regret at leaving Peterborough, and charged the members to welcome and support the new bishop, to shoulder their responsibility as citizens and to provide leaders in that field. He closed his remarks by requesting the prayers of the members.

W. Kinlin, deputy grand knight, was the chairman of the breakfast, which was served by the wives of the members. Also at the head table were Rev. J. F. McGuire, chaplain of the K. of C. council; E. J. Wolff, state warden; J. L. Paquette, grand knight, and Hon. J. J. Duffus, past state deputy. At the close of the breakfast, Bishop Berry invoked the blessing of God on the assembled knights.

Icy Roads Kill 8 People During Weekend

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Violent or accidental death came during the weekend to 12 persons in Eastern Canada. Four were killed in a car crash near Truro, N.S., and a mother and her young child were slain near Roberval in Northern Quebec.

A Canadian Press compilation today listed five fatalities in On[illegible] and two in Quebec.

Killed near Truro were Airman Walter Glen Lewis, 20, Portapique, N.S., the driver; Ordinary Seaman Joseph Leonard Gallant, 20, and Able Seaman Hubert John Gallant, 23, both of Summerside, P.E.I.; and Patricia Lupton, 18, Bass River, N.S. Their car went through a guard rail into the Isgonish River.

Also in Nova Scotia, Better Muir, a secretary at Roseway Hospital at Shelburne, was killed when a car skidded off a road.

PORT HOPE MAN KILLED

When cars went out of control on icy Ontario roads, Reginald Lock, 30, of Port Hope, was killed at Cobourg, and Randy Laws, 6, near Guelph.

Marjorie Woods, 9, was asphyxiated and her mother, Mrs. Jane Woods, 39, was overcome by fumes from a gas heater in their apartment at Port Dover.

A silk scarf caught fire while Mrs. D. H. Sinclair, 86, of Owen Sound, was putting wood in a kitchen stove. Mrs. Sinclair was fatally burned.

Gylien Boivin, 30-year-old laborer, was held as a material witness in the slaying of his wife, 35, and their two-year-old daughter, Diane, at Notre Dame de Lorette, a remote village 20 miles north of Roberval, Quebec. Police said they believe the wife was strangled early Saturday and the child battered to death with a block of wood.

U.S. President Suggests Farm Surpluses Frozen

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower recommended today that $2,500,000,000 of present United States farm surpluses be "frozen" from regular markets and that the government move into a flexible farm price support program.

In a special message to Congress, the president said:

"Immediate action is needed to arrest the growing threat to our present agricultural program and to prevent the subsequente conomic distress that could follow in our farming areas."

Elsewhere [illegible] ers a separate message asking revision of the Taft-Hartley labor law. A major point of his request on this was for a provision requiring a vote of workers before a strike could be called. He also called for a "thorough study" of union welfare and pension funds "with a view of enacting such legislation as will protect and conserve these funds for the millions of working men and women who are the beneficiaries."

MUST BE BACKBONE

As he did in his state of the union message last week, the president said a flexible price support plan must be the backbone of new farm programs.

Eisenhower also said special emphasis in the future must be placed on efforts to develop foreign markets for agriculture's greatly expanded productive capacity.

Under his proposal to "freeze" certain surpluses, the excess supply of these commodities such as wheat and corn would be isolated from the market so as not to have a depressing effect on prices.

Such "frozen" stocks could not be sold to commercial users, farmers, exporters or to foreign buyers who ordinarily purchase in regular commercial channels. They could be used only for donation to the school lunch program, public institutions, relief, or earmarked for emergency stock piles.

These surpluses are already in government hand through [illegible] under price support p[illegible]

INCREASE SUPPORT FUNDS

The president said he will ask Congress to increase the price support funds of the Commodity Credit Corp. from the present ceiling of $6,750,000,000 to $8,500,000,000.

He said that because of the big build up of surpluses in the hands of the corporation under price supports, more money will be needed. Agriculture department experts have predicted that corporation investments in surpluses may pass $7,000,000,000 by spring.

Under the flexible program, government price guarantees would be higher in time of shortages to encourage production, and lower in times of surpluses to encourage consumption and discourage overproduction.

The president said the present war - born mandatory supports should be permitted to expire at the end of this crop year.

Peiping Says Letter Sent To UN Officials

TOKYO (AP)—The Red Peiping radio said tonight the Communists have sent a letter to UN officials asking a reopening of the preliminary negotiations for a Korean peace conference.

The broadcast said the letter asked the UN command to send liaison officers to Panmunjom at 11 a. m. Wednesday (9 p. m. Tues[illegible] Communist liaison officers to discuss the time for resuming the talks.

Preliminary negotiations to arrange for the conference were broken off Dec. 12 when U. S. special envoy Arthur Dean walked out on Red negotiators after the Communists had accused the U. S. government of "perfidy."

ACCUSATION IGNORED

Dean said then that the Reds would have to withdraw the charge if they wanted the preliminary negotiations to continue.

Later, however, a highly placed source in Korea said that the U. S. might consider a direct Red move to get the preliminary talks going again as tantamount to withdrawal of the perfidy accusation.

As heard here, the Red broadcast made no mention of the accusation.

Malenkov Tours Red Farms Visits Kept Top Secret

By TOM REEDY

BERLIN (AP)—Premier Malenkov has apparently decided to see for himself the true conditions in the Soviet Union and has made several extensive tours recently.

This information reached Berlin Sunday through foreign diplomats in Moscow.

Reports that the 52-year-old successor to Stalin had been seen in widely separated parts of the Soviet Union were doubted at first but later confirmed by competent eyewitnesses.

Se[illegible] reported to their governments that Malenkov personally toured the Finnish Gulf coastal area last fall to observe the damage from a hurricane and see about relief measures. The storm never has been publicized.

HIGHLY SECRET

On a Ukrainian tour, Malenkov visited several collective farms and spoke with the disgruntled peasants about their troubles.

The tours appear to be genuine efforts on the Premier's part to reach down to the Soviet people. They are kept highly secret. There is none of the publicity that attends such things when propaganda is the objective.

Trenton Man, 100 Dislikes Jet Age

TRENTON—Although his 100th birthday is not until Tuesday, the man known as Mr. Trenton began celebrating yesterday as he entertained his four children, 14 grandchildren and four great grandchildren.

Benjamin Young, Charles St., is almost as old as the town he has lived in all his life. Last year, he helped celebrate Trenton's centennial anniversary. Born a few months after the little community of Fort Trent was incorporated as the village of Trenton, Mr. Young's formula for long life is: "Work hard and enjoy yourself."

Still able to read without glasses, Mr. Young doesn't smoke but takes a drink to be sociable. He prefers the days of the horse and buggy to the present jet age, impressed on him by the screaming aircraft over this Air Force town.

"People are trying to move too fast," he said, "they'll never live to be 100 that way."

Asks Pipe Line Public Utility

STURGEON FALLS (CP)—Donald MacDonald, leader of the Ontario CCF party, said Sunday night if the natural g. s pipe line from Alberta to Ontario were built and operated as a public utility rather than by private ownership it would result in a 30-to-45 per cent reduction in cost to the eastern consumer.

In a public addre in this com[illegible] Bay, he said this was disclosed in objective studies made at Stanford University in California.

Mr. MacDonald said two merged corporations which have been granted pipe line building and operating rights will reap profits that will boost the cost of natural gas in eastern Canada greatly beyond that which could have been provided under public ownership.

U.S. Senator Sees Seaway As 'Colossal Error' Only

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Glenn Beall (Rep.-Md.) took issue Saturday with President Eisenhower's contention that the proposed St. Lawrence seaway would add to American security.

U.S. participation in the project, as proposed in legislation scheduled by Senate Republican senate leaders for early action, would be a "colossal error," Beall said in a statement.

President Eisenhower, in a [illegible] to congress last week, recommended that the U.S. join Canada in the project as part of a program for strengthening continental defences.

NEEDED FOR SECURITY

"Both nations now need the St. Lawrence seaway for security as well as for economic reasons," the President said.

But Beall said the seaway, opening the Great Lakes to ocean-going shipping, would be impractical "since it would not add to our national security, nor is it necessary as an additional transportation facility."

Beall said that those responsible for bringing it before the Senate now "are making a grievous mistake and one which can be severely embarrassing to the administration's program.

YACHT GETS REPRIEVE — The schooner Fantome II, one of the world's most luxurious yachts, is spending the winter at Sorel, Que., after a voyage from the west coast where she was tied up for 14 years. Here she sails along in a happier day when she was owned by such millionaires as the Duke of Westminster and Hon. A. E. Guinness of the Irish brewing family, both now dead. Originally destined to be broken up for scrap, she has been given a reprieve.

Famous Luxury Yacht Of Millionaires Lies Between Two Rusty Old Boats At Sorel

By JOE MacSWEEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

SOREL, Que. (CP) — Sea-faring men in many ports have loved the luxury yacht Fantome II. But the new year finds the proud plaything of millionaires all but deserted and berthed in the Richelieu river here.

She lies between an old fire boat and a floating derrick, their rusty hides in contrast to the fading lustre of the four-masted, 1,200-ton schooner that served the multi-millionaire Duke of Westminster and Hon. A. E. Guinness, both now dead.

Actually Fantome is enjoying something of a reprieve. When she sailed from Seattle to the east coast last summer—her first voyage in 14 years—it was widely reported she was headed for the scrap heap.

TO BE KEPT INTACT

Sincennes-McNaughton Line Ltd., new owner of the vessel, now reports, however, that she may be left intact. There have been suggstions that she should be utilized by the Canadian Navy as a training ship.

Capt. George L. Hayes, who sailed Fantome from Seattle with a skeleton crew of 20, says:

"I never saw anything like her, and neither did anybody else. There's nothing like her afloat."

The black and white, three-deck ship, whose steel masts tower 129 feet above the water, looks like something from the pages of buccaneer history. But she is fitted with a luxury to make the eyes pop, with suites and accommodation comparable to a swank hotel.

Built in Italy in 1927 for the Duke of Westminster and named Flying Cloud the schooner had a carefree life until the Second World War.

KNOWN IN VANCOUVER

Fantome II was first seen on the Pacific coast in 1938 when the 257-foot yacht was brought to Vancouver by Mr. Guinness. She was in and out of the B.C. port several times while cruising coastal waters.

Her owner, member of the Irish brewing family, also spent considerable time inspecting his multi-million dollar British Pacific Properties Ltd. project and Lions Gate bridge.

Off the outbreak of the war the Fantome was trapped at Seattle while on a world cruise with guests and a crew of 40. Guinness hired planes to fly his party home to the United Kingdom.

He never saw Fantome again and when the war ended the schooner became entangled in a legal morass, a county court judge ruling she was "technically abandoned" and taxable as of the end of the war.

A maintenance crew of three swabbed her decks, polished her brass and handsomely carved oak woodwork and kept her generally shipshape.

Sealed by the United States customs were the 15,000 cases of fine wines and liqueurs, which are believed to be still in bond in Seattle.

POWERFUL ENGINES

Sincennes - McNaughton finally bought Fantome—which had been ordered sold by the executor of the Guinness estate—from a Seattle business man, primarily for her two 750-horsepower Polar Atlas engines, installed in 1938. Each is powerful enough to run a sea-going tug.

Her original cost is reported at $1,000,000 but many improvements were made through the years. One innovation was a $20,000 battery room, enabling the generators to be shut off while the passengers rested in port.

Windows, not portholes, line her sides. Below decks is every conceivable gadget for comfort, central heating, air conditioning, nine private suites, a library—even an "antique room," furnshed with pieces from the 1790-1800 period.

Each mahogany-furnished room has steam and electric heaters as well as the central heating system.

The ship has two sets of sails. They were not used on the five-week trip from Seattle through the Panama canal. Capable of moving at 14 knots, Fantome's masts are utilized in the air conditioning system, and serve to carry generator and boiler fumes high in the air.

"It would be a crime to let her go," says Capt. Hayes, adding that a vessel with much the same lines now is used as a training ship with the Spanish Navy. That one is called Juan Sebastian de Elcano.

Red-Dominated Federation Disrupts Sumatran Estates

By ROBERT FRANKLIN

MEDAN, Sumatra —(OFNS)— Dutch, British and other European plantation managers in Sumatra are having to cope with persistent, militant labor agitation, most of it Communist-inspired, in addition to their other troubles caused by the rubber slump.

Most of this agitation is the work of a Communist-dominated federation of trades unions known by the initials SOBSI, which direct, leads or influences at least two-thirds of the trades unionists in Indonesia today.

Communism's main effort in Indonesia today is being directed through SOBSI, controlling 37 unions with a total membership of between 600,000 and 750,000. The federation already dominates labour forces working in rubber, oil, tin, shipping, transportation and communications.

Although there are very few Chinese in the SOBSI unions, it is interesting to note that many of their tactics are patterned closely upon those being used in Communist China against British and other firms attempting to liquidate their holdings there. Recently, for example, the SOBSI union on an American rubber estate demanded compensation for workers' pri ately owned houses that had been destroyed during the war.

DEMAND LONG LEAVES

Sobsi unionists are also demanding the same long leave as their employers get every three or four years, and on one Dutch estate recently stipulated that the rubber tappers should be sent to Europe to enjoy their leave. The federation also has succeeded in having two Dutch employees of an oil company deported because they raised their voices in supervising Indonesian workers.

There is much room for improvement in workers' conditions here in Sumatra, as elsewhere in Indonesia. The point is, however, that 90 per cent of all grievances are brought forward by Sobsi, and most of them are purely political; the federation, it may be noted, does nothing to provide social services for its members.

It has been evident for some time that in much of its activity Sobsi has had at least the tacit support of the Indonesian Nationalist Party, the principal political party in power.

REPRESSION AIDS REDS

This was illustrated recently when the Nationalists withdrew their support from a second labor federation, known as KBSI, organised about a year ago to provide a counter-force to Communism in the labour field—although at the time a Nationalist Party member was the KBSI chairman.

Meanwhile, depressed conditions in the natural rubber industry cannot but aid Communist aspirations. Agitation for higher wages resulted in a small pay increase a few months ago; but the unions are demanding more. Only the most efficiently run estates, stocked with young rubber, can continue to operate at a profit if further wage increases are granted.

Continued low prices will not only force some estates out of business, but will make easier SOBSI's task of disruptive agitation.

Police Re-arrest U.K. Nobleman Lord Montagu

LYMINGTON, England (AP)—Lord Montagu, 27-year-old bachelor nobleman who was acquitted three weeks ago on a sex charge involving a Boy Scout, was arrested again Saturday and charged with two offences involving men.

Police said he denied the [illegible] him on £400 bail pending a hearing Jan. 23. He has not yet entered a formal plea.

Detectives took the tall, blonde peer from his bed at Beaulieu palace at dawn and held him at the police station.

SPECIAL COURT

Saturday night he was brought before a special magistrates court with two other defendants, his 37-year-old cousin, Michael Pitt-Rivers, a wealthy Dorset landowner, and Peter Wildeblood of London.

The charges were that Montagu committed a serious offence with John Reynolds Aug. 24, 1952, and that with Pitt-Rivers and Wildeblood he conspired to "incite John Reynolds and Edward McNally to commit serious offences with certain male persons" between April 1 and Oct. 31, 1952. Reynolds and McNally were not otherwise identified.

Producers Have Begun To Reduce Steel Prices

CLEVELAND (AP)—Steel producers have begun to cut prices, but no widespread reductions are expected because of approaching wage negotiations with the CIO United Steelworkers, Steel magazine said today.

Most of the current steel industry contracts expire at the end of next June.

But the weekly metalworking journal said its composite price on [illegible] steel is now $113.01 a [illegible] with $114.64 a month ago.

"A producer of electric furnace silvery pig iron cut prices $3.50 a gross ton," Steel reported, and is now selling 50 cents under its December, 1950, price. Merchant pig iron producers who raised prices last summer now may lower them, Steel said.

TOOL STEEL LOWER

Another price cut was on high-speed tool steel, and lower world prices for tungsten ore were given as the reason, Steel said. The first producer to make this price reduction lowered the price for 18-4-1 steel from $1.66 to $1.48 a pound.

Premium prices have all but disappeared from the market, after a stay of more than three years, Steel said. There is a prospect of further savings to the consumer in a proposal by eastern railroads to make reductions of 18 to 20 per cent for shipments of many iron and steel products, the magazine said in its weekly review.

Steel ingot output in the week ended today was only 1,788,000 net tons, compared with two million tons a year ago, Steel reported.

Two Charged

TORONTO (CP) — Police have charged Robert McCarey, 29, and Henry Bechtel, 31, with the $1,635 [illegible] day of hotel owner Louis Adrons. Adrons, co-owner of the east-end Wembley Hotel, said he was forced at gunpoint to open the office safe and hand over the money to a shabbily dressed gunman. Police said they recovered $460 from a snowbank.

Seek Changes In Parks Act

KITCHENER (CP) — Amendments to the Ontario Public Parks Act will be sought by the newly-reorganized Ontario Parks Association, it was decided at a meeting Saturday.

The main recommendation will be that the government amend the act so that park boards can receive an annual municipal grant equivalent to two mills of their local assessment for operation and maintenance of parks. Under the act now they are allowed only one mill.

The association approved a number of other recommendations which will be presented to Premier Frost Tuesday.

Ellroy Lippert of Kitchener, president of the Ontario association, presided Saturday. Delegates were present from Preston, Belleville, Toronto, London, Woodstock, Guelph, New Toronto, Stratford, Etobicoke, Kitchener and Waterloo.

Child Behavior Clinic

BRANTFORD (CP)—The possibility of hiring a psychologist for a child guidance behavior clinic was discussed here Saturday by representatives from children's aid societies in Brantford, Simcoe, Kitchener and Stratford. No decision was reached. Delegates said co-operation was vital if the clinic is to be established.

Telephone Call Made Between 2 Melbournes

MELBOURNE (CP)—By chance a telephone call to Melbourne, Australia, was made from Melbourne, Ont., Sunday.

Bruce Cann, 25, a recent immigrant from Australia had booked a call home for 3.15 p.m. Sunday. Delayed by a flat tire coming back from Detroit to London, he found himself in this centre 20 miles southwest of London and made the call from here.

It is believed to be the first call made between the two Melbournes.

100 KILLED IN AUSTRIAN SNOW SLIDES

FIRE-FIGHTING SILHOUETTE — Neighbors of Mrs. Thelma MacFarland formed a bucket brigade early today and despite the below zero temperature saved the MacFarland home on Maniece Ace. from being destroyed by fire.. By pouring water and ice on the roof, ripping off roofing to get at the fire, neighborhood men (shown above) had the fire nearly out when help arrived from the Peterborough Fire Department. Mayor Norman Graham ordered a fire truck sent to the MacFarland home, just outside the city limits, "on account of the children there".

Miners Reach Basis For Settlement

TORONTO (CP)—Labor Minister Daley of Ontario said a basis for settlement was reached today for a strike of about 1,400 gold miners at McIntyre Porcupine mines.

"A memorandum of settlement has been mutually agreed upon by both parties," Mr. Daley said after a two-hour meeting by union and company officials in his Queen's Park office.

"The agreement is subject to ratification by the union and by the board of directors of the company," he said. He added that no details of the settlement will be made public until the union membership sees them.

STARTED SEPT. 22

The United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL), representing the strikers, called the walkout Sept. 22.

McIntyre is the largest of seven mines in the Timmins area which now are on strike About 3,500 miners in all are represented. They have been on strike for months for higher wages and the union checkoff.

A strike of 1,500 workers at Hollinger Consolidated Gold Mines, largest Timmins district mine, ended last month. A settlement plan sponsored by Mr. Daley gave workers a five-cent-an-hour wage increase, bringing the hourly basic rate to $1.46.

Mayor Sends Fire Department To Help People Outside City

Mayor Norman Graham today ordered the city fire department to fight fight a fire just 100 feet outside the city limits in Otonabee township on Maniece Ave. When the city equipment arrived Mrs. Thelma MacFarland, 1 Maniece Ave., and her neighbors had the fire nearly under control. They had organized a bucket brigade in which the women carried pails of icy water from a nearby well and when that supply failed from a frozen creek. As a result of their efforts the fire was confined to one room and only that room and the roof were damaged by fire and water.

About 8.30, Mrs. MacFarland's seven-year-old son, Gerald, came running out of the back bedroom where he had been with his sister, Alberta, five.

"Things all on fire, mummy," the little lad said. At first his mother didn't believe him, but went to investigate, finding the fire fiercely eating at the wooden rafters.

Immediately Mrs. MacFarland told Gerald to "go and get Hoppy (Bill Hopkinson, a neighbor) and some of the men."

SHOOED CHILDREN OUT

Mrs. MacFarland promptly herded the children, Keith, 18 months, Paul, three, Alberta and Gerald to her mother's next door. Then she grabbed a bundle of the children's clothing.

Once the children, along with the clothing, were out of the way, the mother attempted to stem the fire with a pail of water, "to hold it until I got someone else." She then tried to get some of the furniture such a new cedar chest away from the fire.

Earl Meehan, another neighbor, along with Hopkinson, worked with pails of water, carried from Mrs. MacFarland's mother's next door, trying to put the fire out from the inside.

"I didn't think they could get it out and so I called Mr. Graham (meaning Norman Graham, Peterborough mayor) to ask for help," said Mrs. MacFarland. At the same time she telephoned her father, Charles Harris, at Kelly's fuel company, for more help. L. (George) Merryweather, another neighbor, and Nat Collins, Edison Ave., arrived minutes later.

When the Peterborough Fire Department equipment, Chief Bill Sorrie, and a pumper, arrived women were carrying pails of ice water to the men, fighting the

$5,000 Reuther Reward Paid Hour After Ritchie Escape

WINDSOR—(CP)—Lawyer Donald R. Morand said today Donald Ritchie's wife received payment of $5,000 reward money almost an hour after Ritchie escaped from his police guard in a Detroit hotel last Friday. Mr. Morand represented Ritchie—key witness in the Walter Reuther attempted murder case—in the deal to turn himself over to Detroit authorities and in arranging for payment of the reward money.

He said in a statement to the Windsor Star that Ritchie's wife received payment of the $5,000 from an escrow agent in Windsor shortly after 11:30 a. m. Friday. Payment of the reward by the UAW-CIO was announced Monday night.

MET ALL TERMS

Mr. Morand, who has previously been named only as a reputable and unimpeachable Windsor lawyer, said the terms of the escrow agreement were met by Ritchie.

Under the agreement, Ritchie was required to give himself up to Detroit police and to make a statement voluntarily about the Reuther shooting.

This statement was then checked by investigators. According to Mr. Morand, "If the statement was found correct and warrants were issued for the arrest of persons involved in the shooting, Ritchie was to get the $5,000 reward money."

It was arranged that Ritchie's wife would collect the reward money at 10 a. m. Friday.

WIFE LATE BUT CALM

On Friday, Ritchie's wife telephoned Mr. Morand to say that she "would be in about 11:30 a. m."

She din't appear particularly nervous nor was there anything unusual about her conduct, Mr. Morand recalled.

As a light snow fell early today, all are hopeful that the cold wave has finally been broken.

3,000 Red Saboteurs In Canada

Former British Spy Says Communists In All Major Plants

BROCKVILLE (CP)—A former British espionage agent and Russian army officer told an audience here Monday night that he believed there are 3,000 Russian-trained saboteurs living underground in Canada.

Capt. J. H. Degraff, who rose to the rank of major in the Russian army while working for Britains crack MI-5 intelligence division, said he has found Communists or "pinkies" everywhere in Canada.

"There are Communist taxi drivers, bus drivers, sailors and pilots continually passing information to Toronto or to the international headquarters hidden somewhere in Chicago," he said.

Capt. Degraff, a stocky 60-year-old, was trained as a spy in the Lenin Institute in Moscow and Berlin's Frunse Military Academy. He is described by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police as "the genuine article."

FACTORIES ORGANIZED

He told an audience of the Brockville Home and School Association that there are well-organized Communist cells in every major Canadian factory. Communists had infiltrated the armed forces and were in every trade union.

"If they are arrested, they don't have to worry," he said. "Their families are looked after and they receive $200 insurance for every month they are in jail."

Discussing Communist action in strikes, Degraff said, "The longer a working man strikes, the more he loses, the deeper he sinks into misery, the better fighter he becomes for the Labor-Progressive party."

Wait Analysis In Bell Death

NAPANEE (CP)—Provincial and local police inquiring into the death of Percy Warner Bell, 52, whose body was exhumed here Saturday, maintained their three-day-old secrecy and awaited the outcome of an analysis at the crime detection laboratory in Toronto of tissue specimens taken from the stomach.

The examination for possible traces of poison will start when Dr. Ward Smith, the laboratory's director, returns to Toronto today.

Police said Monday they had questioned nobody in connection with the case. But C. P. Hope, solicitor to the attorney-general's department, confirmed police had information which led them to suspect Bell died of poison.

Attorney-General Porter decided to exhume the body without asking permission of the widow. Mrs. Bell, a 47-year-old grandmother, when told by a reporter of the police action, described it as "scandalous."

She and her husband, she said, had been married 21 years and had "enjoyed a full and happy life together."

Jailed 7 Days After Joy-Ride

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Lloyd Young, 17, of Brockville, who was a passenger in a car involved in a triple fatality near here Christmas Eve, Monday was sent to jail for seven days on a charge of taking a car without the owner's consent.

Police testified Young was one of a group which had been drinking and which borrowed a car belonging to a salesman. Arthur Young, fatally-injured uncle of the accused, was behind the wheel when the rescuers removed the accident victims.

The accused said the car had been driven in and out of the ditch at least six times and that it had gone 85 miles an hour before colliding head-on with the other two cars.

The youth said his uncle had forced him by threats to drink wine.

U.K. Guerrilla Strikes

LONDON — (Reuters) — "Guerrilla" strikes of Communist-led electrical workers erupted in London today to enforce wage demands. About 270 workers in key positions quit work in London and the rest of the country in accord with the electrical trade union's new tactic of causing maximum inconvenience to employers. Today's strikers included electrical workers at the BBC's television studios in London. A BBC official said programs would not be affected.

Ground Comets To Investigate Mystery Crash

PORTO AZURRO, Elba (AP)—Can the wreckage of a Comet jet airliner be raised from 400 feet of water to help solve the mystery of its crash?

Experts of two countries studied that possibility here today. Meanwhile, British Overseas Airways Corporation Comets were grounded throughout the world pending a "minute" investigation into why the jetliner exploded in mid - air 10 miles south of here Sunday and plunged into the sea, killing 35 passengers and crew.

BOAC called the grounding order "a measure of prudence." And while the action was not ordered by the ministry of transport and civil aviation, France and Canada, where Comets also are operated, were informed of the action.

(The two Comet jets in Canada are owned by the RCAF. Canadian Pacific Airlines has three later-model Comets on order. It was about to take delivery of one of the current series last year when it crashed in Pakistan, killing the Canadian crew.

TO STAY IN SERVICE

(The RCAF said its two Comets will remain in service pending word from the Elba investigation. It added that it would not continue to operate the speedy four-jet craft if there is the slightest hint that they are unsafe. There have been three fatal Comet crashes in the last 10 months.)

Separate British and Italian investigation commissions today examined fragments of the plane found floating in the sea.

Twenty bodies are believed trapped in the sunken wreckage. Due to the great depth, problems of raising the wreck are involved.

Technicians in London today started stripping down for the Comet airliners.

The three other Comets operated by British Overseas Airways Corporation are due here without passengers within the next two days for a complete check.

Comet routes will be flown by piston-engined planes.

Examination of the seven-plane fleet may take a month of night-and-day work.

Set Fire Inquest Date

PEMBROKE (CP) — Inquest into a CPR sleeping-car fire which took the life of an Ottawa doctor Dec. 30, has been set for Jan. 21, crown officials said today.

Charles Faucault of Noranda, Que., a passenger held for questioning in the fire, has been released, officials said, but he will appear at the inquest.

Killed in the fire was Dr. H. A. Collins, 61, of Ottawa. Eighteen other passengers escaped.

Villages, Stations Completely Buried, By Big Avalanches

LONDON—(Reuters)—The death toll leaped today as terrifying snow-impelled avalanches swept down mountainsides in central Europe, burying trains, homes and entire railroad stations. Villages isolated by blizzards began to run short of food. Hungry wolf packs attacked snowed-in sheep folds. Rescue teams and specially - trained "avalanche dogs" dug desperately to try to rescue farmers and travellers buried in the snow. By this evening the number of dead and missing in Austria alone had passed the 100-mark, with the toil expected to go higher.

Worst disaster was at the village of Blons, in Austria's Vorarlberg region near the Swiss frontier. More than 50 persons are feared to have perished when a series of snow slides buried more than 20 houses.

In another major disaster 12 persons were buried on the Vienna-Switzerland railway when an avalanche completely swallowed up the tiny station of Dalaas. Little hope is held for their rescue.

OTHERS FEARED TRAPPED

Six persons in the waiting room, five in nearby section workers' houses and the stationmaster are known to have been caught. Police said others may be trapped.

Elswhere in Austria and Switzerland, rescue teams with long probing rods and dogs specially trained to locate buried bodies searched for more than 30 persons known to be buried.

Dozens of rail lines are blocked by snow. Some main lines were cleared today, but most still are closed.

Another enormous avalanche Monday night crashed into outlying houses of the adjoining Austrian villages of Bartholomaeberg and Schruns. Eighteen persons are missing.

DANGER STILL GREAT

In the Montafon valley, dogs and men scrambled through loose snow many feet above where 15 persons are buried.

The Swiss federal avalanche institute at Davos announced that the avalanche danger is still acute. More than 23 inches of snow fell in Switzerland Monday and the fall continued today.

Greece, France, Germany and Hungary all reported heavy snow, with roads and rail lines blocked.

Can't Agree On Site For Big 4 Meeting

BERLIN (AP)—The continuing deadlock between representatives of the three Western powers and the Russians over a site for the projected Big Four foreign ministers meeting raised Allied concern today as to whether the conference would come off at all.

The failure of the talks between the four Berlin commandants on arrangements to produce any results thus far posed a genuine threat to the scheduled Jan. 25 opening of the big parley, some Western sources said.

One competent diplomat asserted that further failure to reach agreement would pose the natural question: "Do the Russians want the meeting at all?" It was too early to answer this question which "is already rearing its ugly head."

The third meeting of the four commandants wound up early this morning after 11 hours of fruitless talk.

Canada To Take 168,000 Persons In '54

ST. THOMAS (CP)—Canada will accept about 168,000 immigrants in 1954, including the 1,000,000th post-war immigrant, Citizenship Minister Harris said Monday.

The government believes there are still many opportunities for newcomers and plans to take in "about the same number" as last year's 168,000, he said.

"We are looking forward to the 1,000,000th immigrant some time in the next few months, a post-war record equalled only by that of the U.S.A."

BRITONS TOP LIST

British immigrants, totalling 295,000, had been the largest single racial group. There had been 115,000 Germans, 92,000 Netherlanders, 70,000 from the United States and 386,000 of other racial groups.

The government had always felt the greater portion of immigrants should come from the United Kingdom.

"At the same time, one cannot disregard the advantages of having a mixed population and of adding to those other national groups already here who have demonstrated their ability to adapt themselves to Canadian conditions."

Three Children Watch Murder

BALTIMORE (AP)—Three children playing in the snow on a Baltimore sidewalk Monday night witnessed the fatal shooting of a man in a parked automobile.

The killer fled into the darkness when one of the children called out: "I saw you do it."

The victim was Woodrow Wilson Robbins, 36, who was shot in the head three times.

Police withheld the names of the children, two brothers and a sister. With the killer on the loose, chief inspector Joseph Itzel said, they may be in "extreme danger. Their ages range from 7 to 13.

British Leaders Confer On Atomic Corporation

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain's top military leaders today conferred with Prime Minister Churchill and his cabinet on the working of the new atomic energy corporation.

The corporation, which soon will take over full control of atomic research and production from the ministry of supply, will work closely with the armed forces on development and production of atomic energy for industrial use.

The cabinet today also discussed labor disputes and made preparations for the reconvening of Parliament next Tuesday.

U.S. Storms Claim 50 Lives

Canada's Cold Wave Not Finished Yet

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Cold weather continued to grip most of Canada today. A snowstorm that moved across the lower Great Lakes Monday night was expected to enable a fresh outbreak of polar air to invade Ontario for the next day or two.

The Ontario, storm, which left a foot of snow at Hamilton and three inches in Toronto, was blamed for at least one death. Mrs. Emily Banas, 39, holding her coat collar over her face as protection against the wind-driven snow, walked into the path of a street-car.

Fifteen - below-zero weather forced the Davie Shipbuilding and repairing Company to cancel outdoor work at its yards at Lauzon, Que., across the St. Lawrence river from Quebec City. Four hundred men were sent home Monday with orders not to report for work today. An official said it would be "inhuman" to ask the men to work outside in the severe cold, as the wind blowing off the river would "whip the skin off them."

In many southern Ontario communities, plumbers were kept busy answering calls to homes where waterpipes had snapped in the cold. The Ontario Motor League reported hundreds of calls from stalled and stranded motorists.

Icebreakers were ordered to the icefields of the St. Lawrence river after the current cold spell thickened the ice along the narrow channel near Sorel.

WORST IN 5 YEARS

NEW YORK (AP) — Flakes, perhaps the last, of the worst storm to hit the northeastern United States in five years filtered down today on cities and fields, a white blanket bordered in the black of more than 50 deaths.

The weather bureau here said the storm was in its final stages early today and was moving in a northeasterly direction along the New England coast and out to sea.

However, the bureau warned that a wave of freezing air was due to move in on the area from Canada after the snowstorm.

Sleet extended as far south as North Carolina Monday, with snow registered in Georgia.

North of Washington, the sleet coated heavy drifts of snow with a treacherous ice surface, crippled traffic and brought accidents on roads, streets and sidewalks.

DEATH TOLL RISES

The death toll rose with these accidents, sledding mishaps and heart attacks as many persons bucked the snow and sleet afoot or tried to shovel it.

Up to a foot of snow piled up in some places Monday. Philadelphia had 10 inches, its heaviest in seven years. New York recorded a 9.6-inch blanket as of midnight, the most since a 15-inch fall in 1949.

City employees worked to clear streets. New York City's garbage pick-ups were forgotten, with the 8,000-man sanitation force attacking the snow piles. Manhattan's usually busy streets were relatively quiet, but subway and bus lines held up well.

TRAVEL SLOWED

Travel on such highways as the Merritt parkway between New York and Connecticut, the New Jersey turnpike and the Pennsylvania turnpike was slowed. Airline flights were delayed or grounded.

Boston commuter trains were delayed handling increased passenger traffic as motorists left their cars home. Philadelphia transportation also was disrupted. A baby was born in a car stalled in a Maryland snowdrift.

Schools were closed in rural New Jersey, Delaware, Philadelphia, New Haven, Conn., and other places.

The same was true of some industrial plants, among them the Republic Aviation Corp.

Two men were lost and a third died of a heart attack Monday night when a harbor pilot dory was swamped by heavy seas in the north channel of Boston harbor.

Canadian Army Non-Existent As Defence Unit

VANCOUVER (CP) — Lt.-Col. H. W. J. Peck said Monday the Canadian army is almost non-existent as a defensive fighting force and is outnumbered three-to-one by Communists and potential saboteurs in the country.

Col. Peck, commanding officer of [illegible] Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery, said the army is a "mere token of a token force." He was speaking to the ad and sales bureau of the Vancouver Board of Trade.

There were 55,554 Communist votes in the last federal election, three for every regular soldier, Col. Peck added. In B.C. alone, there were 10,382—more than half the total strength of the army.

He said the Canadian army, without the reserve force, consists of one regular division—still in its formative stages. At full strength it would have 18,000 men.

ONE MAN, 200 MILES

The regular army, he told the luncheon meeting, has one man for every mile of our Atlantic and Pacific coastline.

"Or, if you prefer it, one man for every 200 square miles of territory."

He said Canada should not rely on the United States for protection. He added:

"In my opinion this is a humiliating thing to do, and a type of protection which has not been effective in previous wars."

In Ottawa, Defence Minister Claxton said he had "no comment' to make on remarks about the army by Lt.-Col. Peck.

Clift Succeeds Allard Heads Korean Brigade

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian fighting men in Korea will get a new commanding officer next June. He is Brig. Frederick A. Clift, 45, of Saskatoon.

Brig. Clift's present post as commander of the 2nd brigade at Wainright, Alta., will be taken by Brig. George Kitching, 42, now commandant of the Canadian Army staff college at Kingston.

Brig. Mortimer Patrick Bogert, 45, a former commander of the 25th brigade in Korea and now deputy adjutant general at army headquarters here, will succeed Brig. Kitching at the staff college.

Brig. Jean Victor Allard, 40, now commanding the 25th brigade, will be given another assignment, as yet not disclosed. He has commanded the brigade in Korea since April, 1953.

Brig. Clift was severely wounded during the Second World War while commanding the South Saskatchewan Regiment in Normandy.

Friends Help Couple Visit Mayo Clinic

HAMILTON (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Paul Lahde of St. Catharines passed through here Monday night on their way to the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., and said a neighbor's house-to-house canvass raised the money for their trip. In Rohester, Mrs. Lahde hopes to obtain treatment for severe arthritis in her legs and arms, while her husband seeks treatment for silicosis.

They said the neighbor who made the trip possible was Mrs. Norma Raham.

"This is the chance we've waited for for 10 years," said Lahde, 53, who met and married his wife in Timmins. "If the doctors in Rochester can't help us, we'll know there's nothing anybody can do."

Three Killed In Crash Cause Not Determined

KNIGHTSTOWN, Ind. (AP)—Three men from Columbus, O., were killed early today when their four-place Stinson plane crashed on a farm near here.

They were Walter M. Clark, 35, Joseph W. Dobbins, 37, and John Edward Over, 47. Police said Clark apparently was the pilot.

Cause of the crash was not known. Temperatures were near zero and a stiff wind was blowing.

Police said the plane was headed west when it crashed but they believed it was en route to Ohio.

Leftist May End Italian Crises

ROME (AP) — Amintore Fanfani, 46-year-old left-wing leader of the Christian Democratic party, agreed today to try to form a new Italian government.

He "conditionally" accepted President Luigi Einaudi's offer of the premiership after former premier Giuseppe Pella, who resigned Jan. 5, turned it down.

Press and political observers had generally agreed that Einaudi would ask Fanfani to attempt to end the week-long political crisis.

PUSHED LAND REFORM

He had served as agriculture minister in Pella's five-month-old government. In the former post, he played a major part in the implementation of the land reform program under which Italy plans to distribute 1,729,000 acres to 150,000 peasant families.

Pella resigned last week after a split with other Christian Democrat leaders who felt the premier's policies were too far to the right.

Free Elections Key To German Unity: Eden

LONDON (AP) — Foreign Secretary Eden has served notice on Russia that the key to German unity and European peace is free German-wide elections.

Eden said in a country-wide broadcast speech Monday night: "That is a position we can never abandon. For that is the only method by which we can get a representative German government with which the four powers can discuss a German settlement."

Eden spoke of a need for compromise by both East and West at Berlin and said the "essence of all successful international negotiation is compromise. We and our allies will do all we can to encourage a positive approach.'

He said it would be a "reasonable request" if the Russians ask for "assurances" against possible revival of German aggression.

2 Small Fires Handled By Fire Department

Peterborough Fire Department responded to two fire calls Monday afternoon.

The home of R. K. Beeler, 226 Barnardo St., was filled with coal smoke and firemen who were summoned at 4:31 p.m., found a blocked back draft on the furnace was the cause. It was remedied without the use of any equipment.

There was a chimney fire at the Bishop's Palace at 6:47 a.m. today but it was allowed to burn itself out and no fire-fighting equipment was used on it.

Stole Cheques From The Mail

Pleading guilty to five charges concerning the theft of cheques valued at a total of $1,300, a 26-year-old Peterborough man, Carl Northey, was remanded for sentence by Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, in court today. Sentence will be passed on January 19.

OPP Constable George Louth testified that Northey had taken the cheques from country mail boxes after being deposited there by rural mailmen. It was also disclosed that James Hutchison and Delphaine Provencher, both of Peterborough, are also charged in connection with the case.

Hutchison is on similar charges to Northey, and Mrs. Provencher is charged with receiving stolen cheques. They will appear for trial on January 26. Both were granted bail. The offences were alleged to have taken place in September and October, 1953.

Magistrate Philp detailed a list of 13 previous convictions against Northey for theft, forgery, receiving stolen goods and carrying a revolver, and said it was a very long list of serious charges.

Defence counsel Jacob Low argued that it would serve no good purpose to give Northey a penitentiary term. He asked for the least possible reformatory sentence, stating that Northey was still a young man and capable of mending his ways.

Magistrate Philp: "This man has a record stretching over approximately 10 years. As far as I can see there was not one year he was not in custody or in the process of getting into trouble."

The maximum sentence possible for the type of offence Northey has committed is seven years' imprisonment.

fire on the roof. They had it nearly under control.

The women, Mrs. A. Richards, Mrs. Florence Downer, Violet Harris and Mrs. Hopkinson, first drained the water from the pump in the Harris home. When that supply ran short, Mrs. Nita Meehan broke a hole through the ice in a small creek behind the MacFarland home. That icy water was carried to the men

FOUND LADDER

Hopkinson, Merryweather, Collins and Earl Meehan had found a small wooden ladder, just long enough to reach the roof of the MacFarland home. Passing the buckets along they attempted to soak the fire, raging in the rafters under them.

Finally with the assistance from the Peterborough firemen, the neighbors had the fire well under control.

Commenting on the neighbors' work, Fire Chief Sorrie, said, "They certainly did a good job; they worked like busy bees."

Mrs. MacFarland said Gerald and Alberta were in the back room when the first started, but whether they started it or not, she didn't know.

But that theory was ruled out by Chief Sorrie who said the fire was caused by a little heater in the room. Mrs. MacFarland said this heater was placed in the room two weeks ago because the one large stove wasn't enough to heat the whole house.

While the fire raged, there was heated controversy over telephone wires in the city regarding the fire equipment being sent outside the city limits, even though it was less than 100 feet from the boundary.

JUSTIFIES ORDER

Mayor Graham, to justify his action in ordering the reels out, said, "I sent the equipment on account of the children there and the people are right up against it." He added: "We're not going to see people stuck if they're that close to the city."

At the same time, Ald Harold Rehill, city council fire, water and light committee chairman, said he had nothing for publication "at this time" and that "there should be a discussion with the committee and council."

Mr. Rehill said a city bylaw states the Peterborough fire equipment can't go outside the city unless there's a working agreement. At present the city has working agreements with only Lakefield and Smith township.

The former spy, who now operates a business here, turned his blast on the Canadian Peace Congress. "Every dollar given to the peace congress is the first down payment on the first nail in your coffin," he declared.

From his experience as a double agent in Europe, South America and the Far East, Capt. Degraff claimed that Russia has "99 per cent of America's secrets." Russian agents are members of the "most efficient and highly-developed spy system in history."

PRETENDED TO BE RED

Known only as Capt. Johnny "X" when he was engaged on anti-Communist work in Canada after the Second World War, Degraff began his career in 1908 when he ran away from his home in Hamburg. He said he pretended to swallow the Communist line and joined the German Communist party in 1920. In 1929 he left for Moscow, graduating as an army major the next year.

Degraff's work for the Communists included straight espionage, training party members in various countries, and implementing revolutionary movements. He began working for Britain during this period. During the war he was loaned to the RCMP.

He moved here last fall hoping to retire. But now he spends most of his winter hours lecturing against communism.

"We can't beat communism wih planes and guns only," he said. "We must admit our mistakes and reform our way of life from the bottom. The working man has lost his faith in our political parties. He can only turn to the LPP."

WINNIPEG (CP) — Dealings generally were dull and prices continued to move narrowly today on the grain exchange.

Don't Know Jet Engineer

TORONTO (CP)—Dusan Premovic, 37, the "New Canadian" Yugoslav-born engineer who has told United States immigration officers at St. Albans, Vt., that he has blueprints for a "revolutionary" new jet plane engine, is not known at Toronto aircraft plants.

Premovic told the U. S. immigration service when he was arrested [illegible] entering the United States from Canada, that he had lived in Toronto since his arrival in Canada last September.

Spokesmen for A. V. Roe (Canada) Ltd., and de Havilland Aircraft Company of Canada Ltd., said today that Premovic has not worked for their companies in Toronto.

It was stated that Canadian aircraft plants receive scores of job applications from displaced-person immigrants, some with high engineering degrees, but almost all are turned down.

No Place No Place For Younger Couples Elders Disagree; Feel No Place Like Home

NO PLACE, England (Reuters)—The 259 inhabitants of this three-street hamlet in northern England are worried they may soon have no place to live.

The little mining settlement has only enough houses for existing residents—the young couples are moving away.

The villagers, who think there is no place like No Place, feel the village is doomed. So the vicar, Rev. Ronald Halstead, is calling a public meeting to urge authorities to start a building program.

NO PLACE LIKE IT

"Some think No Place is doomed because of its name," he said. "But to the villagers it is home and there is no place like it. Some of our houses are 100 years old and we intend to do everything we can to prevent the village being deserted."

He, nor anyone else in No Place, could offer an explanation of how the name came about.

"The village has always been called No Place but no-one knows why," Halstead said.

W. A. Geenty, county planning officer, said: "Some villages have been left out of our building schemes because a considerable loss of population is expected in them and they are considered a bad financial risk."

Finds Russians Are Sold On Their Political System

Special to The Examiner

OTTAWA. — The Russians have no feeling of being oppressed and would not welcome a western army of liberation, Gerald Clark, staff writer for Weekend Picture Magazine and first Canadian correspondent to tour Russia, said today. The West, he said, is "lulling itself with misinformation" if it fails to acknowledge that Russians are completely sold on their system.

The most significant change in Russia since the war is the post-Malenkov emphasis on consumer spending. The government, he said, is curbing its arms output and adopting an inventive plan in industry.

To make this consumer goods program work, Russia needs a period of peace. He felt that this domestic upheaval explained Russia's "more reasonable" attitude since Stalin's death.

Comparing Russia's standard of living with that of Canada is "unrealistic" according to Mr. Clark. He acknowledged that "no Canadian in his right mind" would prefer to live in Russia but this is not the point. Russians, he said, are living and eating better than ever before and see no reason to change.

Thirty-six years of indoctrination, he added, has compounded the notion that the western worker is oppressed and that Russians live in a latter-day Eden. Since political individualism has been purged Russians have no conception of a better system.

Communism is just a word in Russia. He said the Russians themselves are interested in Communism only in an abstract way.

They describe their system as socialism with communism a distant dream. Since political indoctrination has been so successful and since "thoughts control is an established fact" Russia can now afford to allow religious freedom. Moscow churches are "jammed to the doors" but worshippers are elderly folk. The young have been won over to the "more compelling" religion of communism.

Russia is not a classless society according to Mr. Clark. The state owns everything but each citizen feels he can aspire to a more elevated position. The speaker cited the case of a woman who was splashed by a party official's limousine. She felt no rancor because "my boy may have one some day."

Mr. Morand said he had "four or five" meetings with Ritchie and carried out certain instructions given him by Ritchie with respect to contacting certain people.

He said he "then arranged for the money to be paid in escrow for Ritchie's wife," whom he had met in his office.

Asked why Ritchie wanted the money held for his wife and not for himself, Mr. Morand hinted that Ritchie was "afraid something might happen to him."

PAYMENT NOT MADE

The payment was not made, however, the union said, until Ritchie had given his information to police and it was found by authorities to have been "substantial."

CASE MAY COLLAPSE

In the absence of Ritchie, Wayne County Prosecutor Gerald O'Brien earlier admitted that he might not have a case to present against Carl Renda, Santo (Sam) Perrone, Clarence Jacobs — another Canadian—and Peter Lombardo, all of whom Ritchie named as plotters of the assault. Jacobs is being held in jail at Windsor.

Donald S. Leonard, city police commissioner, ordered the lie-detector tests of his two men who failed to keep their hands on Ritchie.

The two, detective Sayne Glisman and patrolman William Krupka, took the "first phase" of the tests Monday. Afterwards, Leonard said there was "definitely" nothing irregular showing from the tests.

He ordered the tests taken for the two officers' "own protection" and "in the interests of the public." He said the escape was either the result of "neglectful carelessness" or "purposeful neglect," and felt it was the former.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO (AP) — Most grains opened steady to a little higher in fairly active dealings on the board of trade today.

UN To Meet Communists On Thursday

SEOUL (AP) — The United Nations command today agreed to meet with Communist liaison officers Thursday to discuss resumption of negotiations to arrange a [illegible]

State department representative, stipulated in a note to the Communist high command that he is sending his liaison secretary to Panmunjom "for the purpose of dicussing conditions for resuming conversations as well as the date for their resumption."

The Communists proposed late Monday that liaison officers meet at Panmunjom Wednesday to discuss resumption of preliminary political talks to set up an over-all Korean peace conference.

STATE DEPT. DECIDES

Young sent the Communist request to Washington and the decision was made by the state department there.

The preliminary conference, which was to work out the time, place and composition of a peace conference, was broken off Dec. 12 when the U.S. special envoy, Arthur Dean, walked out after Red negotiators accused the U. S. of "perfidy."

Earlier, India offered the Korean repatriation commission a secret plan for solving the war-prisoner problem after the group turned down a Swedish proposal to free all PoWs as civilians Jan. 23.

MAY BE OTHER PLAN

Rejection of the Swedish plan does not mean the PoWs will be held past then, but only that the specific proposal was not acceptable.

India voted against it with the Czech and Polish delegates. The Swedes and the Swiss voted for it.

After hearing the new Indian proposal, the commission adjourned until Thursday.

One source said Monday an Indian plan under consideration would give the prisoners back to the Allied and Red commands, getting the Indians and the commission off the hook without an out-and-out ruling against either side.

The defeated Swedish proposal was in line with Allied demands that the 22,500 prisoners be released as civilians after midnight Jan. 22. The Reds insist they be held until a Korean peace conference discusses their fate.

CONFERENCE ON FUTURE

Although the U.S. agreed to discuss reopening of the stalled preliminary talks on a peace conference, the actual conference still appears to be many weeks in the future.

The liaison officers' meeting Thursday would only be to talk over another session which would only draw up the plans and set the date for the conference.

The Reds had asked a meeting only to discuss the time for resumption of the political talks. Young, who is northeast Asia expert for the state department, said he had postponed the meeting from Wednesday, when the Reds wanted it, to Thursday "for convenience."

Rush To Stake Claims Near Geraldton

GERALDTON (CP) — School teachers, mechanics, bushmen and others are staking claims near the Manitouwadge base metal field find.

Hotels here are jammed with prospectors waiting to fly into the area, as local aircraft work nearly 24 hours a day transporting men and equipment into the area, as the scramble [illegible] helicopter is also doing its bit.

Geraldton is about 160 miles northeast of Fort William. Geco Mines Ltd., flew a bulldozer in last week to help speed exploration of its copper-zinc-silver orebody which is responsible for the current wave of interest.

800 MEN AT SCENE

About 200 men are now at the scene and a "tent city" is springing up in the bush around the area of the Geco discovery. The site is about midway between Hemlo and Hillsport.

One prospector sold nine claims to a syndicate for $2,700 here last week.

More than 1,000 claims have been recorded already. Staking is going on far beyond the confines of the original narrow greenstone belt in which the discovery was made last year.

ANCIENT TIMEKEEPER—Vancouver's nine-o'clock gun is in danger of being silenced. The muzzle-loading time-signaller in Stanley Park has been booming nightly for the last 60 years, but the federal trasport department will cut off the powder supply. George Kilgour, the man who loads the gun, is being careful with his powder supply.

May Be Forced To Register Zoning Bylaws

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto's city solicitors said Monday night an Ontario Appeal Court ruling may make it necessary for Ontario municipalities to register their restrictive zoning bylaws.

The appeal court upheld a ruling by Mr. Justice A. M. LeBel dismissing an application by Trafalgar township for [illegible] just east of Oakville.

The case involved the purchase by Mrs. Mary Hamilton of a $25,000 residence for a tourist home. Mrs. Hamilton said she was told there were no municipal restrictions. Later the township claimed the operation of her tourist home was contrary to a bylaw passed three years prior to her purchase.

Mr. Justice F. D. Hogg, who wrote the Appeal Court judgment, said he felt it is "obvious that as the bylaw restricts the use to which property may be put and may, therefore, prejudicially affect it, an owner who wished to take advantage of a bona fied purchaser who had no knowledge of such bylaw might be able to accomplish his purpose and thereby cause serious loss to the purchaser."

TRAIN JUMPS TRACKS—Ninety passengers and seven crew members escaped serious injury when a mud slide at White Rock, B.C., derailed a Great Northern Railways streamliner. The baggage coach was toppled over an embankment into Semiahmoo Bay beach. The day coach, behind, was left hanging over the bank. The train was bound from Seattle to Vancouver.

Hunt To Head Electronics Defence Program

OTTAWA (CP)—A. Brewer Hunt, prominent Montreal electrical engineer, will head Canada's $100,000,000-a-year electronics defence program.

Production Minister Howe today announced appointment of the new $1-a-year man, on loan from the [illegible] Electric Co. Ltd. [illegible] manager of the communications equipment division.

Mr. Hunt, a bland, soft-spoken, 51-year-old electronics expert, succeeds W. R. McLachlan of Toronto, who recently was appointed head of A. V. Roe's gas turbine division at Malton.

TOP-SECRETS CHIEF

The new electronics chief, who also is president of the Radio Television Manufacturers Association, will rule over a top-secret program that has become the most intricate segment of the current defence build-up.

Out of the heavy flow of orders from this department has come equipment for the Canadian-American transcontinental northern radar screen.

This project includes an elaborate system of telephone, microwave and radio communication equipment.

A. BREWER HUNT

It also includes production of radio walkie-talkies for overseas allies, radar for ships and aircraft, anti-submarine detection equipment, ground training planes to simulate flight and radar control units for anti-aircraft guns.

ELECTRONICS VITAL

Electronics play an increasing part in Western defence and with this increased use has come a growing complexity in production, the production department said.

Mr. Howe said he feels satisfied that in Mr. Hunt he has found the man of experience he requires. Mr. Hunt has been with Northern Electric for 26 years. He has held a number of important posts, covering engineering and manufacturing of both electronic and telephone equipment.

A native of London, Ont., he graduated from the University of Toronto with a degree in applied science.

U.S. Seen Easing Red China Policy

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — With fingers crossed and gaze ostensibly averted, Britain wistfully is watching a reported trend by the United States toward a more flexible policy on Communist China.

A sharp difference of opinion on how to handle China has long been a distorting factor in the Anglo-U.S. alliance. Now, British commentators seem to think there are signs the state department may be moving closer to the British viewpoint.

The foreign office recognized Mao Tze-tung's government three years ago and in general favors an empirical approach to the Red regime. The United States has steadfastly refused to recognize Communist China. But British newspapers think they detect a weakening in the U.S. attitude.

"There are already signs that a more flexible attitude to the China problem is spreading in the U. S.," says the right-wing Daily Express in an editorial. "Which policy is the more likely to drive China closer to Russia: To treat her as a great power or to treat her as a leper?"

SOFTER ATTITUDE

The left-wing New Statesman and Nation, in a lengthy article this week, also notes that serious thought is being given to an "eventual softening" of U. S. toughness toward Peiping. But it sees some factors, such as November's mid-term elections and the possibility of an American business recession, which might temper the administration's enthusiasm for a gentler policy.

The Weekly Observer, independent, says it will take a long time for the seed of the new policy "to grow into a strong plant." Dispatches from The Observer's Patrick O'Donovan have previously made clear that he considers recognition of China to lie at the roots of the problem of Korea.

The Times, also independent, carried a Washington story forecasting that U. S. Far Eastern policy may slowly alter. The Times in the past has given prominence to feature articles attributing "mystique of suffering."

Canada Slowing But Future Good

MONTREAL (CP)—Charles St. Pierre, president of National Canadian Bank, said today there are indications of a slowing down in economic activity but expressed confidence in the future.

In an address prepared for delivery to the bank's annual meeting he stated:

"There is general agreement that the unprecedented period of expansion through which we are passing cannot last indfinitely and that, sooner or later, the rhythm of economic activity will begin to slow down.

"Already, there is evidence to that effect. . . some 10,000 manufacturing concerns, big and small, have been established in Canada since the end of the war. It seems obvious that we cannot rely much longer on such a contribution from business promoters."

Hold Inquest In Deaths Of Quebec Mother, Child

ROBERVAL, Que. (CP) — An inquest will be held this week in the brutal slaying of a mother and her two-year-old daughter at Notre-Dame-de-Lorette, a small community about 20 miles north of this lake St. John district town.

A third child of the family is in critical condition in hospital, suffering from frostbite as a result of a one-mile journey in thin clothing during 30-below-zero weather.

The father, Cylien Boivin, 30-year-old laborer, is being held by provincial police as a material witness.

The bodies of Belgium-born Mrs. Fernande Fanielle Boivin, 35, and her daughter Diane were found on a bed in the Boivin home Saturday.

APPARENTLY STRANGLED

Police said Mrs. Boivin apparently had been strangled and the little girl battered to death with a block of wood.

A neighbor, Narcisse Langevin, told police he found the bodies when he went to the house after seeing Boivin running toward Notre-Dame-de-Lorette wearing only his long underwear and clutching 11-month-old Michele under his right arm.

Officials at St. Michel Hospital here described the condition of Michele as critical. She suffered severe frostbite during the trip from her home to the vilage. She was dressed only in sleepers.

TWO CHILDREN CRYING

Police said Boivin ran to the village church and knelt at the altar steps. It took two men to pull the unconscious child from his arms.

Police said Langevin told them he found the other Boivin children, Jean, 5, and Denise, 3, trembling and crying when he entered the house.

Mrs. Boivin, dressed in ski slacks and sweater was dead on the bed with her arms around the body of Diane. The bedclothes had been pulled up to cover the bodies.

Cockshutt Profit Cut Down Over Half In '53

TORONTO (CP) — Cockshutt Farm Equipment Ltd. Monday announced a net profit of $1,145,102 for the year ending Oct. 31, 1953. The figure was a drop of $1,738,667 from the 1952 net profit.

Net profit per share for the last year was $1.07 compared to $2.70 in 1952. Sales in 1953 were down 14 per cent from the 1952 sales.

C. Gordon Cockshutt, president and chairman, said the sales downtrend in Canada and the United States during the second half of the fiscal year was unequalled in the post-war period as a consequence of keen competition and a general decline in farmers' income.

'53 Worst Year For Polio, Death Toll 401

EDMONTON (CP) — In what was probably its worst siege of polio, Canada counted 401 deaths in 8,574 cases during 1953.

The death toll was 100 above that of 1952, while cases were almost double the 4,757 reported in the previous year.

The four western provinces were hit the hardest, Manitoba, Alberta and British Columbia all experiencing their worst polio years on record.

A survey by The Canadian Press shows that the West had 292 deaths in 5,636 cases. In the six eastern provinces, 2,938 cases brought 109 fatalities. In 1952, the figures were 3,351 cases and 231 deaths in the West, 1,406 cases and 70 deaths in the East.

COST $400,000

Manitoba's deputy health minister, Dr. M. R. Elliott, estimated that the 1953 polio epidemic coast the province $400,000. In addition, the province spent $150,000 on iron lungs and other respirators.

Alberta has set up a special research committee, whose recommendations will be used in any recurrence of the outbreak this year.

Polio, formerly widely known as infantile paralysis when it was considered primarily a children's disease, has cut a big swath among adults in the last two years, particularly in 1953.

Saskatchewan and Alberta health department officials estimate about 50 per cent of their cases were among adults.

Negro Leader Dies

NEW YORK (AP) — Eugene Kinckle Jones, 68, Negro elder statesman in the field of race relations, died Monday. It seeks to improve jobs, housing and other urban conditions of Negroes.

First Festival Play Draws Generous Praise

TORONTO (CP) — Christopher Fry's "Venus Observed," opening play of the 1954 Central Ontario Drama Festival, Monday night drew generous praise from adjudicator Graham Suter. It was performed by the University Alumnae Dramatic Club of Toronto.

Mr. Suter said the Fry play, directed by Sterndale Bennett, was a difficult one but not beyond the powers of the group.

He said the general level of the work of the cast was good.

The festival continues tonight with the Oshawa Little Theatre's production of "Laburnum Grove" by J. B. Priestley.

Finally Quits Moscow

Emergency Landing

BAYFIELD (CP) — A Harvard training plane was forced by engine trouble to make an emergency landing in a farmer's field Monday. The pilot, Flight Cadet David Hudson, 18, of Alberta escaped with a shaking up and damage to the plane was slight.

Disaster Seen By Textile Men Blame Low Tariffs, High Wages

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's textile men, who describe 1953 as a black year, aren't optimistic about 1954.

G. Blair Gordon, president of the Dominion Textile Company, in an article in The Gazette's annual commercial review, says industry is headed for disaster unless the federal government helps it.

"Short of an earnest desire by the federal government to see a continuing textile industry in Canada, implemented by the necessary repairs to the tariff and regulations, it is hard to see what effective moves can be made to alter the present course of events," he says.

Shortage of orders has forced many Canadian textile plants to lay off workers or close. Others are working a three- or four-day week.

Recalling that the industry has weathered crises in the past, Mr. Gordon says "the steps which could be taken in former years to meet adverse conditions are no longer feasible."

"Costs of production, dominated by wage rates, are almost inflexible, and the rate of operation which represents the break-even point is much higher than in the past.

"Companies can now incur heavy losses very quickly, and even those with strong balance sheets soon find themselves in a financial strait-jacket where their cash resources are all tied up in inventory or have been dissipated in operating losses."

Mr. Gordon puts the blame for the industry's plight on lower tariffs introduced from 1935 onwards and "desperate efforts of foreign sources to move goods into the Canadian market, often at distress prices."

Higher wages, more than tripled since 1939, and increased non-production costs, such as fringe benefits and holidays with pay, have also made the companies' position more difficult, he says.

Our Zestful Prosperity

The New York Times calls Canada's prosperity, zest and material expansion a "bright spot" in the world today. "There isn't a country in the world with a long-term future as rosy as that of Canada". In Australia the Sydney Sun-Herald holds Canada as an example of the "dazzling prospect" which could be Australia's, to become a "top-rank nation" as Canada is.

* * *

This cheerful praise is based on solid facts of the Canadian economy and position. The firm of Dun and Bradstreet of Canada has prepared a chart of "Trends in the Canadian Economy, 1946-1953" which graphically shows how Canada has achieved its brightness. Here are some facts illustrated in the chart.

Population growth—12,292,000 in 1946, 14,781,000 last year.

Output and Income: Gross National Product—$12 billion in 1946, $24 billion estimated in 1953. Industrial production (100 being the 1935-39 average)— less than 200 in 1946, more than 250 in 1953. Farm income—little more than $250 million at the beginning of 1946, nearly $750 million at the beginning of 1953 (It is lower than $750 million now.) Oil production—643,000 barrels a month in 1946, 5,564,000 mid-way through 1953.

* * *

Employment and Wages: About 4½ millions employed in 1946, about 5½ millions in 1953. Some 3½ per cent of the total labour force was unemployed at the beginning of 1946, less than 2½ per cent was unemployed on the average last year. (The rate has increased somewhat in recent weeks.) Average weekly wages—in services, $30 in 1946, approaching $40 in 1953; in manufacturing, a little more than $30 in 1946, $60 in 1953; in mining, under $40 in 1946, approaching $70 in 1953.

* * *

Business Activity and Prices: Annual retail sales in 1946, a little more than $5 billion; approaching an estimated $10 in 1953. The Consumer Price Index rose in the same period from 75 (100 being the 1949 rate) to 115, while the wholesale price index rose from under 70 to a peak of more than 120 in 1951, from which it had receded by the middle of last year to a little over 110. In 1946 there were about 180,000 businesses in operation in Canada; last year there were an estimated 240,000.

* * *

The final graph on the chart shows the state of federal finances from 1946. That year began with large deficits, the legacy of war spending. From 1947 to 1950 there were very substantial surpluses, and from 1950 to the present there have been surpluses, though not great ones relative to the budget. Government spending declined from about $5 billion at the beginning of 1946 to two billion in 1949, since when it has been steadily rising, now beyond $4 billion.

* * *

What do all these figures show? That Canada has nothing to fear in her own economic fabric. The progress has been well founded. It will not easily be turned back. Last year was the most prosperous in Canadian history and the Department of Trade and Commerce sees no cause for gloom in the present year. The New York Times comment is this: "Canada's economy is so buoyant and expansive that nothing short of an American slump could hurt the country badly".

A Personal Protest

Mr. Yehudi Menuhin, we read, refuses to do any further travelling by airplane, as a protest against the lack of radar on all flight craft. The reason for his refusal is interesting and, we think, admirable; he says that a great many people of unusual abilities and unsual value to mankind travel by plane, and that the risk of their lives which is created by a lack of radar is unnecessary; he refuses to travel by plane not because he sets unusual value upon his own skin, but because he is a world-famous figure, and he hopes that his personal protest will call attention to the lack of safety which still persists in air travel. All people who travel by plane—famous or not—deserve more protection than they now receive.

Of course, the safety precautions taken by airlines vary greatly. Some lines, of which Trans-Canada is one, have fine safety records. But there are other lines, some of them famous and wealthy, which have not good records. It certainly seems that if radar were standard equipment on all aircraft disastrous accidents might be lessened in number.

During the past few months there have been several serious plane crashes, in which people whom the world could ill spare have been killed. Indeed, the least celebrated victim of a crash is mourned by many people, and is entitled to the utmost possible degree of safety. But it is the famous names which excite most indignation. On Sunday last a BOAC jet plane swooped to ruin in the Mediterranean, and among the passengers was Chester Wilmot, a fine journalist and a [illegible] friend of many Canadians. We shall never think of jet travel again without thinking of him.

Whether radar is the solution or not [illegible] that air travel is still risky, and that there are safeguards which many passenger planes do not carry. This appears to us to be a matter which might well be discussed in UN, and in which the power of UN could be of value to mankind.

What Of Victoria?

Where have the predictions gone that the climate of Canada was changing for the better—that is, growing warmer? In the Canadian Press's cross-country tally of temperatures the west coast was bravely upheld as the warmest spot in Canada. Even there the showing was not gentle: 32 at Vancouver, 35 at Prince Rupert. In that wet air temperatures at freezing point or two degrees above are not the pleasantest, even if there is sun. We were not told whether the sun shone, so presume that it did not, since the West Coast is always ready at the drop of an Eastern thermometer to parade its own sun and heat.

There was a noticeable gap in the C. P. West Coast survey—not a word about Victoria's temperature. Was it so scandously low that silence was preferable to honesty? We are not unaware that B.C. —particularly Victoria—is being nationally advertised now as the summery place to take a winter holiday. Our bet is that all the roses froze last week-end in Victoria, and Victorians took to snowshoes, but did not let a whisper of it reach the outside world.

Pay At Hollinger

The informant from Northern Ontario on whom we relied when we stated recently that some gold miners there earned as much as five and six thousand dollars a year are proved wrong by detailed figures which we have just seen, issued by the Hollinger company. The scale which went into effect there in January, 1952, and which was the one in force at the time of the strike, shows hourly wage rates as low as 97½ cents, and few higher than $1.42. On the 48-hour week the weekly earnings would amount to $68.16. This would be basic rate, not counting bonus payments. Some workers might earn as much as $4,000; none $6,000. Under settlement terms now arranged, the minimum basic rates are increased five cents an hour.

We wish to make this correction in the interests of accuracy. In their own interests, it would seem that the gold miners in those areas who wish higher pay should go elsewhere and into other kinds of mining (iron, for instance, where the pay is high), for the gold mining industry is depressed and some of the old mines themselves are petering out.

Italian Troubles

Italy is being buffeted from within and without. The sea is hurling destruction at the Po River delta, breaking dykes and flooding villages. And within is the spectacle of wobbly government. At the last elections Premier de Gasperi failed to get enough support to continue in office. The premiership went to Giuseppe Pella. Senor Pella has had to resign after only a few months in office, and there has been a rift in his own party.

Neither of these troubles in unfamiliar. Canadians who spent the winter of 1944 in Italy know what flooding is like in the valley of the Po; and all of us are unquietly aware of the spectre of teetering governments in Europe. France is the ill-starred prototype. Is Italy now involved in the same sort of recurring governmental crises? With the Christian Democrat party split, de Gasperi ill, Pella rejected, who else or what other party has the strength to form a steady government in Italy?

Which Is Biggest?

Almost since the beginning of Canadian time, Montreal has been our largest city. But last year plans were completed to make a metropolis of Toronto, and the metropolitan giant came into official existence the first of this year. Did it thus become Canada's largest city — a place of a million and a quarter people? Was Montreal, formerly our only city of a million, thereby relegated to second place?

Toronto must not count its chickens before they — well, before it counts Montreal heads. According to the new Lovell's City Directory of Montreal, that city proper has now a population of 1,516,795; including its suburbs, the city ("Greater Montreal") is said by the same authority to have 1,781,420 people. Can Toronto, greater or lesser, beat that? Not very likely: the city's proper population is now the lowest is has been since 1941—only 665,602.

Travel Hints –New Style

By SIR MILES THOMAS
(Chairman, British Overseas Airways Corporation)

WHEN I landed in Pernambuco a nautical gentleman, whose complexion seemed a corrugated compost of sunburn, rich haemoglobin and [illegible]ld, "But it can't be you. I've just heard you speaking on the wireless in London." The more I explained about [illegible] transmissions [illegible] time, the sunset, the more puzzled he looked. "Took me three weeks to get here. It's very confusing," he said.

✧ ✧ ✧

HE WAS RIGHT. This modern travelling is confusing. Eating is a problem. If, when one's own unaltered wristwatch says 4.30 a.m., one is offered a plate of mottled, fat jambon in French West Africa en route for Rio, is it an early breakfast or a snack to ward off night-starvation? There are still several westward hours of darkness to come. My policy is usually to eat the offering—little and frequent is a good gastronomic motto, when on the move.

✧ ✧ ✧

THIS developing jet-age will add still further to our confusion. At Gander, that bleak but hospitable airfield in Newfoundland, which is the first and last port of call for most North Atlantic operations, there is a bar called the "Big Dipper," and the licensing hours are odd. We once landed there from England at what seemed near lunchtime to us, and so dallied briefly at the Dipper. My wife found to her great confusion that she was taking a dry martini before breakfast— a confusion made profound when the waitress asked whether she would like her fried eggs "shut eye" or "sunny side up." We ultimately found the choice was for frying on both sides or one.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN NEW YORK it used to be not uncommon to see well-barbered but glassy-eyed Britishers fighting a losing battle with sleep at an evening party given in their welcome. By New York time it was perhaps 8 p.m. By their stomach time it was 2 a.m. on the following day. Wise travellers learn to take to the mattress immediately on arrival at their hotel, even if the local time is high noon.

✧ ✧ ✧

THE transatlantic Comet will probably get to New York at about the same local time as it leaves London. Then we shall have the interesting sight of British business men or diplomats uninterrupted on both sides of the Atlantic, albeit bereft of five or six hours' current sleep. They will do a morning's work in London: an afternoon's work in New York. That is, unless the morning is wasted getting to London Airport and the afternoon occupied getting from Idlewild to Manhattan.

✧ ✧ ✧

IN the reverse direction —say from Hollywood to New York— the jet-borne traveller will arive fresh as paint, to find the people who met him just on the point of going to bed. He will have the mortification of putting his watch on by five or six hours and a feeling of flaming youth wasted.

✧ ✧ ✧

MY SOLUTION to this confusion is to wear two watches one that is never altered from British time— the other suitably twirled at intervals to take account of local variations. With a little practice one can train one's internal economy to react accordingly. But only by eating— and, of course, drinking— little and often, and taking sleep whenever and wherever possible.

✧ ✧ ✧

SOME enthusiast has suggested that there should be one time the world over. The only people who are likely to tolerate this treatment, other than Britishers, would be those in Kamchatka and possibly the Marshall Island, but even then their p.m. would be our a.m. And to ask Indians or Americans to have their dawn to dusk happenings at times more usually associated with mid-day or midnight would be making confusion worse confounded for them.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT IS MUCH more realistic to suppose that travellers will continue to be expected to adjust themselves to local conditions, rather than vice versa. Let me give a hint or two. If ever you find yourself out of phase with your surroundings, due to your stomach-time being at variance with the local clocks, try a glass of milk. It has a wonderfully soothing effect. Or if you simply must keep awake to avoid social disgrace, seek temporary solitude, sit in a low chair and put your head between your knees as near as possible for half a minute. It relieves that giddy sensation and recharges the battery for another hour.

✧ ✧ ✧

THERE ARE two fundamental facts to remember when travelling globally. Flying westwards one is apt to get hungry because intervals between mealtimes are longer; the eastbound traveller is literally flying into food — and so tends to overeat. The secret of airborne serenity is to eat simply; exciting aperitifs interspersed with panic aperients are no substitute for plain cooking.

✧ ✧ ✧

THERE IS another factor besides time that has to be taken into account. This year, particularly, the weather of the world seems to have gone adrift. Whether it is because of atomic explosions, peripatetic flying saucers, microtelevision waves or some other man-made phenomena I know not. But I am acutely aware that in July in Central Africa I shivered deplorably while watching H.M. the Queen Mother graciously open the Rhodes Centenary Exhibition in a setting that was meant to cope with a broiling sun; in what should have been springtime in Rio de Janeiro, low clouds and a dirty Scotch mist grounded an air demonstration; the day before Sir Winston Churchill recently arrived in "sunny" Bermuda there was 3½ in. of rain; yet two days later I mingled on the sidewalks of New York with Christmas Shopping crowds sans overcoat, hat or even what the Americans call a vest.

✧ ✧ ✧

HOW to maintain sartorial defence against this unpredictable pattern of world climate is admittedly a problem — especially on a 66 lb. luggage allowance. My recipe is a basic foundation of medium-weight underwear, a shirt with collar attached so that it can be worn open-necked, flannel bags and sports coat, a double-breasted raincoat and a sweater. With that and some stout shoes one can ring the changes between tropical heat and near-Arctic conditions. It happily leaves most of the allowance weight available for dinner jacket, formal lounge suit and the like. And we travellers to-day thank St. Christopher that twenty-four-hour laundry service is almost back on a world-wide basis. Which is indeed a traveller's boon.

Canada Forges Ahead

(NEW YORK TIMES)

CANADA'S prosperity, zest and material expansion provide a bright spot in the world today. One gets a positive glow of pleasure in the contemplation of a young nation coming to a rich maturity so quickly and honorably. To see such progress in a nation devoted to democracy and free enterprise is a double satisfaction.

The New Year should be a happy one, but that will partly depend on us. Canada is linked like a Siamese twin to the United States. It is inevitable that Canadian prices should have to adjust themselves to the price levels of the far greater American market. Canada's indutrialization has been phenomenal, but her exports are still predominantly in raw materials, and the United States now takes a larger percentage of them than Great Britain. It is estimated that about 25 per cent of American cash exports go to Canada. American investments over the border are now in the neighborhood of $8,000,000,000 and are rising at the rate of $500,000,000 a year.

Finally, there is the effect on Canada of America's trade and tariff policies. We forced Canada recently to cut her exports of oats to the United States by two-thirds. Like Latin America, Canada is threatened by the pressure on the Eisenhower Administration to dump commodity surpluses and to protect American producers of some raw materials that are now superabundant.

Canada's economy is so buoyant and expansive that nothing short of an American slump could hurt the country badly. It is true to say, as a dispatch to this newspaper did yesterday, that "there isn't a country in the world with a long-term future as rosy as that of Canada." There is only one other nation in the Western Hemisphere with equal potentialities to become a world power. That is Brazil, which has the advantage of a population of 55,000,000, compared to Canada's 15,000,000, but which is squandering ing her wonderful possibilities in political weakness and economic improvidence. Some day Brazil will certainly fulfill her great promise, but in the meanwhile it is Canada that is showing how a "new" economy can and should be developed.

The United States has more than natural goodwill in desiring to see the continued prosperity of Canada. Our security and our prosperity are linked indissolubly with Canada's.

Government's Role In Depression

(Windsor Star)

The best insurance against a depression is that governments, particularly on this continent, just could not permit such a one as that of the 1930's to occur. People would demand, and rightly, effective action be taken to avert it. Governments would have to heed that demand.

In some countries, such as the United Kingdom, which are susceptible to world economic trends, there probably is a limit to what governments can do. That doesn't apply to the United States, where the government can command tremendous resources. The economy of Canada is tied in closely with that of the United States and we have our own vast resources.

This thought emerges from the statement of President Dwight D. Eisenhower, who says: "Every legitimate means available to the federal government that can be used to sustain that prosperity is being used and will continue to be used as necessary. This administration believes that we must not and need not tolerate a boom-and-bust America."

The War That Never Ends

(Mount Vernon, N.Y., Argus)

Loss of life in traffic accidents must be reduced, for it is a national disgrace. It is the war that never ends.

The Korean war lasted 37 months; American casualties were 142,000; of these about 25,000 were fatalities. Yet in the same time according to the Lumberman's Mutual Casualty Co., there were 4,200,000 automobile casualties in the United States, and of these about 115,000 were fatalities—almost five times as many as caused by war!

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

And Moses called all Israel and said unto them, Hear, O Israel, the status and judgments which I speak in your ears this day, that ye may learn them, and keep, and do them . . . Ye shall walk in all the ways which the Lord your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess. (Duet 5:1, 33.)

✧ ✧ ✧

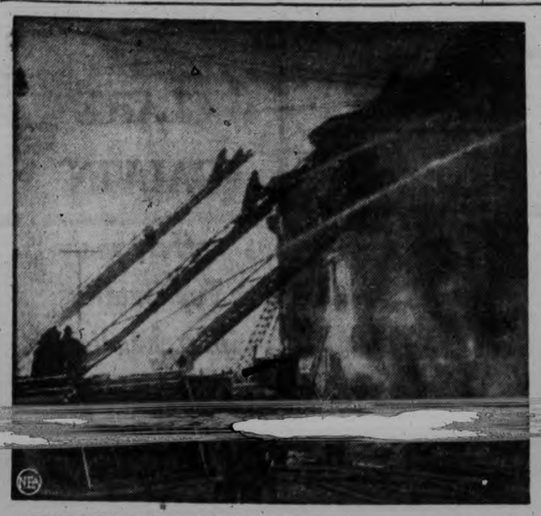
And thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee these forty years in the wilderness, to humble thee, and to prove to thee, to know what was in thine heart, whether thou wouldest keep his commandments, or no. And he humbled thee, and suffered thee to hunger, and fed thee with manna, which thou knewest not, neither did thy fathers know; that he might make thee know that man doth not live by bread only, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord doth man live. (Duet. 8:2, 3.)

What Starts The Horrors?

(Quarterly Journal of Studies On Alcohol)

The question of exactly what sort of event triggers the start of delirium tremens has been debated for a long time. One school of thought holds that this dramatic psychosis is launched when an alcoholic suddenly stops drinking. But K. M. Bowman, H. Wortis and S. Keiser have pointed out an early stage of this disorder which takes place before the appearance of the gross symptoms that even laymen can recognize as D.T.'s. In this preliminary stage the alcoholic often feels a disgust for liquor and cannot drink. Thus he is abstinent for a few days before the clearly recognized signs of the disorder set in, and this has led to the supposition that the stopping of drinking caused the delirium tremens.

Most investigators agree that any severe physical stress, such as a head injury or an infection, is likely to set off delirium tremens in an alcoholic weakened by a long drinking bout. M. Levin (New York) has recently reported two case histories in which the full-fledged signs of delirium tremens appeared 3 days after the patients were admitted to the hospital. Levin suggests that in the period just before this psychosis starts, the highest centres of the brain are unable to cope wtih the simplest disturbances. Anything of any unfamiliar nature may then upset these nerve centres completely. Being brought and admitted to the hospital, the strange surroundings, the new faces, may be a severe burden on the patient's ability to adapt. This could cause the higher nerve centres to break down in their ability to function, thus starting the outbreak of the acute delirium. He recommends, therefore, that physicians who observe an alcoholic on the verge of delirium tremens should not rush him to a hospital but try, if at all possible, to keep him at home. In any case the patient should be shielded from anything that might puzzle or bewilder him, even too frequent change of nurses or attendants.



ONE DEAD IN $100,000 FIRE—Firemen on aerial ladders battle a general alarm fire that swept a row of wooden tenement buildings at Revere, Mass. One person died in the fire and 40 others were forced to flee their homes. Damage was estimated at $100,000.

Apartment House Quarrel Aired In Court

Claims Bottles, Coal Block Passageway To Bathroom

About 200 pounds of chunky man climbed the stairs from his downstairs apartment to get to the communal bathroom. He stumbled over a row of bottles and a sack of coal. This made him just a little annoyed so he started to play football with the coal and bottles.

A slightly-built woman, about 5 feet 2 inches in height, took exception to the noise and the added fact that the coal and bottles belonged to her. She threatened to throw the man down the stairs and to back up her argument she menaced him first with a hammer and then a knife.

This was the text of an apartment house quarrel which came before Magistrate Philp, QC, in court Monday, when Doris Robichaud, of 367 Rogers St., charged 56-year-old laborer, Earl Lowe, of the same address, with assault. She alleged that Lowe had pushed her over her small daughter in a free-for-all that had followed the coal and bottles episode.

Mrs. Robichaud told the court that the sack of coal and about seven or eight milk bottles were in the passage of her apartment. Admittedly they were near the door of the bathroom that Lowe used, but she could not agree with his allegation that he had to climb over them to get into the bathroom.

When the ruckus started she had thought to "scare him" with a hammer. He had wrenched off the head of the hammer, so she had taken up a knife, again just to "scare him."

He had then come into her kitchen and pushed her over. She had phoned police while Lowe made a hasty exit for the street.

OTHER QUARRELS

When Lowe started his cross-examination of Mrs. Robichaud he did not restrict himself to questions and in quick time both he and the witness were reminiscing in loud voices about numerous other quarrels which had nothing to do with the assault case. Magistrate Philp brought them to order.

Lowe then alleged that every time he had gone to Mrs. Robichaud to ask something or other she had threatened to throw him down the stairs. The mental picture of the slightly-built witness throwing Lowe anywhere was too much for the crowded court and deputy police chief John Naples had to call loudly for order before being heard above the laughter.

Continuing with his cross-examination, Lowe asked Mrs. Robichaud if she knew how far it was from her kitchen door to the door of the bathroom.

Mrs. Robichaud: "I don't know. If I say something, you'll only say something else." Then, turning to the magistrate, added: "I can't see why I have to stand here and chew it over with him."

Magistrate Philp: "You must make an attempt to answer his questions while you are in the witness box."

In defence, Lowe said that he could not obtain access to the bathroom because of the clutter of coal and milk bottles. He denied ever being inside witness's kitchen or pushing her.

Taxed by Magistrate Philp, Lowe admitted that he might have given her a little push.

"Would you let a fellow stick you with a knife?" he asked the magistrate.

Magistrate: "I'm not answering questions—you are."

After listening to evidence by accused's wife, Alice Lowe, the magistrate dismissed the charge, but warned Mrs. Robichaud that next time she was bothered by Lowe she should ring the police and not pick up any weapons such as hammers and knives.

Wait Decision On Comic Books At Kitchener

GUELPH (CP)—Distributors of literature in Ontario are awaiting the decision of Magistrate Frederic Watt in relation to a charge against the Kitchener News Company of unlawfully distributing certain types of comics in Guelph.

Charges against the five local dealers of displaying, distributing or offering for sale undesirable comics [illegible] definite [illegible] Magistrate Watt reserved judgment on the charge against the Kitchener company.

After evidence had been taken in the charge against the Kitchener firm, Crown Attorney J. M. Kearns suggested that all the other cases, along the same line, should be let stand until his worship gives his decision in the other charge.

ONE BOOK CONSIDERED

Only one of the numerous comic books seized by city police Dec. 3 was considered in court Monday. Detective-Sergeant Robert McCarron gave an outline of the stories contained in it.

Defence Counsel Brown went over the book page by page and had the officer say which pictures appeared to depict the commission of a crime. The final count was 45 out of the 170.

Mr. Brown said he believed the court would be doing a disservice to find the book illegal.

Says Foremen Used As Link

BRANTFORD (CP) — Foremen are a link between management and workers, T. A. Rice, of Hamilton, second vice-president of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, said Monday night.

In an address prepared for delivery to the Brantford Foremen's Club, Mr. Rice stated:

"You know that management and labor are really working for the same ends—that what will benefit one will benefit the other.

"However, there is a breach between management and labor which, for the sake of prosperity, must be narrowed to a minimum. You are the men who can best narrow it, not to a minimum, but right out of existence."

Mr. Rice said Canada faces a shortage of skilled labor and advocated that it be overcome both by immigration and education.

Committee Meetings Barred To Press

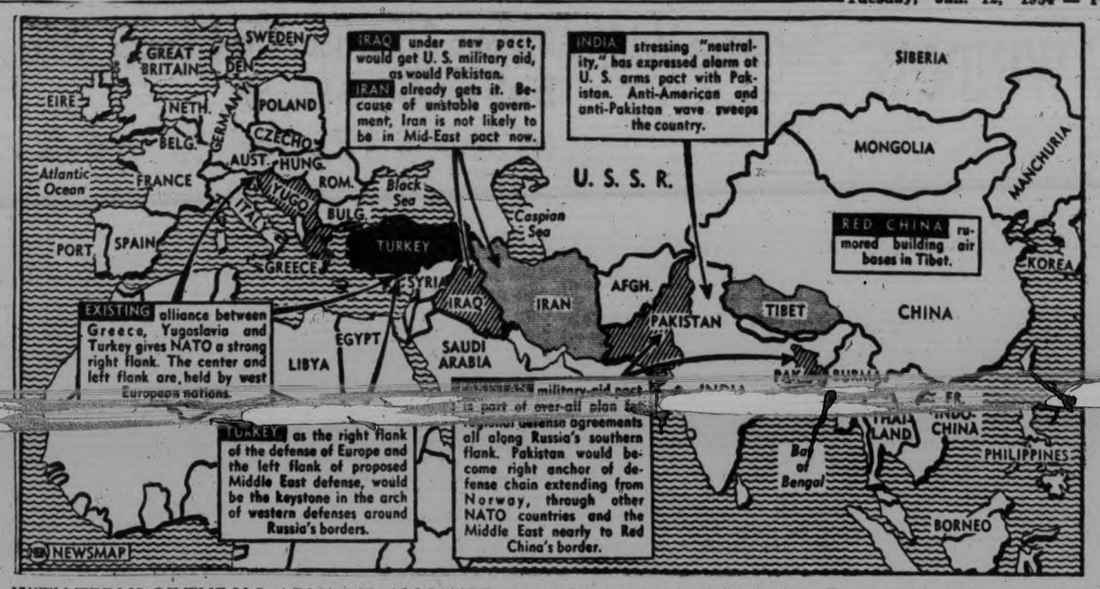
KITCHENER (CP) — Waterloo township council, following its inaugural session Monday, decided to bar the press from all committee meetings. The council passed a motion authorizing the clerk to prepare a bylaw excluding the press from committee sessions.

Through last year, council was under fire periodically for holding secret committee meetings.

The motion was placed before council by Deputy Reeve Burton. At the inaugural session earlier the deputy reeve emphasized the need of conducting business "in an above-board straightforward manner."

Licences To Be Changed

TORONTO (CP)—Six numbers, instead of the present limit of five numbers and letters, will be used on Ontario licence plates in 1955, Highways Minister Doucett said Monday. He said due to the great increase in motor vehicles—which now number more than 1,400,000 in Ontario—the present combinations will not cover all vehicles.



WITH TERMS OF THE U.S. ARMS AID ALLIANCE with Pakistan practically agreed upon, U.S. diplomats are seeking similar mutual defence pacts with Turkey, Iran, Saudi Arabia, Lebanon and Syria. Aim is to build up strong defences along Russia's strategic southern frontier. Iran and Turkey are already receiving military aid. The existing Greece-Yugoslavia-Turkey alliance bolsters the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's right flank in Europe and protects the Mediterranean Sea. As map above shows, the sought-for Pakistan-Middle East project could do the same for the Middle East, Suez, the Red Sea and the Indian Ocean. The proposed regional mutual defence pacts, with American military aid, would close the long, dangerously open gap in the free world's defence.

Mrs. Harry Morgan was chosen delegate to the Peterborough Presbyterial to be held in St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Peterborough, January 13. Gumball Machine Found On Erskine Ave.

Someone, with either a taste for gum or a yearning for a few easy coppers, took a penny gumball machine from the business area and left it lying in a ditch on Erskine Ave. They managed to shatter the glass container and spread the gumballs about, but when Detective Farthing examined the machine he found $4.50 had not been taken.

Detectives had not discovered by Monday afternoon where the machine came from, but they guessed that the thief had left it lying in the ditch after being disturbed by a passing motorist. Meanwhile, investigators are chewing over all possible clues.

Men Outnumbered

TORONTO (CP) — Women outnumber men by 40,000 in metropolitan Toronto, the area's planning department said Monday. Officials estimated the population of the metropolitan area as upwards of 1,250,000—roughly 645,000 women and 605,000 men. The area was formed by federation of the city of Toronto with 12 of its suburbs.

Trial Of 27 Paper Corporations Gets Under Way In Toronto

TORONTO (CP)—The trial of 27 corporations and two persons on combines charges in the fine paper industry started Monday. Lawyers said it may last two months.

At the opening, Norman L. Mathews, special crown prosecutor, said he believes many documents and files were deliberately destroyed in an effort to reduce or eliminate the possibility of prosecution.

He said some exhibits contain such phrases as "destroy letter regarding price," "we have been particularly careful not to give any incriminating evidence," "omit any reference indicating arrangement on prices," "files should be cleaned up at once," and "please destroy this letter."

The crown plans to present at least 3,300 exhibits.

The seven fine paper mills and 20 wholesale merchants are charged with conspiring to fix prices during the period from 1933 to Oct. 31, 1952, at the manufacturing and wholesale level.

MAXIMUM FINES

Because they were charged under an old section, since revised to allow for unlimited fines and a maximum of two years in jail, Mr. Mathews said the maximum fines in the case, if convictions are registered, will be $4,000 for individuals and $10,000 for corporations.

The seven mills charged are the Alliance Paper Mills, Merriton, Howard Smith Paper Mills Ltd., Canada Paper Company, and Rolland Paper Company Ltd., all of Montreal, the E. B. Eddy Company, Hull, Que., and the Don Valley Paper Company Ltd. and Provincial Paper Ltd., both of Toronto.

The merchants charged are Barber-Ellis of Canada Ltd., Toronto; Barber-Ellis of Montreal Ltd.; Brown Bros. Ltd., Toronto; Buntin, Gillies and Co. Ltd., Hamilton; Buntin Reid Paper Company Ltd., Toronto; Canada Paper Wholesale Ltd., Toronto; Fine Papers (London) Ltd., London; W. J. Gage and Co. Ltd., Toronto; Fred W. Planning Theatre Exhibit For Stratford Festival

STRATFORD (CP)—Plans for a theatre exhibit showing the developments of the theatre from early days to the present and including the Stratford stage have been announced by Cecil Clarke, artistic director of the Stratford Shakespearean Festival of Canada Foundation.

The exhibit, which will be shown during the 1954 festival starring James Mason, was approved Sunday night by the board of governors of the festival.

It was arranged by Richard Southern, theatre research expert of London, England, and Kenneth Rae, secretary of the International Theatre Institute in Europe.

Another part of the exhibit will consist of the work of theatrical designers, including Tanya Moiseiwitch's original designs for the 1953 and 1954 productions.

John Anderson, campaign fund chairman, announced that a campaign to raise $120,000 to be used as working capital and for changes in the Stratford theatre, will be launched Feb. 1. The proposed changes include the installation of an air-changing system for the tent and the removal of inside tent poles.

The $157,000 raised last year provided enough funds for the erection of the concrete theatre, tent, seats, stage and other facilities, Mr. Anderson said.

The revenue from the 1953 season paid for practically all the production expenses.

Third Offender Given Three Months In Jail

Appearing before Magistrate W. R. Philp, QC, in court Monday on a third offence of being intoxicated in a public place, John Thompson, 24 Bell Ave., was sentenced to three months' definite and one month indefinite imprisonment.

For having liquor in a place other than his residence, George Dicken, of Toronto, was fined $15, costs $2.50. A charge of being intoxicated cost him $10, costs $2.50.

Frank Edwards, RR 4, Peterborough, was fine $10, costs $2, for being intoxicated in a public place.

Stresses Need For Preventive Visual Treatment

Mr. Rose stressed that preventive measures in treating visual [illegible] more important [illegible] wider application today than if ever had.

He credited discoveries by Canadian and United States armed forces during the last war with advancing visual training more in the last 15 years than it has advanced in the last 100.

Dr. N. C. Kephart, associate professor of industrial psychology at Purdue University, said a worker with visual deficiency who gets help from an optometrist can improve his efficiency by up to 10 per cent.

Dr. Leo Manas, associate professor of optometry at the Chicago College of Optometry, told the 125 delegates how defects can be detected in early stages and give corrective treatment.

He said eye examinations must begin early in life as heavy reading loads are put upon children in school and time is spent during the child's day watching television.

Press Relations At Berlin Will Require New Technique

By WILLIAM CLARK

LONDON, England — (OFNS) — One of the problems which is now being seriously considered in Whitehall is how to handle the publicity of the forthcoming Foreign Ministers' conference in Berlin. It is expected that about one thousand journalists and radio and television reporters will be on hand, and the sheer weight of numbers is causing a certain amount of concern.

It is now recognized in official circles in London that the publicity arrangements at the Bermuda talks were not successful. Pressmen were kept at a distance from the delegates, and the daily joint press conference consisted of a dry cliche or two agreed to by all three powers. As a result the press was angry, and a large number of undeniable rumours received wide publicity.

If this technique were to be followed in Berlin, there is a danger of which officials here are fully aware, that the rumours which would be started could be gravely damaging to Western unity. Berlin is a city which lends itself to rumours, and the presence of a large number of unidentified Communist agents in the city would make it easy for Russia to plant propaganda stories in reputable Western circles.

STRAIGHTFORWARD POLICY

The expected course of the conference also adds to the danger of the situation. The Western powers intend to insist that the unification of Germany can take place only after free elections have been held in all four zones. This is a simple and straightforward policy which was fully agreed at Bermuda, and worked out in detail by the Western officials who met in Paris just before Christmas.

But it is difficult to make this proposal glamorous, or to dress it up as a news item more than once. So the danger is that Russia will simply reject the idea, but will delay, and offer several counter-suggestions, until the original firm Western proposal is overlaid by weeks of negotiation and discussion. Then the Russians could produce —with appropriate publicity—their conference plan; if the Western nations had once more to insist on their original proposal, they would be in some danger of being branded as obstructionist and unbending.

TWO COURSES

There are two ways of dealing with this situation, but each has its disadvantage. One is to announce the Western terms firmly and publicly before the conference begins; but this may be interpreted—particularly in France — as unaccommodating behaviour, and as showing an unyielding determination not to meet Russia's views. The other method is to expose this Foreign Ministers' meeting to the same limelight that was cast on earlier post-war meetings in the series. In that case it is difficult to see how any negotiation can take place.

No decision has yet been taken, but it will be a pointer to the nature of the conference, when it is clear how the press is to be treated. If the W [illegible] is feeling cautious and afraid of Russian wiles, there will be extensive official leaks of each day's proceedings. If there is more confidence and hope of real bargaining, then there will be less information and probably "closed meetings," which only the four Ministers and their advisers will attend.

GIVEN HIGH HONOR—It's back to the budget box and affairs financial for Britain's Richard A. Butler, Chancellor of the Exchequer, who was acting prime minister of England during the illness last summer of Sir Winston Churchill. In recognition of this service, he was made a member of the Order of Companions of Honor, an exclusive Commonwealth body limited to 65 members. Mr. Butler now is in Sydney, Australia, for a meeting of Commonwealth finance ministers.

A Canadian Press story on Saturday entitled "Sport Gimmicks Back in Style This Season" dealt with various angles used by hockey coaches to ice winning teams. Hamilton Cubs tried a hypnotist to relax players and get 'em in a winning mood. New York Rangers last winter tried a bubbly non-alcoholic drink for pucksters to give them drive. Toronto St. Michael's of the OHA junior "A" group right now are using a new formula, called HPS60. It's a protein supplement. Taken with milk, the mixture is reported by club officials to have "dramatic results" on lagging players. And certainly St. Mike's are doing okay in the present heated junior race.

It might interest Coaches Ed Redmond of the TPT-ers and [illegible]

A Wander Co. here is the sole maker of this secret formula known as HPS60. In a talk with the company manager, G. E. Goldsmith, yesterday we learned something of it. Mr. Goldsmith says it is a very high protein supplement, two and a half times as strong as skimmed milk, the powder (a tablespoon to a glass of milk) working rapidly to replace worn-out tissue and build up energy. Especially valuable for folks lacking in proteins. A. Wander Co. began manufacturing it for rundown returned men at the end of the war, and now sell it to hospitals across the country. It's also selling in Europe and the States. Good for taking off excess weight, too.

Samples to BE Athletes

The local company is sending samples out to Canadian athletes competing this year in the British Empire Games in British Columbia. According to reports from St. Mike's, tired hockeyists perk up right after a dose of this tasteless ingredient in milk and tear out on the ice again full of energy. Guaranteed to produce this reaction, the Wander Co. manager assures us, and no possible harmful results. In fact the contrary is true. Well, that might be the secret weapon which could drive our OHA teams through to championships this season, eh? It ought to be worth a try, anyway. Matter of fact, we'll give it a try, too. After all, sports scribes get rundown, also, during winter months.

Junior Petes journey to Lindsay tonight to tackle the second-place Scugog squad in what promises to be a keen scrap. Then Midland plays the Creighton crew here on the morrow. Presently, our juniors are swinging in the canary's perch atop the heap, with Lindsay next and Port Perry not far off the pace in third slot. A lively scramble among these three teams, with Collingwood and Midland further back. Robert the Red insists that this is the best junior club to represent Peterborough in hockey since pre-war days when boys like Tompkins, Kingdon, Heal, Starr, Crowe, Harding, etc., were breaking into the OHA limelight. He could be right, at that. Plenty of talent aboard the 1953-54 junior team.

The 43-year-old sports announcer, well-known to listeners at World Series times and at many outstanding USA sports events, is a talented talker and should be interesting to hear at this dinner where he will probably touch on international sports. Mel broadcasts Yankees' games, Rose Bowl classics, Kentucky Derby, etc., does newsreels, lectures for the Cancer Fund, and so on. Quite a fellow.

City and district natural-ice rinks should be okay for a spell now after this decidedly cold wave. It's been a bit of a snapper all right, though we can recall playing shinny one night years ago when the mercury dipped to 35 below! 'Twas only 10 degrees higher than that seven or eight years ago when we covered a tilt in Haliburton — the night Monty drew a suspension for clobbering a lumberjack fan who picked on the wrong player to grab by the boards. Got stuck going to a Campbellford playoff one bitter night, also, and arrived halfway through the game too cold to hold a pencil. Nearly perished in a breakdown up by Fenelon Falls another frigid eve. Yes, the puck trail is a cold one. No wonder we wear that frost-bitten look the year around.

Millbrook Outlasts Bethany To Win 11-3

The season's first encounter between Bethany and Millbrook ended in an easy 11-3 victory for Millbrook. The first half of the game was evenly contested but Bethany, a bit shy in both condition and reinforcements, wilted badly to let Millbrook run in six goals without a reply. However, there is nothing wrong with the Bethany team that won't correct itself before the season is over.

The Millbrook marksmen were Wright with four; Lun, three; Batley, two; and Ginn and Smith. For Bethan it was Brown, Burn and McGill.

Bethany: Rosenberg, Burn, Rowan, Fallis, E. Brown, N. Brown, Pomeroy, K. Gillis, Smith, McGill, Sinclair.

Petes Unable To Stand Off Belleville Attack In Second Period, Lose 6-5

BELLEVILLE—(Special)—Roaring from behind to erase a first-period three-goal deficit, the Belleville Memos crashed back to score five goals without a return and eventually edge the Peterborough Petes 6-5 in a thrill packed Senior "B" battle here Monday night. The Memos spotted the Petes three goals in the first heat with the score standing at 4-1 going into the second frame. Then the homesters, with Rolly Sarrault replacing Don Barclay in the nets struck back savagely. They scored three goals in five minutes plus [illegible] the period end[illegible] more early in the third period and successfully held off the Petes' desperate bids to snatch victory out of defeat.

Chum Fryia cut the Memos' lead to 6-5 at the eight-minute mark of the final frame and the rest of the heat produced the most thrilling hockey seen here in some time. Penalties crept into the game as the squads cut loose with everything they had and referee Maurice Walsh nearly developed a hitch-hiker thumb.

Duke Doran got the gate at 17:32 and Jud Semark followed him a minute later giving the Petes a two-man advantage. Peter-Jones collected a misconduct and coach Eddie Redmond pulled his goalie giving the Petes a 6-3 edge in manpower up front. Sarrault pelted out everything the Petes threw at him then Ted Degray broke into the clear chased by Redmond. He got his shot away but the puck hit the post. Redmond drew a sentence with 43 seconds to go and again he yanked the goalie. But the Memos defence hurled back everything in sight and the time ran out on the Petes.

The game after a somewhat slow first period developed into a typical Belleville-Petes game with penalties aplenty. The Petes hauled down eleven sentences one of them a misconduct to Peterson who punched referee Walsh after being given a minor. The Memos suffered seven times via the sin-bin, one the Jones misconduct.

Toodie Greenlaw paced the Petes attack with two goals and an assist. Chum Fryia scored another and got a helper with Belisle and Collins getting the rest. Jackie Wardhaugh sniped a pair for the winners with Erwin Duncan, Jake Wade. Ted Degray and Dave Jones accounting for the remainder.

QUICK GOAL

The Petes lost little time getting into the scoring column with Belisle notching a tally at 1:25 on a neat passing play with Peterson and Prentice. Ted Degray got that one back two minutes later when he flipped a hard backhand shot past Donlevy. Toodie Greenlaw put the Petes one up on a three-man combination with Fryia and Leonard then Collins flipped a flukey shot that eluded Don Barclay in the Memos nets to make it 3-1. Greenlaw got his second goal of the period unassisted while Semark was in durance vile.

Sarrault replaced Barclay in the Belleville nets in the second period and the youngster came up with an outstanding effort over the rest of the route. McMaster drew a minor penalty just before the first period ended and the Memos struck savagely. They fired rubber at Donlevy consistently and easily had a margin in territorial play. Goyer and Fryia were in the clear but both missed the goalmouth.

Doug Bastedo's screen shot from well out struck Jack Wardhaugh and ripped into the Petes net to cut the margin to 4-2. McMaster drew a holding penalty and the Memos roared in to the attack. Davy Jones spearheaded a Memos drive with Taylor and MacDonald scoring to whittle the lead to 4-3, Hill got the gate and the Petes were two men short for 20 seconds.

BEATON ON SHOT

Goyer got the gate to even the manpower then Jake Wade's sizzling shot from 30 feet out beat Donlevy cleanly, the Duncan twins were given assists. Peterson tabbed with a misconduct and just before the bell rang, Ed Duncan and Montgomery got the gate for roughing.

Sarrault kicked out Fryia's bid as the last period opened as play swept from end to end. The Memos took the lead for the first time when Edwin Duncan rapped home Jake Wade's neat pass on a ganging attack. Jackie Wardhaugh scored his second goal of the night on a well-executed three-way play with Davy Jones and Bob Taylor to give the Memos a two goal lead. Fryia got that one back a minute later from Greenlaw's pass as the Petes staged a desperation drive to whittle the lead. Then came the penalties and the last minute thrills and that was that.

Loop Getting 'Terrific' Teams

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Shaughnessy, president of the International Baseball League, says that after today the triple A loop wil have "two terrific new teams."

The IL president said today's New York meeting at which Richmond, Va., and Havana, Cuba, will be formally admitted to the league, will be brief.

Shaughnessy re-iterated earlier statements that the clubs already have touched all bases to make their applications successful and all that remains is formal recognition.

Admission of the two teams will bring the league to eight squads, following the dropping out of Springfield Cubs and the moving of Baltimore Orioles to the American League.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see these two teams turn out to be tops in the league," said Shaughnessy.

Highwaymen Triumph 4-0 In Scrappy Set-to Bailieboro and Scott's Corners tangled in a scrappy skirmish that hadn't a dull moment. Scott's Corners won 4-0.

It was a fast all-out go with no pause, and was enlivened by some added action that kept Referees McDowell and Agnew busy prying would-be wrestlers apart. The officials had the bin pretty well tenanted all evening in keeping things under control. Between bouts there was a lot of classy, crowd-pleasing hockey that featured wide open play with fast end-to-end rushes.

Both goalies played outstanding games and had all scoring efforts thwarted until into the third period when Dunn cracked the ice for the initial tally for the Scott's Corners Highwaymen. Once the break came, Seabrook, Dunn and Harris followed with counters.

It was a typical case of the game belonging to the team that got the first one. Heen had to be good on a couple of hard shots to protect his shutout, and he came through with a demonstration that rates him with the best net minders in the league.

Bailieboro — Smith, Halstead, Stock, G. Lingard, M. Lingard, Cook, Lequire, Gray, Prout, Darrah, Sanderson, Clement, Sidey, Rowden, Hunt.

Scott's Corners — Heen, Conroy, Galley, Alberico, Harris, Stevens, Seabrook, Dunn, Little, Laroque, Archibald, Craig, Minnie, Johnston, Dawson.

In the second the margin was maintained with Bryan matching McDowell's goal. At the half way mark in the final canto McDowell and Friar levelled the count but it took Bob Ruth less than a minute to move the Mountaineers out in front again. All Four In Ring

LORD ATHOL LAYTON

All four men will be in the ring together at all times as a special condition of the team wrestling headliner at the Brock Arena on Wednesday night, when the team of Hombre Montana and Ilio DiPaolo will oppose the team of Lord Athol Layton and Fred Atkins.

Atkins and Layton often get an unfair advantage over their opposition by their two-against-one tactics. This time the Montana-DiPaolo side will be on an equal footing with their bruising arch-rivals. The possibilities arising from four men in the ring at the same time make this bout an absolute must to see.

Johnnny Harmon and Johnny Barend, two fast rugged matmen are opponents in the semi-final. Alan Garfield will test Jack Bence, a newcomer, in the opening match.

THE Calvert SPORTS COLUMN

by Elmer Ferguson

Canada's biggest sports event this year will be the British Empire Commonwealth Games. From July 30 to August 7 the sun of Vancouver will be shining on 750 athletes from at least 22 of the 26 nations in the Commonwealth. They will compete in nine events.

Never before have so many amateur athletes from so many countries gathered in one Canadian city at the same time. In 1951, when the Games were held in New Zealand, 13 countries were represented.

Planning anything as large as this is a tremendous job. A full time paid staff has already been working for more than a year organizing the Games in Vancouver. Dozens of business men have been devoting time, money and energy in a strictly voluntary effort.

One of the biggest jobs has been the preparation of facilities for the various events. Vancouver has had to raise money to build a 35,000-capacity stadium, a 6,000-seat swimming pool, a 5,000-seat bicycle track, and, 50 miles from Vancouver, the great Vedder Canal had to be put in shape at a cost of thousands of dollars for the rowing events. Of course, when the Games are over, these facilities will remain. Their value totals more than $2,000,000.

The stadium being built for the Games will be the largest in Canada, and the most modern. Later, it will become the home of the British Columbia Lions' football club in the Western Federation.

The cycle track, now completed, is said to be the fastest in the world, and certainly the best in Canada. The swimming pool, built at the University of British Columbia, will be the finest in North America, and it's an official Olympic pool.

It's impossible to estimate the number of spectators and tourists who will flock to British Columbia for the Games. But those who should know estimate an influx of probably 75,000 over the usual number who visit British Columbia during that part of the year.

And, of course, many of them will be Americans, who will continue to spend further weeks (and dollars) in other parts of the Dominion.

Your comments and suggestions for this column will be welcomed by Elmer Ferguson, c/o Calvert House, 431 Yonge St., Toronto.

Campbell Waits Habs' Move In Sizzling Richard Case

WHAT TO DO? — President Clarence Campbell, of the National Hockey League (centre), demands to know what Montreal Canadiens are going to do about the attack on him by Maurice (Rocket) Richard. The star Canadiens winger criticized Campbell in an article in a Montreal weekly newspaper, calling him a dictator. Here Campbell sits with Frank Selke (left), Canadiens' managing director, and Kenny Reardon, also of Canadiens.

By W. R. WHEATLEY

MONTREAL (CP) — Clarence Campbell, whom the public has linked with Maurice Richard as a key figure in the current hockey furore, is able to view the situation with detachment.

On one side the public sees the president of the National Hockey league, a man who has been a big-time referee, a Rhodes scholar, a lawyer and a lieutenant-colonel in the army.

On the other side is the famous, fiery Rocket, one of the most capable and colorful performers the game has ever produced, a clean-living player who is still a brilliant star in his 12th campaign with Montreal Canadiens.

While the whole explosive situation marks time, it is interesting to know Campbell's present personal opinion of Richard.

ADMIRES ABILITY

"From the first time I saw him I have had nothing but admiration for his playing ability," says Campbell. "Morever, he has on all occasions, as far as I know, conducted himself in a manner that could not do other than enhance the prestige of hockey."

The public, however, is asking: What can or will Campbell do? More to the immediate point is what has Campbell done?

When Richard cut loose in his bylined newspaper column with sizzling criticism of Campbell, at the same time he figuratively deposited a powder keg at the door of the NHL offices.

Campbell's first move was to throw away all matches. Then he gingerly carried the keg to the Montreal Forum. There he handed it over to Frank Selke, Canadiens managing director, for disposition and with the unmistakeable implication that it belonged in the Forum in the first place.

"The primary responsibility for control and discipline of players is with the club," says Campbell.

"If the club approved or even condones the action of one of its employees, then the issue is not with the employee but with the club. No right-thinking person could feel a junior employee should be held accountable for an action or policy expressed or implied by the employers."

IN TOUGH SPOT

Whatever twists the situation may take, the hard-working little man who has built up the Canadiens organization in the last seven years is on a tough spot.

Campbell's move forces Selke to deal with the Rocket, the idol of thousands of fans, particularly in Montreal. It's about as tough a situation as being asked to consider shooting Santa Claus.

At the same time, Campbell, or the NHL governors, if forced to take some direct action, will undoubtedly have to consider the public.

If Campbell himself has to take punitive action he will act under section 17, clause three, of the NHL bylaws. It says:

"If, in the opinion of the president, based on such information and reports as he may deem sufficient, any act or conduct of any official or a member club or player or employee whether during or outside the playing season has been dishonorable, prejudicial to or against the welfare of the league or the game of hockey, he may expel or suspend such person or impose upon such person a fine not exceeding $2,000 in the case of an official of a member club or $500 in the case of a player or employee, or he may order or impose a suspension and a fine. Should a fine not be paid within 10 days of imposition, the president, in addition, may order a suspension."

GIVEN WIDE POWER

That clause gives Campbell wide jurisdictional and punitive power but he insists his position is more that of a general manager than a president.

"The NH president is forbidden to have any financial interest in the league," he says. "How, then, could he be vested with absolute powers in the running of it? If he had them he could ruin the people in the business.

"It is a well established principle on this continent that people who have a financial stake in a project have the right to say how it shall be run."

NO SUCH POWERS

Certainly, says Campbell, he has no such powers as were given the late judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis when Landis became commissioner of baseball following the 1919 Black Sox scandal.

"Nobody in baseball or any sport has had his powers since," says Campbell. "The need then was not so much for administrative ability as unquestionable probity."

On the basis of published comment from responsible sources among clubs around the circuit, there is no reason to believe Campbell does not have the support of the league governors in the present case. He feels the same way.

Campbell thinks the public had the wrong impression about any appeal that might have risen from his decision in the stick-swinging affair involving Bernie Geoffrion and Ron Murphy.

Canadiens management decided against an appeal to the governors, but in any event it would not have been an appeal in the generally understood sense. Under the bylaws, says Campbell, the governors would decide only if the president had exercised his powers in accordance with the constitution and bylaws; it would not be a matter of whether the penalties imposed were in conformity with the governors' individual opinions.

STOICAL PERSON

Campbell shies from getting involved in any discussion over Richard's column, but smiled broadly when asked if it's true he laughs when opposing teams score on Canadiens.

"I don't think there's a more stoical person in the rink," he said. "People ask me, 'How can you sit there and not give the slightest indication of what you are thinking?'"

What about his statement, in the Geoffrion-Murphy decision, which implied it's okay to cross-check a fellow who has a stick but you don't swing at him if he hasn't one?

"It implied nothing of the kind. You're taking something out of context. Remember, the rules provide for any illegal use of the stick, although it is traditional you don't club a fellow who has no stick."

Campbell says he never fraternizes with players, coaches, club officials or governors of the NHL.

"This doesn't mean I am unfriendly with them, but I have no social relations with any of them—not one."

ESCORTED FROM RINK

The Richard affair is the first of its kind ever to come before Campbell, who has had to contend with hockey problems dating back to his refereeing days in amateur hockey. There were times he had to be escorted from the rink.

In 1941, in Trail, B.C., hostile fans formed lines along a corridor and out of the rink to a nearby hotel. No police were on hand. Campbell marched between the lines with a skate in each hand. Nothing happened.

He refereed in the NHL from 1936 to 1940. In the 1937 playoffs Dit Clapper of Boston Bruins clipped Dave Trottier of Montreal Maroons with his stick.

"It looked as if Clapper would follow up with his fists," says Campbell. "I intervened to prevent any blows because I had seen Trottier was hurt. Perhaps it wasn't obvious to Clapper. I got punched over the eye by Clapper.

"I gave him a major penalty, which exhausted the playing time, and reported the incident to president Frank Calder. I refused to give Clapper a match penalty—we had no game-misconduct penalty then. I considered Clapper had punched me by accident. Calder fined Clapper $100, a heavy fine in those days, and let him continue in the series."

NEVER A WHIZ

Campbell, a bachelor, was born July 9, 1905, in Fleming, Sask. His father is still living. Campbell attended the University of Alberta where he played junior hockey. He was never any whiz as a player. He likes skiing, golf and curling. He broke his leg last year skiing and now confines his winter-sport recreation to curling.

He graduated from the University of Alberta with a bachelor of arts degree in 1924; he received his law degree in 1926. That same year he was selected as a Rhodes scholar and pursued law courses at Oxford University, graduating in 1929.

REFEREED LACROSSE

In 1928 he refereed lacrosse matches at the Olympic games in Amsterdam and returned the following year to Canada. He practised law in Edmonton during hockey's off-season until he joined the army in 1941 after serving in the Canadian militia and becoming a lieutenant.

He became a major in May, 1944. He went to France and served throughout the campaign in northwestern Europe. In June, 1945, he was transferred to the Canadian war crimes investigation unit and was promoted to lieutenant-colonel. He was associate prosecutor at war-crime trials of German officers, including that of Gen. Kurt Meyer. Campbell was made a Member of the British Empire for meritorious service and was twice decorated for gallantry.

Six Hamilton Entries Reach Second Round

HAMILTON (CP)—Six Hamilton entries were among the 14 who survived the first round of the Holton Trophy women's bonspiel here Monday.

Thirty-two rinks from Sarnia, Toronto, St. Catharines, Kitchener, Owen Sound, Huntsville, Oshawa [illegible] are entered in the three-day tournament. Finals in three events will be held Wednesday.

Four of the six Hamilton rinks surviving the first round were from the Thistle club. The other two were from the Victoria Club.

The three U.S. entries dropped from the unbeaten class into the second event for the Cheriton Trophy. Mrs. Frank Pollen led her Chicago rink to a 17-7 win over Mrs. M. F. McIntosh of Woodstock but fell in one of the two second-round games. She was defeated 11-6 by Mrs. H. B. Baldwin of Sarnia.

LOSE MATCHES

The other two United States rinks skipped by Mrs. G. L. Bergen of Winnetka, Ill., and Mrs. H. Jackson of Brookline, N.Y., lost first-round matches to Hamilton Thistle rinks.

In evening play, six rinks advanced in the Cheriton Trophy event. Mrs. McIntosh's entry scored the most convincing win, a 14-3 triumph over Mrs. E. Winfield of Grimsby.

Mrs. D. Hastings of Midland won the closest match, a 12-10 decision over the Indian Hill Curling Club rink from Winnetka, Ill.

Sullivan Lead Being Reduced

NEW YORK (CP) — George (Red) Sullivan of Hershey Bears continued his scoring leadership of the American Hockey League today but the field was closing in.

Statistics released by the AHL showed the Hershey centre pacing the league with 58 points on 15 goals and 43 assists, closely pursued by two Cleveland snipers, Ed Olson and Jackie Gordon, with 56 and 55 points respectively.

Harry Pidhirny of Syracuse Warriors ran his goal-scoring total to 29 to retain league leadership. Sullivan's 43 gives him the lead in assists.

Gil Mayer of Pittsburgh Hornets leads the goaltenders with an average of 2.81 goals a game scored against him. Emile Francis of Cleveland has the most shutouts with three.

Tidwell To Play For Hamilton Ti-Cats

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Travis Tidwell, former Auburn and New York Giant halfback, Monday confirmed reports that he will play with Hamilton Tiger-Cats of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union.

Tidwell said he signed a contract with Carl Voyles, Tiger-Cat coach, under whom he played at Auburn. Terms of the contract were not disclosed.

Richard Now In 2nd Place In NHL Scoring Race, Trails Howe By One Point

MONTREAL (CP)—Maurice Richard led Montreal Canadiens to within an ace of both team and individual scoring leadership of the National Hockey League last week. Official league statistics released today show that a single point separates Richard and Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings, and Canadiens and Red Wings. But both those points are in Detroit. In the midst of [illegible] president Clarence Campbell, Richard did not pause in his point-getting drive, netting three goals and six assists for 44 points. Howe has 45.

Red Wings, holding two games in hand over Canadiens, have played 40, won 22, lost 10 and tied eight for 52 points. Canadiens won 23, lost 14 and tied five for 51.

Richard, who last week accused Campbell of being a dictator, is the league's top goal-getter with a total of 25.

Howe, a canny play-maker, leads in assists with 29.

TIES RECORD

Bert Olmstead tied an NHL record Saturday when he scored four goals and assisted on four others as Canadiens hammered Chicago Black Hawks 12-1. The record is shared with Richard, who had five goals and three assists against Detroit in 1944.

In individual scoring, Olmstead is tied for eighth place with defenceman Red Kelly of Detroit, each with 32 points. Ted Lindsay, Detroit, is in third place with 38, while Bernie Geoffrion, Canadiens, is fourth with 37. Ken Mosdell, Canadiens, and Ed Sandford, Boston, follow with 35 and 34 points, while Earl Reibel, Detroit, has 33.

In team standings, Toronto Maple Leafs are third with 46 points, Boston Bruins fourth with 38, four more than the fast-improving New York Rangers. Chicago is last with 21.

SAWCHUK GAINS

Detroit's Terry Sawchuk gained considerably over Toronto's Harry Lumley in the race for the Vezina trophy. Lumley has allowed 69 goals in 39 games for a 1.77 average. In 40 games, Wings have allowed 72. Lumley is still the shutout champ with seven.

Montreal is the most penalized team with 661 points, while Doug Harvey of the Habs has 82 minutes, more than any other player.

Barbole Gains Split Decision

TORONTO (CP)—Willie Barbole of Toronto gained a split decision over Johnny Lapadula, also of Toronto, in Monday night's five-round main bout of the Toronto Boxing Club.

Other results included:

155 lbs.—Robert Blake, Toronto, decisioned George Charles, Cobourg in three rounds.

Wampler Wins $20,000 Tilt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Newcomer Fred Wampler of Indianapolis fought off a case of nerves and mounting challenges Monday and won the $20,000 Los Angeles open golf tournament, shooting a last round 75 for a 72-hole score of 281.

The victory for the 30-year-old golfer was worth $4,000 and was his first since turning professional in 1950.

Tied for second at 282 were Chick Harbert, the old pro from Northville, Mich., and little Jerry Barber of La Canada, Calif.

Canada's two professionals on the winter golf circuit, Gerry Kesselring of Kitchener, and John Henrich of Ottawa, both were eliminated from final-round play when they carded identical 223s, three strokes above the qualifying score.

Remember When—

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal's two teams, Maroons and Canadiens, set the National Hockey League record for most points scored in a game 16 years ago tonight when Maroons beat Canadiens 11-7. Maroons had 17 assists and Canadiens 10, to make the point-scoring total 45. On goals alone, the record was set in 1920 when Canadiens beat Toronto 14-7.

Cheerful Lad Scores Double-Heat Victory

Trade Boards To Meet Discuss Employment

OTTAWA (CP) — Executive officers of the Associated Boards of Trade of Eastern Ontario will meet here Wednesday to discuss unemployment caused in eight Ottawa valley towns by closing or slowdown at a number of woollen textile mills.

Workers are affected in Pembroke, Renfrew, Almonte, Arnprior, Perth, Carleton Place, Appleton and Merrickville.

Harry D. Callan of Ottawa, industrial commissioner of the boards, said [illegible] textile industry following its preliminary talks.

Pearson Urges Atom Pool With Or Without Soviet

OTTAWA (CP)—External Affairs Minister Pearson said Monday night other countries should go ahead with President Eisenhower's atomic pool plan with or without Russia.

The door could always be left open for Russia to come in later, he added during the CBC program "Press Conference," recorded earlier for broadcast on the Dominion network.

Members of the panel were Blair Fraser, Maclean's magazine, chairman; Robert McKeown, Weekend magazine; Ann Francis, CBC; [illegible] Lambert Agence France-Presse; [illegible] New York Times.

Mr. Pearson said he is encouraged by the fact Russia has agreed to discuss the President's proposal for pooling atomic resources for peaceful purposes.

But it would be wrong to "go overboard with optimism" about Russian intentions. The Soviet's agreement to discuss the plan and attend a Big Four foreign ministers' conference at Berlin might indicate a change in the Russian attitude, but it would be better to wait and see what happens at these meetings.

If the Soviet really was anxious to make a gesture of friendship to the West, one possibility would be Russian agreement to a unified Germany, which would decide its own fate in free elections.

He reiterated that if France does not ratify the European Defence Community, "then we will all have to reappraise our policies—and all reappraisals are agonizing."

Other possibilities might be German membership in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization or a series of bilateral treaties between Germany and NATO countries. However, these would mean a separate German army under a German general staff.

He was commenting on the statement by John Foster Dulles, United States state secretary, that if France does not ratify EDC the [illegible] "agonizing reappraisal" of its foreign policy.

Beet Sugar Production Increased In 1953

OTTAWA (CP)—Beet sugar production and value rose in 1952, but the increase was offset industry-[illegible] sugar.

Beet sugar production jumped 50,491,851 pounds to 298,245,300, the Dominion bureau of statistics said Monday. Despite a drop in average price from [illegible] it permitted a jump in total value of $2,595,962 to $29,041,841.

Arnprior Chosen As Film Site

ARNPRIOR (CP)—This Ottawa valley town 40 miles west of the capital has been chosen as the setting for a film entitled "Your Member of Parliament." The film will be produced by the National Film Board.

Arnprior isn't the home of any current member of Parliament. It's represented in the Commons by Revenue Minister McCann, Liberal member for Renfrew South. His home is at Renfrew, 25 miles northwest of Arnprior.

A film board spokesman said Arnprior was chosen because it is [illegible] The film board hasn't decided whether to use a member of Parliament in the cast.

"We might use two or three, but whoever we get, he must photograph well," the spokesman said. "On second thought, maybe we'll use an actor."

Hit By Street Car

TORONTO (CP) — Mrs. Emily Banas, 39, her face bundled deep in her coat because of the cold and her head down to avoid driving snow, ran into the path of a streetcar Monday, police reported. Three [illegible] from head injuries—Toronto's first traffic victim for 1954.

Clyde Bedell Awarded Nichols Cup

Clyde Bedell, leading American authority on "Advertising That Sells", who will address a clinic under auspices of The Examiner here Wednesday, was signally honored in Chicago Saturday night when he received the Nichols cup for having made great contributions to advertising education in the United States in the biennium 1952-1953.

Mr. Bedell is only the second man to receive this honor. The huge cup is conferred by Alhpa Delta Sigma national advertising fraternity which has chapters of active advertising men in large cities across the United States as well as academic chapters in universities and colleges where advertising is taught.

Any chapter can nominate a man to receive this honor. Every two years all candidates are considered and voted upon by all chapters. The award was made at a dinner participated in by the professional Chicago, and Roosevelt College chapters. Wesley I. Nunn, advertising director of the Standard Oil Company, was the principal speaker.

Mr. Bedell will conduct a clinic in Peterborough on Wednesday afternoon at Trinity Church hall.

WA Purchases Items For Fund Projects

BANCROFT (ENS) — Fifteen members and two visitors were present at the regular meeting of St. Paul's United WA, held at the church, with vice-president Mrs. M. Hewitt in the chair.

Devotional period was led by Mrs. A. Eddy and meditations read by Mrs. E. Mather. Mrs. Hewitt welcomed the visitors.

The vice-president announced that four sick visiting calls had been made during the past month and Mrs. Eddy and Mrs. D. Grant reported a gratifying profit on the sale of Christmas cards.

The auditor's report, submitted by Mrs. Jack Brown, showed a satisfactory balance and Mrs. Eddy reported that the WA had assisted in sending delegate Ian McColl to the Boys' Parliament.

Mrs. Grant proposed a rummage sale to be held on January 23 and Mrs. Vardy and Mrs. Hewitt agreed to make arrangements for it.

On a motion by Mrs. A. Mather, the group decided to purchase 40 paper chapels for a special money making project, and Mrs. Brown proposed purchase of two gross of metal sponges for a similar purpose.

Mrs. Borland, on behalf of the Rev. Alan Borland, requested the presence of the ladies at the annual congregational meeting.

Hostesses for the evening were Mrs. D. Grant, Mrs. T. Tryon and Mrs. A. Towle.

Fumes Kill Girl

PORT DOVER (CP) — Fumes from a gas heater Sunday took the life of nine-year-old Marjorie Woods and sent her mother, Mrs. Janes Woods, 39, unconscious to hospital in nearby Simcoe. Port Dover firemen used an inhalator for more than an hour on Mrs. Woods, a public school teacher, to revive her.

Playboy Fined

HAMILTON, Bermuda (CP) Duncan McMartin, playboy with a Canadian mining fortune, Monday was fined £20 and had his driving licence suspended for six months for driving while under the influence of alcohol New Year's Day. McMartin, alleged to have narrowly missed a police car, pleaded not guilty when arraigned Saturday.

Pass Whistles Bylaw

WOODSTOCK (CP)—Train whistles will no longer keep Woodstock residents awake at nights. City council learned Monday night that the board of transport commissioners has approved a city bylaw restricting the use of whistles within the city limits on the Canadian National Railways line. Council appointed an alderman to make sure the railway knows about the bylaw.

ON THE BOUNCE

Garage owners in Peterborough have not reported catching on to any of those cheques that bounce back from the bank pay wicket, but if a certain Edward Francis Loughrey is telling the truth, then there are two such cheques somewhere in the city. Now in custody at Oshawa for passing worthless cheques, Loughrey told police that he had passed a couple of bogus ones at two garages in Peterborough. They had yielded him $40 and $10. He didn't know the names of the garages, but said one was somewhere in the city. Inspector of Detectives [illegible] Clarke said today that no complaints had been received as yet. The cheques were signed "Ted Loughrey."

North-enders Oppose Gas Station

Water-Parkhill Rd. Service Station Argue Before Council

The finance committee of city council were crowded out of the council committee room into the big general committee room Monday night when a delegation of about a dozen north-end residents showed up in opposition to a request by the Imperial Oil Co. for permission to erect a service station at Water St. and Parkhill Rd.

Outcome of the lengthy meeting was that the committee laid the request over until the next meeting of the committee of the whole council, ostensibly the board of works meeting two weeks hence. Meanwhile, they'll study the implications of a 1929 bylaw cited by the delegation's spokesman, W. B. Gordon, who claimed that the bylaw prohibited the erection of service stations in certain sections, including both sides of Water St., from Argyle St. to, he thought, Brock St.

BYLAW SUPERSEDED

The wording and effect of the bylaw may prove a stumbling block to the company in its application, although City Clerk E. A. Outram was of the opinion that it was superseded by the 1947 land use plan, the "Master Plan," which puts the site of the proposed service station in the commercial category.

Another possible hitch cited by Mr. Gordon was the possibility that the service station might overlap the corner property onto adjacent residential property. Frontage of the corner was less than that of the plan submitted by the oil company, he thought.

"I suggest that if a service station goes up there, commercial properties will spread north up Water St.," said Mr. Gordon, who also submitted a petition opposing the company's application and containing 84 signatures.

The spokesman for the petitioners said that two previous applications by the company had been turned down by the planning board and there had been no material change in the circumstances which would justify the council reversing that decision.

Also on hand was a delegation from Imperial Oil, for whom T. J. Carley was spokesman. Mr. Carley reiterated the points he made last month when the matter was referred to this year's council. He emphasized again the following points:

When the company's service station on the city hall site was removed to make way for a new municipal building, council had assured the company they would be treated fairly in their application for a new site.

Council Seeks Community Fund Aid For Registry

With the expiry set for March 15, the Community Nursing Registry may be granted a reprieve, if pleas on its behalf bear fruit.

A special committee of city council will seek an immediate interview with Community Chest President A. L. Elliott to discuss the registry's need for $1,800 to meet its current operating deficit.

Ald. Art Burrows was appointed by council's finance committee Monday night to head the committee. He selected Aldermen Gordon Powell and 'Alene Holt to act with him.

Aldermen Powell and Stan McBride made strenuous pleas for support of the registry when its plight was outlined to the finance committee in a letter from Ford Warren, who chairs the registry's finance committee. Mr. Warren is also to be asked to prepare a financial statement for council's perusal before any consideration is given to the question of a grant by the city.

DECIDE FRIDAY

In his letter, Mr. Warren pointed out that, unless substantial aid is forthcoming, the decision as to whether or not the registry continues its services will be taken at a meeting this coming Friday night, in order to give its clients 60 days notice of termination.

Although both the city and the community chest have turned down previous requests from the registry for financial assistance, it was made clear Monday night that if one gives assistance the other cannot. The chest is barred from assisting any organization which receives a municipal grant.

WHY NOT A SUCCESS?

Ald. Holt, who did not want to see the registry fold up, was in favor of having a number of organizations assist it but could not understand why the registry had not been a success.

Ald. McBride was of the opinion that all public services required subsidies. Most other cities gave assistance to registries, he said. Ald. Rehill was in favor of making a grant, provided council was given a copy of the registry's financial statement.

Ald. Farquharson urged the committee not to act hastily. He reminded members that council was faced with requests for grants from a number of organizations. If the registry sent out termination notices to its subscribers after Friday night's meeting, these could be revoked. But Ald. Rehill thought some of the subscribers might not renew their contracts and the registry would collapse.

"Obviously the registy has strong support on council," Ald. Farquharson replied. "But this is an important question and I don't think it should be railroaded."

Caught With Fuel Oil Down Citizens Keep Suppliers Busy

The current cold wave in city and district has caught a lot of people with their fuel tanks low. Fuel oil dealers are finding business so brisk that they have disregarded their five-day week and drivers are working nights and in some cases on Sundays to keep up with urgent demands from firms and householders.

Larger supply companies work on what they call a "weather control system" and by making constant note of "degree days" are able to tell very closely what requirements will be, as close as ten gallons, one operator said.

Of six firms surveyed by The Examiner today, all had the same story, "Busy, busy, busy".

One large supplier seemed to be verbally rubbing his hands in high spirits over the telephone and said he hoped the conditions would last 'till April. Citizens, generally, do not reflect his enthusiasm.

CONSTRUCTION SLOWED

Some workmen engaged in bricklaying and cement work have been laid off by contractors, as many as 50 per cent by one. Each said that the weather had slowed his work up considerably. Most firms are keeping their men going, however.

The cold has let up a little. Monday night's low was minus four degrees, rising to one below at 9 a.m. and two degrees above at noon. Warmth is creeping back slowly, very slowly, from the 15 below-figure on Monday morning.

Those with a penchant for comparing temperatures of a year ago may gain some solace from the figure of 31 degrees above. But it had shot up from a four-above figure just the day before.

Weathermen in well-heated government stations compile their charts and weather fronts and say sagely that a "fresh outbreak of polar air will invade Ontario within the next day or two".

Sometimes they have been known to be wrong and everyone jokes about it, but, there are no jokes these days. Weathermen have been so right and it is so cold we believe them, this time.

Robert H. Bell Named Director

T. J. Allen, gerent of the Coventry Singers, said today that Robert H. Bell, Mus. Bac., has been offered and has accepted the musical directorship of the choir until the summer.

Mr. Bell, who is organist and choirmaster of St Paul's Anglican church, Lindsay, graduated from the University of Toronto with the degree of bachelor of music last June. He is a native of St. Catharines. Before going to Lindsay six months ago he was organist and choir leader of St. Matthias church in Toronto.

Mr. Bell was married recently. His wife is also a bachelor of music of Toronto, having graduated in the same year as her husband. Her home town is Kelowna, B.C.

The Coventry Singers were organized six years ago by John Hooper, now studying at the Royal School of Church Music, London, England. Their second director was Christopher Gledhill, who last week removed to Montreal.

Labor Requests Check-off Law

Incorporation of the "check-off" in labor legislation is requested of the Ontario government by a resolution adopted Monday by Peterborough and District Labor Council.

The preamble of the resolution affirmed that the majority of the provinces of Canada have provision for the collection of union dues through the check-off in their labor legislation, that the principle has been approved in the House of Commons, that collection of dues by this means has been applied by law to such groups as farmers, school teachers, lawyers and doctors, and that it signifies to the worker freedom to assign the money he has earned.

President Alf. Barber commented that the government of Ontario was discriminating against labor.

"A check-off is compulsory by law for teachers, farmers, lawyers and doctors," Mr. Barber said. "The law requires teachers to pay dues to their association. Farmers participating in marketing schemes have their dues deducted automatically. Doctors and lawyers are not allowed to practice unless they pay their dues to their association. But as soon as labour unions mention the check-off on an entirely voluntary basis, we are met with screams of opposition. Six Canadian provinces have provisions in the labour laws for the check-off on an entirely voluntary basis, and I feel that this legislation should be acted upon immediately by the government of this highly industrialized province."

A letter was ordered sent to Mayor Graham congratulating him on his stand regarding rent control, and promising full support of the labour council.

When Passing Zoning Bylaw

Registering Restrictive Laws

If Peterborough passed its proposed zoning bylaws, its restrictions would have to be registered against all the affected properties.

And that registration would have to be applied by the municipality and at its cost.

This is a possibility arising out of an appeal court judgment at Toronto, as reported in today's news.

Mrs. Mary Hamilton bought an old home on No. 2 Highway, east of Oakville, for use as a tourist home known as the Avalon. Before making the purchase, she asked the owners and several other persons, including the deputy-reeve of the township whether there were any municipal restrictions applying to the house and land, and was told there were none.

The township then claimed that the operation of her tourist home was contrary to a bylaw passed in 1944, three years prior to the transfer of ownership to her.

The court of appeal upheld an earlier judgment of Mr. Justice LeBel, who had dismissed an application by Trafalgar township for a court order barring operation of Avalon tourist home.

NOT REGISTERED

The fact was that the municipal bylaw's restrictions were not registered on the deed of the property Mrs. Hamilton bought.

V. J. McElderry, QC, explained to The Examiner today that the course of any person buying a property was to search the deed at the registry office to ascertain whether there were any restrictions against it.

The owner of a property might put building restrictions in a deed as to its use, particularly in the type of building, whether of brick or stucco, and so on. Whatever the restrictions, if any, the purchaser obtained that pertinent information by search of title.

But, as in the case of Mrs. Hamilton she was told by a municipal officer that there were no municipal restrictions against the Avalon place.

MUST BE MADE BY CITY

"Supposing Peterborough's zoning bylaw, when it became effective, excluded business from the area bounded by Parkhill Rd., Water St. and Dennistoun Ave.," Mr. McElderry cited as an example, the deed of every individual property in that area should record the restrictive bylaw against it. That registration would have to be made by the city, and the city would have to pay the cost of it."

The item of expense to the municipality, Mr. LeBel commented in his judgment, should not be allowed to weigh against the circumstances.

Mr. Justice Hogg, who wrote the appeal court judgment against Trafalgar township, said it was "obvious that as the bylaw restricts the use to which property may be put and may, therefore, prejudicially affect it, an owner, who wished to take advantage of a bona-fide purchaser, who had no notice of such bylaw, might be able to accomplish his purpose, and thereby cause serious loss to the purchaser."

THOUSANDS OF BYLAWS

City Solicitor W. G. Angus, Toronto, said the city would be in an impossible position if all its restrictive bylaws had to be registered. "We have restrictive bylaws numbering in the thousands, and on top of that we have our new zoning bylaw affecting the whole city."

Mr. McElderry explained that the careful buyer of a property searched the deed of the property and also inquired at the city hall whether there was any use restriction against it.

In the meanwhile in Peterborough, the city's long projected zoning bylaw has not been adopted, and is not in effect.

But, if when it is passed, would the city be required to register it on all the deeds of property which it affects?

The Trafalgar case has been disallowed by the courts, and Mrs. Hamilton is not interfered with in her operation of Avalon tourist home. That is the present effect "unless the appeal court judgment is upset at Ottawa or unless legislators take corrective action.

May Shift Lindsay Wards To Compensate For Growth

LINDSAY (ENS). — Harold Baty, Lindsay's assessment commissioner, introduced an idea at Monday night's meeting of town council that will, if adopted, change the ward system in Lindsay for the first time in 97 years.

Lindsay has always been divided in three wards, North, South and East, but Mr. Baty pointed out that the South Ward contained over 48 per cent of the town's population, while the North had 23 per cent, and the East Ward only 17 per cent.

Town clerk Allely voiced his interest in the plan, since he said the ward boundaries would have to be changed in the near future in any case, for voting purposes.

Mr. Baty proposed dividing the South Ward into two new wards, and beginning a system of numbering the wards, with Ward 1 including all of the present North Ward.

Ward 2 could be that section west of Lindsay St. and south of Kent St., in other words, the west half of the present South Ward, while Ward 3 would include the north half of the present East Ward. Ward 4, the new ward, would be the south half of the present East Ward ,(east of the Scugog river, and would also include part of the South Ward, west of the Scugog nad south of Kent St. east to Lindsay St.

The plan will be discussed at another meeting, but another idea was advanced by Ald. McQuarrie, chairman of the town planning committee.

He proposed the same division for Ward 1, but outlined the south section of the town from William St. west as Ward 2. This would leave another section of the present South Ward, from Wiliam St. to the Scugog river, as Ward 3, with the present East Ward, north of Kent St., as Ward 4, and the new developments, including the Maryknoll project, south of Kent St. and east of the river, as Ward 5.

Alderman J. A. Harrigan, chairman of town property, reported that in his opinion, the town hall was in a "disgraceful condition". He referred to the lack of paint in many parts of the building, and the general dirty appearance of the interior. He also pointed out that scorched marks in the stairway to the auditorium above the council chamber had not been painted over, despite the fact that the fire occurred some time ago and the town received insurance for it.

RATS TOO

Rats were mentioned again in Lindsay council Monday night. At the last meeting, an exterminator hired by the town to control rats in town building and at the new and old dumps, quoted his price for another year's contract, to which Ald. Harrigan took exception, both to the rate and the method of exterminating.

At last night's meeting, two more tenders for extermination were opened, but Ald. Harrigan proposed the town saving the money by having the caretaker of the new dump look after the rats there. There were no rats reported at the former dump on the Fenelon Highway. Ald. Harrigan thought the care taker could take care of what rats might be found with a few rat traps, and council finally agreed to have the town go into the rat-killing business on its own.

CONDITION STILL SERIOUS

Mrs. Margaret Hall, 400 Wellington St., who was seriously injured in a motor accident Saturday night, was reported to be still in a serious condition at noon today. Mrs. Hall suffered two fractured limbs and other injuries when she was struck by a car on Reid St. She was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital.

School Band Leader Is Seriously Ill

Albert Croasdale, bandmaster of the PCVS concert band and the Peterborough public schools band is seriously ill in the Sunnybrook hospital in Toronto. The public school band which has been practising twice a week in the Queen Mary and Prince of Wales schools, has been disbanded and the PCVS band has had to suspend practices.

In the case of the public school bands, Mr. Croasdale had rented the instruments from a music firm in Toronto and loaned them to the students at a small fee. These instruments are being collected before they are misplaced. The instruments of the PCVS band are owned by the board of education.

Intersection Crashes Do Little Damage

Only three minor accidents were reported in the city Monday. Damages were light in all cases and no persons were injured.

Cars driven by William R. Young, 481 Aylmer St. and John R. Corkery, 465 Gilmour St., collided at Brock and Sheridan streets. At Charlotte and George streets there was a collision between a bus driven by Floyd Post, 717 George St. and a car driven by Gordon Delong, 567 Aylmer St. Thorald Ralston Williams, 469 Stewart St. and Elmer J. Monahan, 26, Park St., were drivers of cars which collided at Murray and Stewart streets.

Brotherhood Week Plans Outlined

Representatives from various service groups throughout the city met Monday night at the public library to discuss a promotion program for Brotherhood Week in Peterborough, Feb. 21-28.

Isadore Black, William Hamilton and Fred Overend were elected co-chairmen of the promotion board and will commence planning for Brotherhood Week immediately. All church and service organizations are urged to support the occasion by placing emphasis upon it in future activities.

Salvation At Hand

Is Your Payday At Wrong End Of Week

Short of cash?

Who isn't?

Heretofore, when an Examiner reporter got hungry, with payday at the opposite end of the week and no jingle in his jeans, his only resort was to rely on the trusting nature of a certain Water St., if you'll pardon the expression, restaurateur. But now, redemption of his fallen pride is in the offing.

He may soon be able to pawn his typewriter—or even the watch his proud parents proffered him when he left his innocence on the hearth and embarked on a career in the world's second oldest profession.

PIE IN THE SKY

Yes, fellow wage slaves, there's pie in the sky. Peterborough may soon have a pawnshop. An application to hang up those three familiar orbs was received by the finance committee of city council Monday night.

But don't dig the family silverware out of the pea-patch yet. Council wants to know where and when the applicant intends to set up his financial oasis.

And don't think it's easy being the J. P. Morgan of the underdog. The province has a Pawnbrokers Act with enough clauses in it to make it look like the last will and testament of Ali Khan.

The act sets the interest charges allowed on loans and just about every other type of restriction designed to stifle the ambitions of the collector of other people's heirlooms.

This statute has sharp teeth too. It provides for rigid police inspections of the pawnbroker's books and gives city council the power to cancel his licence at pleasure.

So get in line boys. And please be so kind as not to nudge my sacroiliac with that saxophone.

Hornal Tells Aux. Places For Aged Are Major Needs

"The Women's Auxiliary to the Civic Hospital expresses the kindness of the community in a way no city council, board of governors or administrative staff can do," said superintendent Mr. John Hornal in a message to the Auxiliary at its annual meeting Monday afternoon.

Mr. Hornal said there is the scientific concept of the hospital, which is handled by the medical staff; the concept that it is a "medical hotel," handled by the [illegible] to the board of governors; and the oldest concept of all—that of the Good Samaritan. "In this latter, the hospital is the community's recognition 'we are our brothers' keeper'," he said. "It is carried out by two groups of women: the nurses and women of the staff, and the Women's Auxiliary."

"This year 1954 holds several important challenges for your Auxiliary," Mr. Hornal then intimated.

The first challenge is a piece of equipment costing $2,500 which he intends to ask for. The second is "the problem of the aging population and the chronically ill."

Taking pains to explain that his concern in the latter matter is not the cost of housing and caring for these patients—for in most cases they tend to lower hospital maintenance costs—but the fact that the Civic Hospital is geared to emergencies and medically ill patient care, Mr. Hornal specified that the need in this city now is for a building adapted to the needs of the chronically ill and aged and also housing for elderly people who are able to carry on a normal way of life. "This is one of our major problems" he concluded.

Mr. Normal expressed his own gratefulness to the Auxiliary for activities carried on in the hospital throughout the year.

NATIONAL BALLET stars—Celia Franca, artistic director of the National Ballet Company, stars in a new ballet, "Dark of the Moon," to be presented on a Canada-United States tour. The company, faced by financial troubles, was forced to cancel an invitation to tour Australia. With Miss Franca is Ray Moller of Vancouver. The new ballet, with choreography by Joey Harris of London, Ont., has original music by Louis Applebaum of Ottawa, who composed the music for last year's Stratford Shakespearian Festival.

Miss A. Howson Gives Account Of European Tour

Miss Alexandria Howson on Monday evening gave her fellow members of the University Women's Club a delightfully descriptive account of her most recent holiday trip to which she gave the title "Rambling Through Europe."

In the ten months following her arrival at Naples on December 23rd, 1952, Miss Howson toured in 12 countries, Italy, France, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Norway and the three [illegible]. Highlights in the account, of course, were the Coronation and the garden party at Buckingham Palace last July 23rd. Of major interest to this audience was her description of Crosby Hall, the International University Women's residence which is now situated at Chelsea on the Thames, right near Battersby Bridge, with many interesting places nearby. Miss Howson also related some of the history of the building, which had had as former owners Wm. Shakespeare and St. Thomas More. The University Women moved it from Bishopgate to part of the land which had been used by More as a summer residence.

Miss Howson attended as delegate from Peterborough University Women's Club the International Conference of university Women in Bedford College, Regents Park, Englad, and had previously given a report of the business sessions.

Pictures which she collected during the tour will be shown on another occasion as time permitted only a few of the coronation to be viewed last evening.

Lengthy discussion of the local club's business took place previous to the traveloque. President Katherine Macdougall presided.

*AT LAST—Maria Isabella Patina, 18-year-old daughter of tin magnate Antenor Patina, poses with her newly-wedded husband, James Michael Goldsmith, in Edinburgh, following their marriage at a registrar's office in Kelso, Scotland. The ceremony came after her father had caused a court order banning their marriage to be withdrawn.

Hospital Aux. Very Active Indicated By Reports

Reports of 1953 work of the Civic Hospital Women's Auxiliary read at the annual meeting Monday were indicative of a most active organization.

Most impressive perhaps was that of the buying committee which had spent a total of $3,107.37 on hospital equipment, books and toys for the children's ward and gifts at Christmas, and thermometer sets presented to the 30 graduating nurses in June. The equipment included half the cost of pillow radios and an amplifier to increase the reception power, two collapsible wheel chairs and an explosive-proof incubator. In charge of the buying was Mrs. H. G. Mason, who reported.

The annual penny sale in May brought the greatset revenue, realizing $2,095.44, and the membership drive brought in $1,309.66, with an increase of 152 members. Through these, the community at large is able to share practicaly painlessly in increasing comfort of the patients in hospital.

The 176 babies born in the hospital last year each received a pair of boottees as a gift from the Auxiliairy. The supply of boottees on hand was down at the end of the year to 49, convener Mrs. C. Murhar reported. Cost of wool was $50.

However, 26 pairs were received at the annual meeting as a gift from the St. Andrew's Brownies who took on the knitting project in the Coronation Year and won recognition from Queen Elizabeth II for their effort. The Brownies included with their gift one pair of soakers, which will be made good use of too. The parcel was presented by Mrs. George Coleman on behalf of the Brown Owl, Mrs. J. McLeod.

Newest enterprise of the Auxiliary is a "reading to patients" service carried on each Wednesday for both children and adults. Mrs. P. A. Martyn has taken over convenership of this. It was inaugurated by the library committee, convened by Mrs. W. T. Fanjoy, which supplied free reading material to 8,313 patients last year. In her report Mrs. Fanjoy thanked the Hadassah Chapter and the 57th Regiment Chapter, IODE, for magazine subscriptions donated, and mentioned also donation of books in memory of the late Mrs. Gordon Miller and scrap-books prepared by the St. Paul's Mission Band for the children's ward. She said there will be a stock-taking soon and a number of new books will be purchased.

The recreation committee had made 22 contacts with patients and started them on handicraft work prior to the employment of a staff person to direct patients' recreation. The committee then took over the reading service convener Mrs. Charles Huffman reported. Members had taken chronicaly ill patients for rides in their cars during the nice weather and had entertained all up patients at a St. Patrick's Day party and a Christmas party at the hospital. Cost for the year was $13.75.

The visiting committee, headed by Mrs. L. R. Dobbin, had visited and distributed fruit to 5,465 patients during the year, an average of 458 calls per month the report read by Mrs. W. A. Taylor stated. Miss Margaret English embodied a personal shopping service for the patients with her twice weekly visits with the tuck cart. This service is operated without profit, and also without expanse.

The decorating committee, headed by Mrs. Walker Jones, made tray favors for festive occasions throughout the year and decorated for the graduation ceremoney and tea and at Christmas, at a total cost of $57. Nurses-in-training were looked after by a committee under Mrs. George Coleman and received a newspaper subscription and record as gifts at Christmas. A square dance was held for the preliminary students in the fall. Something is to be done this year for intermediate and senior students the report advised.

7-Month Tour Costs Trio $1,000

VANCOUVER (CP)—Three Vancouver girls have returned here after a seven-month tour of a good part of Europe at a cost to each of $1,000.

Shirley Gernaey, Claudia Lepitre and Jean Murdoch, business girls in their 20s and members of the ladies' auxiliary of the Catholic Sailors' Club, set out seven months ago on the tramp steamer Cape Rodney, Europe-bound.

Most of their time was spent in Europe, hitch-hiking through England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, Belgium, Holland, France, Germany, Switzerland and Italy.

Their boat fare cost $600 each and $400 was spent for meals and lodging. For the most part they slept at night in youth hostels at a cost of 28 cents nightly. Daytimes they rode in everything from a Rolls-Royce to a van into which they were squeezed with a load of rotting horse meat.

Now they are back at work saving for another trip.

Nancy Ackerman Is Bride Of Jos. A. Otterway, Eng.

In a lovely wedding ceremony in the Church of Mary Magdalene at Picton, on Sunday afternoon at three o'clock, Miss Nancy Patricia Ackerman, elder daughter of Lieutenant Colonel Charles H. Ackerman of Peterborough and the late Mrs. Ackerman, became the bride of Mr. Joseph Albert Otterway of Chertsey, England, son of Mr. A. R. Otterway of Chertsey and the late Mrs. Otterway.

The marriage was performed by the Rev. Hope Swain and wedding music was played by the organist, Mr. J. Bronskill.

Palest pink pure silk taffeta fashioned in princess style with a deep vee portrait neckline and skirt in waltz length made a most charming gown for the bride. Her headdress was of palest pink antique lace and French tulle and her bouquet was of crimson carnations set inside pink tulip petals and bordered with rare tropical leaves of green veined with red. She was given in marriage by her father.

Miss Joan Ackerman, attending her sister as maid of honor, wore a crimson peau de soie gown which featured a cowl neckline and was in waltz length. She had a headdress of crimson French tulle and her flowers were carnations shading from palest pink to crimson.

The groom was attented by Mr. Bryan Devereux of Port Credit. Ushers were Messrs. William and James Hepburn of Picton, both cousins of the bride, the former being also a brother-in-law of the groom.

A reception was held at "Rickartson," Picton. Receiving were Mrs. James d'C. Hepburn, aunt of the bride, and the groom's sister, Mrs. William Hepburn, both of Picton.

Leaving afterwards to spend a honeymoon at Limberlost Lodge, Haliburton, the bride was most becomingly dressed in a suit of dark gray tweed with fleck of red, the box style jacket lined and trimmed with black caracul, and she wore black accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Otterway will sail for England on January 28th, aboard the Empress of Australia, and will make their home in Chertsey.

THE MOVIE COLUMN:

Many Stars Decide To Stay In U.S. For Time

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Stars like Clark Gable, Lana Turner, Gene Kelly and Claudette Colbert have returned from long picture-making jaunts abroad, and chances are they won't soon be going again.

Gregory Peck and Alan Ladd are reported to be among those yearning for an early return to Hollywood. Aside from the normal feeling of homesickness, many of the stars have good reasons for wanting to be back.

Glenn Ford, who has made at least five pictures out of the country, was telling me some of the factors that will cause him to think twice before he accepts another overseas assignment. Unlike the others I have mentioned, Glenn did not go abroad for tax purposes.

"I could very easily have taken advantage of the 18-month tax deal," said the actor on "The Human Beast" set. "I had already been in Europe eight months to make a picture. But another 10 months would have meant spending two Christmases away from home. I couldn't see it.

ADVICE TO OTHERS

"I suppose I was stupid financially. But it turned out that the tax deal was repealed before I would have finished my 18 months, and I wouldn't have earned a fabulous amount of money.'

Ford made "White Tower" in Switzerland, Italy and France, "Terror on a Train" in England, "Punder of the Sun" in Mexico and the unfinished "Americano" in Brazil. He had this to say to actors who are contemplating overseas films:

"If you are planning to go for a paid vacation, you've got a shock coming. Put your travel folders away. You can fix your contract to provide time before and after the production. But you'll generally find you have to start work the moment you arrive. And the extra month you planned for touring will probably be taken up with finishing the picture.

NEED PATIENCE

Two things you will learn making pictures in foreign countries: patience and tolerance. You can't expect to find the comforts you have in Hollywood. Wardrobe? You carry your own. Dressing room? They'll laugh at you when you mention it. Heat on the set? There isn't any. If you want to keep warm, you'll buy a heater and keep it beside you.

"You'll also have to learn that time means nothing. A scene that takes five hours to shoot in Hollywood will require five days over there. In France, work starts at nine in the morning. But that doesn't mean everyone is on the set and ready to shoot at nine. That's the hour when everyone starts to arrive at the studio!

The actor, a native of Portneuf, Que., added that the films he made abroad do not measure up artistically to the best of his Hollywood work.

"Some of them were all right, but they couldn't compare to pictures like 'Gilda' or 'The Big Heat,'" he observed.

Glenn reported that "The Americano," which suffered a fiasco of red tape in Brazil, will finally be finished in Hollywood.

RKO has bought the footage that was filmed in Brazil and will complete the story with the original actors: Ford, Cesar Romero and Arthur Kennedy. However, the Brazilian leading lady will be replaced by Ursula Tehiss.

New Reords To Answer Birds And Bees Questions

By JAMES R. BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Ever have little junior ask: "Where did I come from, mommy?"

Capitol records has come up with the easy way to answer those inevitable stork queries. A new record album due Feb. 1 is called "The Birth of a Baby." It is just that.

The album is a 30-minute tape recording of an actual birth which was produced for a radio broadcast with the parents' co-operation over station WISC, Madison, Wis.

The only people allowed in the delivery room were the doctors, nurses, and, of course, the mother. The baby, the mother's first, also showed up. All are anonymous.

DOCTOR COMMENTATOR

A doctor acts as commentator and does a good job on the play-by-play, sounding somewhat like a medical Edward R. Murrow describing the coronation of a queen. He even starts off in the best broadcasting manner, i.e.: "The obstetrician has just entered the delivery room."

From then on, every detail and sound of the baby's birth is recorded, building up the suspense that only nature can create. The album even has a strong finish, the baby's crying drowning out the commentator. Throughout, the voice of the obstetrician can be heard, urging: "Push, mother."

The the mother's breathing into the anaesthetic mask becomes more pronounced as the birth nears.

GETS EXCITED

The matter-of-fact commentator becomes a little excited when he announces: "The scalp is now clearing," adding "There's not much hair."

The commentator reports the clearing of the hips and then the obstetrician announces those famous words: "It's a boy."

Next comes the slapping noise and the voice of the obstetrician: "Come on young man, say hello."

Then the star of the show comes on stage with a whimper, followed by a cough, another whimper and then takes over the spotlight with a lusty yowl.

Alan W. Livingston, Capitol vice-president, said all royalties from the sale of the record will go to Madison hospital, where the baby was born.

DOROTHY DIX

Wife And Mate Congenial But Married Girl A Tartar

DEAR MISS DIX: I am my husband's second wife. He has a married daughter by his first wife, and the girl is doing her utmost to break us up. Before our marriage, she threatened that she would get me out of the house if I married [illegible] everything would be straightened out. Needless to say, this hasn't happened. When his daughter insults me, he stands by her. I know he is trying to hold us both, but I think he should stick up for me occasionally. The daughter has a fine husband, and three small children. This should give her enought to do without interfering with us. When my husband visits her he insists that I go along, and the visit always ends in an argument. She has even pulled my hair because I didn't agree with her. My husband and I get along very well—when she's not in the picture. E.C.

REGARD SOCIAL CALLS AS SACRIFICES

ANSWER: It would be interesting to know just what this daughter would do for her father if he didn't have a wife to look after him. Would she have him in her home, do his washing and ironing, while looking after her own brood? From the picture you paint of the girl, I doubt it. Hers seems to be an out-and-out case of jealousy, which you may find impossible to combat successfully.

Naturally you don't want to leave your husband. It's quite natural for him to refuse to be estranged from his only child. It would be wise for you to continue to visit his daughter with him, if only in self-defence. With you absent, many unkind and untrue things could be said that would lead to further trouble. Learn to regard the social calls as necessary sacrifices to keep your husband happy. No life is perfect, and since yours seems to be quite happy, aside fom this one discordant note resign yourself to putting up with it. You mention that you have a good friend who is a judge. Talk the situation over with him, not with the intent of getting legal advice, but as a friend-to-friend disussion of an unpleasant relationship. Since he knows all parties concerned I'm sure his views will be helpful.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: When I married, three years ago, we moved into my father's house, so I might continue caring for him and a younger sister. We were all very happy together, until a relative came to visit us. She took over the household and has been here ever since. We've tried to tell Dad she's a usurper, and should be asked to go, but he doesn't want to hurt her feelings. I can no longer [illegible] goes my husband and I will have to leave. I would hate to take this step since I love my father and want to stay with him. H.T.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: There could be three sides to this story—your father's the relative's, and yours. There's always the possibility that your Dad enjoys the company of a contemporary, and really doesn't consider the lady a usurper. Perhaps it's your feelings he doesn't want to hurt. Frank discussion between you and your father is the only solution. If your father is faced with a choice between you and his relative, with good reasons to back it, I'm sure he'll make the right decision.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: For the past year I've been taking the same bus to work. There is a young man who is also a passenger every morning. He attracts me greatly, but I have no way of being introduced to him. We smile at each other occasionally but never speak. Gay.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: By this time a "good morning" certainly would not be amiss. Common sharing of a daily bus ride is introduction enough.

SUITS AND ENSEMBLES with suit look both have flexibility in styling this spring. There is a variety of jacket lengths and styles. Some are boxy, some are short-cropped, some are semi-box jackets. Dress-and-jacket ensemble with suit look (left) is by Sophie of Saks Fifth Avenue in a grey Lesur wool. Jacket sleeves are easy; jacket itself is short-cropped. Beige paint brush tweed edged with white braid binding (right) has soft look. There's a six-gore skirt in this Ben Zuckerman design.

Suits Are Short Story For Spring

By GAILE DUGAS
NEA Woman's Editor

NEW YORK (NEA)—The suit story is a short story this spring. That's because the suit jacket this year is short and fitted—the one suit silhouette with greatest significance.

Suits are feminine, cut in lightweight fabrics that can be worn well into the early days of summer. [illegible] pacas, chiffon flannels and tweeds that are loosely woven and therefore without the heavy bulk usually associated with tweed.

Though the jacket is shorter, skirts generally are slim, in keeping with the slim and straight silhouette of almost all spring clothes. As for skirt length, it's midcalf but looks shorter because of the narrow look.

Despite the fact that skirts are somewhat shorter, suits have a modest, quiet look due partly to the ladylike, lightweight fabrics in which they are cut and partly to the fact that colors are more subdued. Navy is again a prime spring favorite, followed by grey and beige. Blues generally are strong, ranging from the light shades to those with a pinkish cast.

There are many suits this year with low-necked collars and crescent-shaped sleeves. And the Empire influence, seen in dresses, appears in suits in the form of detail or seaming under the bust.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Mary Moore And Your Link With Home

A few hours ago the mother of a girl who reads this column telephoned me. She had just returned from a Christmas visit to her daughter in a city nearly 200 miles distant.

The son-in-law had taken a new position on the teaching staff of the college there and everything was wonderful what with a new 2-month-old son and a new home fronting on an international river, but the daughter was lonely for home. . . .

. . . But there is one little daily link with home it seems, and I'm it.

Isn't that fun? It seems too that I reveal more of our life in this city than I realize, for she says she reads the column every night to get those whiffs of home.

Dear B., if you read this I'm so glad if I've helped a little—remember I have two absent young people too and understand. Oh, how I understand.

I had no idea when I sat down at this typewriter that I was going to write about such subjects, but another such little story reached me in the past week and it seems appropriate to tell it too. A girl in Brandon says she knows now what her mother meant when she would say smugly, "It's an M.M. recipe."

At that time she had been unmarried, had come home from the office to her mother's meals. Now it's different. She's the mother and has to do the providing, and has this little link of a common cookery colum[illegible]ith home which is in Calgary.

It's good fun and may the Lord bless you both for letting me know.

QUESTION: I received a waffle iron for Christmas, but I have no recipe for waffles and have never made them before. I would be very pleased if you could give me a few recipes and also some instructions for cooking.

The lid has marked on it "cold, bake and hot." Where should the indicator be for waffles and how long do you cook them? Do you have to grease the waffle iron first and how would you go about it?

What is a good sauce to serve with them besides butter and maple syrup? My husband likes waffles but does not like maple syrup too well.

Mrs. V. M. P.

ANSWER: It is quite simple. Season the grids as follows, unless the manufacturers' directions advise you specifically not to: Brush the grids (waffle-cooking surface) with an unsalted melted fat such as vegetable shortening or salad oil. Do this while the iron is cold. Then heat the iron to baking temperature (when needle point reaches the centre of the word 'bake") and then turn off iron, open it and let it cool. When you want to make waffles heat the iron to the centre of the word "bake." (You never have to "season" the iron again for all waffle recipes contain enough fat to prevent sticking.

WAFFLES

Heat iron while making batter. Beat well 2 eggs (I do this in a squatty broad-mouthed pitcher that will admit the beater, and then it is easy to pour batter onto hot iron.) Beat into the eggs 2 cups buttermilk or fresh sour milk, 1 teaspoon soda, 2 cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon salt and 6 tablespoons soft (warm room temperature) shortening. (Use butter once in a while for it gives better flavor.) When batter is perfectly smooth, having been beaten with rotary or electric beater, it is ready to bake. (If desired you may add 1 teaspoon sugar — Pete does to his waffles.) Pour on batter at centre of iron and let it spread to about cover ¾ of the iron. When you close the lid the batter is pushed to the edges. Use too little batter rather than too much for your first few waffles until you know by experience just how much batter grid will hold without flowing over. Close top as quickly as possible. Bake until steaming stops. Then lift lid. Waffle should be a deep gold all over. Lift off waffle carefully with a fork, Immediately pour in more batter so next waffle will be ready when you are ready for it.

Let me know when you want another richer or varied type of waffle — for there are dozens: nut, cheese, bacon, sweet milk, blueberry, etc.

Serve waffles with maple syrup and butter, or corn syrup or honey or jam or jelly. My favorite is butter and black currant jelly.

Spring Silhouette Slim Vignette Coats Popular

By DOROTHY ROE

NEW YORK (AP)—The vignette coat with the spinet Tuxedo front is a highlight in the spring suit and coat collection of Seymour Fox, known for luxurious feminine tailoring with surprise linings and unexpected jewel trimmings.

Spinet, in fashion circles, has nothing to do with pianos. It's another way of saying "knit."

This spring Fox comes up with various "hidden jewel" touches on suits and coats, such as an outsize jewelled pin tucked under a pocket flap, or one jewelled button among a row of plain ones fastening a suit.

He uses pastel fleeces as light and soft as whipped cream in a series of little jewelled waist-length coats for afternoon or evening wear. These already are cutting a swath at fashionable resorts.

His Easter suits are likely to be fine fabrics of silk and wool or mohair mixtures, in charcoal or navy, often with button-in linen collars.

MEDIUM-PRICED SUITS

The low-necked suit to be worn with or without a vestee is a feature of the Gradoi: spring collection, concentrating on well-bred medium-priced suits and dresses with sophisticated styling. The designer likes Jacquard-woven Swiss cottins in dark town colours for spring wear, shows them in understated shath styles with removable white collars and cuffs.

Hannah Troy stresses the silk-dress-and-jacket costume as the most important item of any woman's wardrobe for spring, 1953. She shows a series of these, in both muted prints and dark taffetas or ribbed silks, with the soft, dressmaker touches for which she is known. These are dressy, lady-like outfits with braid or [illegible]pplique trim, simple enough for street wear, important enough for after-five occasions when the jacket is removed.

Aslo showing today, second day of New York's "press week" of fashion previews, were Miss America, Dave Bellsey and Jack Sarnoff. Visiting fashion editors received an over-all impression of a [illegible] silhouette which is predominantly slim, with fitted midriff [illegible] belts just beneath the bustline.

6—In Memoriam

ELMHIRST—Frank R. Elmhirst, lovingly remembering Dad, who departed this life, January 13th, 1952. —The family.

FERGUSON—In loving memory of Angus (Pete) Ferguson, who passed away one year ago today.
Loving and kind in all his ways
Upright and just to the end of his days.
Sincere and true in heart and mind
What a beautiful memory he left behind.
—Sadly missed by Ken, Audrey and family.

FERGUSON—In loving memory of Angus (Pete) Ferguson who passed away, Jan. 12, 1953.
It's lonesome here without you, Pete
And sad the weary way.
For life is not the same to me
Since you were called away.
If I had all the world to give,
I'd give it, yes, and more
To hear your voice and see your smile
And greet you at the door.
Love's greatest gift remembrance.
—Lovingly remembered by his wife, Luella.

LEE—In memory of a dear father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Lee, who passed away, Jan. 5th and Jan. 12th, 1945.
Those who we love go out of sight
But never out of mind,
They are cherished in the hearts
Of those they left behind.
—Ever remembered by Kenneth, Allan, Dorothy and Gordon.

McCOY—In loving memory of dear father J. T. McCoy who passed away Jan. 13, 1941 and mother who passed away Nov. 4, 1945.
The world may change from year to year,
And friends from day to day,
But never will the ones I love,
From memory pass away.
—Ever remembered by their daughter Keith Crerar.

MIDDLETON—In loving memory of my wife Greta, who passed away one year ago today, Jan. 12, 1953.
Sweet memories will linger forever,
Time cannot change them, it's true;
Years that may come cannot sever
My loving remembrance of you.
And some sweet day we'll meet again
Beyond the toil and strife,
And clasp each other's hand once more.
In Heaven, that happy life.
—Ever remembered by her husband Thomas.

PLUNKETT—In loving memory of Leslie Plunket who passed away two years ago today, Jan. 12, 1952.
—Ever remembered by his wife and family.

Annie Hughes U.K. Actress Dies In Sydney

SYDNEY (AP)—Annie Hughes, one of the grand old ladies of the British stage, died here last Thursday, it was reported today. She was 84.

A native of Southampton, England, Miss Hughes was hailed as a great dramatic actress in Britain, the United States and Australia. The list of roles she played during her 52-year stage career fills nearly two pages in Who's Who in the Theatre.

Miss Hughes made her first appearance on the London stage in 1885 and quickly established herself as a star. She went to the United States in 1906, appearing as Eliza Dibb in "Mr. Hopkinson," and returned again in 1912 in "Hawthorne, U. S. A." and "Henry V."

In 1915 she began a six-year stay in the United States during which she appeared in at least 12 New York and Washington productions. Among them were: "Macbeth," "The Merry Wives of Windsor," "A Woman of No Importance," "The Blue Pearl," and "The Saving Grace."

In 1924 she toured Australia and liked the country so much she later returned here to live.

Five On Trial For Track Fix

LONDON (AP)—Five men went on trial today charged with plotting the bizarre Francasal horse race swindle—the big betting fix that failed.

The prosecution described it as a "cunning, clever and well organized conspiracy . . . a case which savors of some of the more classic detective stories connected with the turf."

The Francasal story started July 16 last year at Bath racecourse. A horse entered as Francasal won at odds of 10-to-1.

The prosecution alleges the winner was not Francasal but a ringer called Santa Amaro which looked like Francasal's twin.

The prosecution alleges that the accused men stood to win £60,000 ($168,000) but the "conspiracy did not reach its final fruition and the men did not get the money."

North-enders

The company had withdrawn their application for permission to build on Hunter St. beside Mark St. church.

INCREASE VISIBILITY

Erection of the service station would increase visibility at the intersection, thus making it safer for traffic and pedestrians.

The vicinity of the site was already highly commercialized.

There would be no undue noise from operation of the service station as no automobile repairs would be carried out.

The service station would be attractive in appearance.

Other companies operated service stations in the immediate vicinity.

When the company's four-man delegation retired from the scene, the committee moved into the larger room where Mr. Gordon presented the petitioners' arguments.

WELL SERVED

Public convenience is well served by the three service stations now in the area.

Widening of the intersection would increase the danger to pedestrians, particularly to children going to the playground and municipal skating rink.

Back in the smaller committee room, free of both delegations, the committee got down to consideration of several aspects of the problem.

City Solicitor W. F. Huycke explained that there were several bylaws regarding the use of land passed as long ago as about 1912 and they were still in force. An applicant is entitled to a building licence unless council is preparing a zoning bylaw, in which case the court would adjourn an application until the bylaw was prepared, governing use of the property in question.

City Clerk E. A. Outram explained, in answer to a question from Ald. Stan McBride, that Hamilton was the only municipality which power to restrict the number of service stations.

The committee also adopted a proposal by Ald. Harold Rehill that the clerk prepare a chart of the number of residents affected by the proposed service station, which he would limit to a radius of two blocks of the site.

Mayor Norman Graham pointed out that the some of the signatures on the petition included husbands and wives and some were of residents three blocks away from the site.

HIDEOUT—Hidden keys to freedom were confiscated at Okalla prison farm in Burnaby, B.C., when they were discovered on George Mallock, 38, bail-jumper awaiting trial on a narcotics conspiracy charge. Four thin black lines are jewellers' saws found between the soles of Mallock's shoes. The two United States $10 bills were in a secret pocket in one of the heels. Mallock was captured in New York after fleeing from Vancouver in early 1951 while free on $20,000 bail.

Food Supply In China Short Chinese Told To 'Eat Less'

Assessment of events of 1953 in Communist China suggests strongly that 1954 will be a testing period for the Peking regime, Frank Robertson writes from Hong Kong to The Christian Science Monitor.

Two principal factors point to this conclusion: the high cost of an industrialization program which must be paid for with grains and raw materials and the fact that generally speaking 1953 was a poor year for the agricultural production which accounts for at least 80 percent of China's national income.

FLOUR RATIONED

Throughout the year Peking spokesmen reduced their grain production targets. In February it was estimated that 1953 production would exceed the 1952 figure by more than nine percent. By the last quarter, however, spokesmen were asserting without much conviction that it was still possible to equal 1952's production.

Meanwhile, the Communist government continued to sign trade agreements which in the main provided for exchange of agricultural products and raw materials in return for machinery and other raw materials China needed fo its industrialization program.

Already there is clear evidence of a food shortage in China. Flour went on ration in northern cities —where wheat rather than rice is a staple—in November. Sale of cooking oil had been restricted in many parts of China for some time and in some areas it is adulterated. In districts in South China only inferior quality rice is on sale.

CONTROLS RELAXED

Reports reaching Hong Kong come mainly from cities. There is reason to believe there is less food available in rural areas.

Harvest time varies in China but generally speaking, the leanest period is just before mid-year. Almost certainly it will be really lean this year for Peking has committed so much of its grain abroad. This probably is not a significant percentage of total production based on 1952 figures but the picture has been changed radically by the nation's failure to meet 1953 targets by at least 10 percent. Probably all exports would have been covered by that one-tenth.

For weeks now Peking has been staging a propaganda campaign hammering on the theme, "Eat less, produce more" and there's reason to believe this is part of a propaganda build-up foreshadowing even tighter economic and political controls to cope with discontent and possible unrest when the food shortage becomes more acute.

SOFT POLICY

By and large 1953 saw some relaxation of controls. Communists adopted a soft policy in the country in an effort to stimulate production. There was no emotional mass campaign as in the past.

But there is reason to believe this period now is over. The clue probably is to be found in the "new general line of state" first enunciated in November at the conference of the All-China Federation of Industrial and Commercial Circles.

This line refers to the transitional period between private capital and state capitalism. All private enterprise, it was laid down, must be transformed into state enterprises. Resistance will be regarded as sabotage. This pronouncement which has been given great prominence in the Chinese press is interpreted as the final blow to private enterprise in Communist China.

Takes Hard Way Out

SHAWNEE, Okla. (AP)—While her amazed owners watched, a holstein cow Monday leaped from a second-storey barn window, got up and walked contentedly away. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bryant, owners of a large dairy farm near here, said the cow dropped 20 feet without apparent injury.

Teach More French —Governor-General

TORONTO (CP)—Governor-General Massey suggested Monday that French instruction in English-speaking high schools should be carried to the point where students could converse freely with French-speaking Canadians.

"We cannot claim that a child emerging from one of these schools can speak French in any fluent or intelligible manner," he said in an address to the Canadian Club of Toronto. "There is nothing absurd or presumptuous in the idea that every Canadian child should be able to speak our two languages."

Government Formed Viet Nam Crisis Ends

SAIGON (AP) — Prince Buu Loc formed a new Viet Nam government today, ending a 26-day cabinet crisis. His administration includes 15 ministers, one of whom is a close associate of chief of state Bao Dai.

The new government succeeds that of Premier Nguyen Van Tam, who resigned Dec. 17 after Bao Dai turned down his proposals to make contact with the Communist-led Vietminh rebels looking toward peace negotiations.

The Bao Dai man in the new cabinet is Nguyen De, a member of chief of state's staff, who was given the post of minister of state. It was the first time that Bao Dai, often under fire from Viet Nam Nationalists as being too pro-French, has had a personal representative in the cabinet.

Viet Nam is one of the three French-associated states of Indo-China. The others are Laos and Cambodia.

Crash Hospitalizes 3 Damage Totals $1,500

ORILLIA (CP) — Three persons, two men and a woman, were taken to hospital Monday night after a pickup truck collided with a town bus, causing $1,500 damage.

Mrs. Charles Middleton of Orillia, a passenger in the bus, was released after treatment for cuts and shock. Held in hospital in "fairly good condition" are Roy Andy, 20, the truck driver, and Charles McNamara, 20, a passenger, both of Weston near Toronto.

Sees Newsprint Rationing Nearing End

EDINBURGH (CP) — Roy H. Thomson, Canadian publisher whose interests now include newspapers in England and Scotland, said today he doesn't think newsprint rationing will last much longer in Britain.

"The time must soon come when it will be abandoned," Thomson said in a luncheon speech to the [illegible] now are among the few commodities rationed in Britain.

When rationing did end, Thomson added, it was inevitable that the efficient newspapers would grow more prosperous, and the poorly-managed less prosperous. "The key to all this will be advertising, and those who get the volume of advertising will have the money to produce bigger and better newspapers."

COMPARES WITH CANADA

He contrasted the size of newspapers in Britain and Canada, saying the Canadian position was the result of the availability of newsprint. British papers in comparison ranged from eight to 12 pages, seldom exceeding the latter figure. (Newsprint is rationed in Britain on the basis of eight pages for a paper which sells at 1½d, 10 pages for 2d and 12 pages for 3d.)

Thomson arrived in Britain last week-end to take up permanent residence in Edinburgh. He will make occasional trips to Canada, where his son Kenneth now directs the Thomson group's North American interests. Thomson papers in Britain are the Scotsman of Edinburgh and two companion papers, and the weekly Canada Review, which has offices in London and is published in Bournemouth.

Red Vietminh Flees Battle

SAIGON (AP) — The battered remnants of seven Communist-led Vietminh battalions fled into the jungle of central Indo-China today, apparently ending the battle for the fortress of Seno. The French command, claiming that losses of 1,500 men had been inflicted on the Vietminh, sent parachutsits and North African infantrymen with strong air support in hot pursuit.

The objective of the French command seemed to be to push the counter-attack which led to the rout of the Vietminh at Seno and to develop a counter-offensive aimed at taking back middle Laos which the Vietminh seized with one division in a surprise attack Christmas Eve. The Vietminh offensive carried it to the Mekong river in the region of Thakhek, cutting Indo-China in two.

There still was no indication when the estimated 20,000 Communist-led rebels would launch their anticipated assault on the big French fortress position on the northern border of Laos.

41 Wolves Killed In Simcoe County

ORILLIA (CP) — Forty - one wolves were killed during 1953 in Simcoe county, 24 of them in the last four months, Fred Richardson, Ontario lands department game warden, reported today.

Simcoe county lies between the western shore of Lake Simcoe and Georgian bay in southern Ontario.

Most of the wolves, Richardson reported, were shot. Four were trapped. All of them except one, believed to be a timber wolf, are bush wolves.

Their stomachs yielded turkey feathers, remains of foxes, coons, mice, rabbits and birds. One wolf had a deer hide in his stomach.

Kitchener Alderman Urges Civic Economy

KITCHENER (CP)—Ald. Fred Dreger, chairman of the city finance committee, told the city council today that the Kitchener tax rate will have to be increased four mills unless each board, commission and council committee "show a real determination for economy."

Ald. Dreger said the debenture is more than $8,000,000 and by the end of 1954 it will be near $10,000,000.

EXPLAIN ESCAPE—Detroit Deputy Police Superintendent Kennedy Lawrence (seated left) listens attentively as patrolman W. M. Krupka (standing) and detective W. H. Glisman explain how Donald Ritchie escaped from them. Ritchie, a key witness in the shooting of CIO president Walter Reuther, escaped from a hotel room where they had been on guard.

Dealing In Weanling Pigs, Cattle Winter Farm Activity

"The price of farm real estate has pyramided in recent months," says a Halton county note in the weekly crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture.

Although there is nothing stirring in actual crop news, this compendium from agricultural representatives is a gossipy medium.

The potato market is dead in Dufferin. Bruce farmers are getting in their fertilizer supplies for 1954. In that county there is a steady increase in breeding stock for swine; weanling pigs continue to demand a very high price.

At the other side of the province, Glengarry: "Little pigs are the only livestock that appear to be in demand."

Casual labor has been priced out of jobs cutting domestic firewood in farm timber. York county says: "Due to the high cost of labor, farmers are putting very little emphasis on wood cutting. In some intances farmers with woodlots have been installing oil furnaces." That trend in Peterborough has been reported fairly active in the last five years or thereabouts.

Norfolk: "The hog population is still on the increase with a brisk demands for weanling pigs." Northumberland: "Little pigs are booming at community sales. There are signs that more than the usual registered seed and improved pastures will be planted next spring."

Middlesex: "There is a strong demand for pasture to rent, acreage of this being curtailed each year by the increase in cash crops." In Huron there is a heavy demand for purebred swine.

Dundas county stables are filled to capacity with cattle; roughage feed is in good supply to carry the stock through the winter. In Leeds county farmers are taking advantage of low price to improve their breeding herds. That indicates culling.

Thirty-six exhibitors of grain corn at the eastern Ontario crop improvement meeting at Kemptville reflects the "interest that is now being taken in this particular crop in Glengarry."

Roy Rogers, Trigger To Headline CNE

TORONTO (CP) — Roy Rogers, singing Hollywood cowboy and his trick horse, Trigger, will headline the grandstand show at the 1954 Canadian National Exhibition, Hiram McCallum, CNE general manager, announced today.

The cowboy actor will share the spotlight with a troupe of palominos, dogs, singers and a comedian. Cost of bringing the troupe to the CNE Aug. 27-Sept. 11 was not divulged.

Rogers will bring his wife, singing star Dale Evans, who will ride her horse, Buttermilk. Featured with Roger's will be comedian Pat Brady and his mule, Nellie Bell.

Swedish King Asks Bigger Air Force

STOCKHOLM (AP)—King Gustaf Adolf VI asked Sweden today to spend more on its air force, already estimated as the fourth largest in the world.

The monarch's request came in the speech from the throne at the state opening of the Swedish Riksdag (parliament).

"During the past year the general international situation seems to have undergone a certain relaxation," the speech noted; but added:

"There is general unanimity regarding the necessity of maintaining the strength and effectivity of our armed forces."

The speech said defence expenses during the coming budget year should remain largely unaltered—the equivalent of about $400,000,000.

Elderly Doctor Dies

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. Elias Clouse, regarded as Toronto's oldest practising physician at the time of his retirement two years ago, died Monday. He would have celebrated his 98th birthday Friday. His mother was a cousin of Dr. David Livingstone, famous missionary-explorer in Africa.

Blue Cross Hospital Plan To Raise Rates 26 Per Cent

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario Blue Cross Plan for Hospital Care will put its rates up 26 per cent, effective April 1.

D. W. Ogilvie, director of the pre-paid hospital care plan, said late Monday the rate increase has been made necessary by rising hospital costs.

Typical of the advances are those for comprehensive family coverage, semi - private, from $3.85 to $5.30 a month and for comparable coverage under the "service" contract from $3.65 to $4.70.

The Toronto and Lakeshore Labor Council (CIO) Monday night criticized the increase, said Blue Cross gives inadequate representation to users of hospital service in its management, and said it serves as a collection agency that makes it easier for hospitals to raise their rates with assurance of getting their money.

"The domination of Blue Cross rests with the hospitals," the council said.

OMA OPERATED

The plan is operated under sponsorship of the Ontario Medical Association.

Mr. Ogilvie said that by March 31 the Blue Cross plan in Ontario will have incurred losses of about $250,000 and, without the rate increase, this would increase by June 30 to $1,600,000.

He said it is estimated the new rates will cover needs for the next 2½ years. In addition, a new plan to be known as a deductible-comprehensive plan was to be put into effect at rates slightly below the present plans ($4.35 as against the $5.30 rate). Under this plan, subscribers would pay the first $25 of any inpatient or outpatient hospital bill.

The last Blue Cross rate increase was in October, 1951.

The April increase does not apply to members of other Blue Cross plans outside Ontario.

Priest 'Privileged' To Die With Cancer

PARSONS, Kan. (AP) — "I consider it a privilege to die of cancer."

Rev. Julius Busse uttered these words from his hospital bed, and added:

"You see, with cancer you have time to prepare for death. With something like a heart attack you go too quickly to make your final preparations."

Smiling, but speaking matter-of-factly, the 46-year-old Roman Catholic priest said in an interview:

"I welcome death."

Death is no stranger to the priest, an army chaplain five years. "It isn't the certainty of death that men fear," he said. "It is the uncertainty of death. The soldiers I saw die weren't frightened any longer after they knew for sure they were going to die."

Trapped By Flames Young Mother Dies

Boyle Funeral Attended By Family, Friends

COBOURG — (ENS) — Helen Boyle, 24-year-old St. Michael's hospital lab technician, believed to have been murdered by an unknown assailant who inflicted fatal head injuries last week, was buried Monday morning in St. Michael cemetery, after funeral mass at the church. For the father, Jack, it was the second family funeral in about a year, her brother, Bill, dying in a fire last year.

The service at the church was conducted by the Rev. P. J. Collins. The service in the chapel at St. Michael's cemetery was in charge of the Rev. R. J. Garvey. The crowd of relatives and friends of the family filled the small chapel to capacity. Some stood outside in the sub-zero weather. Inside the breath of those present was visible in the frosty air. A long line of cars were parked along the cemetery's winding road.

Following the last rites of the church in the cemetery chapel, the oaken casket was borne by the pall-bearers around to the vault at the south-end of the building where it wil remain until interred in the Boyle family plot.

There were no detectives mingling among the mourners, in spite of one news service despatch. There were no curious strangers among the people in the church. Present were the Boyle family and their relatives from the district and a large number of family friends.

In Toronto investigation into the girl's death is continuing. At first, it was believed she suffered her injuries, two severe skull fractures, in a fall. Authorities said later, however, it appeared she had been bludgeoned.

East Germans Court French People

BERLIN — The way the East Germans are warming up for the Big Four conference, you'd think only France is going to be represented.

They have been dutifully following up the Soviet line on be-nice-to-France with posters and proclamations demanding cessation of the war in Indo-China, an immediate conference with Ho [illegible] and withdrawal of [illegible] forces immediately.

In addition, they are putting out broad suggestions that France may, at the Big Four discussions, get together through the offices of the Soviet in a preparatory effort to solve the war in Indo-China. Through Communist propaganda agencies in East Germany pronouncements are being made that Vietminh representatives may be visiting, coincidence no doubt, in Soviet Germany while the Big Four talks are held.

THEME OF PEACE

For the time being, the demand for East German participation in the big-power discussions are somewhat muted to handle the theme of peace in our time in Indo-China. The Communist forces of Ho, their German comrades are saying, have grown so powerful that they could cut Indo-China in two as a force recently did by traversing a mountain chain in Laos.

This coup is played up as a tremendous military feat, given virtual Communist acclaim as the praise heaped on Red China during the Korean war. It follows then, the Communist here say that France had better get down to business of talking peace in Indo-China. From then on, goes the thesis, the French can get themselves a fine deal by staying out of the European Army, redress the balance of power in West Europe by bringing in more strength on the Rhine and thus be assured of the benevolent peacefulness of Russia.

The "traditions" of Franco-Russian friendship are cited regularly in this pre-conference publicity campaign to show ostensibly that France went along the wrong track because of American pressure. There's time though, the German Communists proclaim for France to readjust, make peace in the Far East and reap many benefits.

SOVIET SOPS

Among these boons, the Soviet German list happily, is lasting amity with East Germany. The reasoning on this line goes: Since France is historically suspicious of Germany, and France makes her peace with the Soviet, then France can expect only favored treatment from the East Germans even if there's a united Germany.

Of course, the moot question remains: Does France fear a united Germany more than she does a divided Germany, even with West German rearmament?

That's a point the Communist Germans overlook blithely as they beat the drums a little fiercer for "French understanding" in the weeks before the Big Four convene.

DOTS AND DATELINES: PARIS: Recent nationalist outbreaks in Morocco may bring active participation of El Glaoui's Berber troops—to help smash the disorder. The Glaoui was responsible for deposing the former Sultan, installing a pro-French ruler, and now the French are telling him they require reinforcements to maintain tranquility. They canont get armed assistance from any other quarter . . . DUBLIN: The Eirean government won't listen to entreaties from deputies to the Dail to increase their salaries. Some of the members of the national parliament pleaded that they have to hide from the constituents to avoid buying them a drink. Their salaries are less than $1,800 a year . . . LONDON: Scotland Yard is seriously thinking about using television to flash photographs of suspects wanted in cases around the country. It was first tried without prior announcement a couple of months ago and apparently proved successful . . . VIENNA: An interesting statistical compilation of the longevity of Soviet officialdom is making the rounds here. IRON CURTAIN ITEMS (obtained in Berlin and Vienna). WARSAW: Billions of zlotys have been appropriated to build a new canal system that will link East Germany with the Soviet Union via Poland. A special Soviet technical mission has been sent from Moscow to supervise the project. It's supposed to be completed by 1956 . . . SOFIA: The Bulgar Communist hierarchy is trying to shake loose civil servants and white collar workers from their jobs into collective farms. A decree has just been drafted which demands that minor civil servants must volunteer for new jobs on farms . . . STUTTGART: Three hunters, one of them a woman, were wounded while fox-hunting in this area. They cornered the fox near a waterpipe, fired a volley — which hit them. The buckshot bounced off the pipe and struck the hunters. They were worth saving and are recovering in a local hospital. The fox escaped.

ANSWER TO MILD WINTERS—Artificial outdoor ice rinks are the answer to mild winters which have cut down outdoor skating in some parts of Canada to as low as 15 days a season. While some youngsters play football and others baseball, this artificial rink in a Toronto park permits skating on days when natural ice would melt. There are four of these in Toronto and 35 in North America. They are a boon to budding hockey players.

Outdoor Artificial Rinks Boon In Toronto Area

By JIM BASTABLE

TORONTO (CP)—An $8,7000 investment in concrete slabs, plastic pipes and freezing machines may be the answer to warm winters that have limited outdoor skating in some parts of Canada to as few as 15 days a year.

It's the outdoor artificial ice rink. Far cheaper than an indoor rink with its costly building, it ensures that potential hockey greats among school children can get the practice they need even when temperatures run above the freezing point.

Seven have been built in the Toronto area, and Norm Ware, general secretary of the city's Catholic Youth organization, says "They've saved the hockey lives of many children. I'm sold on them." The CYO operates 75 teams in the city.

The $87,000 investment came out of suburban York township's civic funds and went into one of three rinks spotted around the township four years ago. Four more were built in Toronto. Altogether there are about 35 outdoor artificial ice rinks in Canada and the United States. Many more are planned.

SYSTEM UNIQUE

"The rinks are tremendous," say Toronto parks officials. "Youngsters who ordinarily would have little chance to skate love them."

Toronto parks and recreation department officials have four more in the blueprint stage. Inquiries have come from civic authorities in England and Australia.

The idea of the outdoor artificial rink isn't new. There are several in Europe, and there is the internationally famed rink in New York's Rockefeller Centre—first in North America. But it's application to the community, in a planned system of rinks throughout the city, is unique.

"It can't miss," said the rink's designer, Clifford Austin Meadows, Toronto consulting engineer. About 15 of the outdoor artificial rinks in Canada and the U.S. were supplied by Meadows. He said in an interview:

"In all my 62 years I have never seen an outdoor project take hold like this one. It's a sure-fire bet. Why, with the winters getting warmer all the time, we'll be putting up artificial rinks all over the place."

FARTHER SOUTH

Halifax, Ottawa, Hamilton, London, Vancouver and Victoria civic officials have plans for rinks of their own. In the U.S., there is one rink in Buffalo, four in Detroit, one in Syracuse and another in Rochester.

"The rinks will go farther south than that," Meadows said. "We've had dozens of inquiries from United States cities, including Texas, They've come in from London and New Zealand, too."

Even cities in the "frigid" belt are interested. Regina, Fort William and Sioux Lookout, Ont., are a few in Canada. In the U.S., Minneapolis, Milwaukee and Chicago are looking into it.

Four years ago Meadows installed the first outdoor artificial rink in the Toronto area at Riverdale Terrace for commercial interests. That cost $500,000. However, the four rinks in Toronto, which are less elaborate, ran from $87,000 to $125,000—depending on their size and type of material used. Some can be bought for $47,000.

NOT BAD PRICE

"That's not a bad price," said Oscar Pearson, Toronto's deputy parks commissioner. "We spend nearly $200,000 a year to put up the natural ice rinks. It's hardly worth it for 15 good days of skating."

Most of the outdoor artificial rinks are 75 feet wide and 175 feet long. They operate from Nov. 15 to March 1.

Each rink costs the city about $17,000 a year to run. To help pay some of the cost, skaters are charged a moderate admission occasionally and skate free of charge other times.

"The more I go around and see the millions of dollars worth of fun these kids are having, the more I'm convinced of the worthiness of the whole thing," said Pearson.

YEAR'S BIGGEST UPSET

Last season's National Hockey League semi-finals produced an upset rated No. 9. It was Boston Bruins' elimination of Detroit Red Wings in the best-of-seven series. Montreal Canadiens beat the Bruins in the Stanley Cup final.

[illegible] No. 14 met the Fire Hall No. 4 team. The first game went to the Smokeaters by a 18-9 score with the Posties scoring seven points in the last two ends. The second game saw the Posties continue winning the frames until they were leading 10-7 but No. 4 went into the lead in the next end by scoring a four. Again No. 14 came on and by scoring a single made it 11-all going into the tenth frame. The last three ends went against them and they lost 19-11.

At the Legion Hall, Red Patch No. 13 met Lawn Boys No. 2. In the first game No. 13 jumped into the lead with a five end, then the next four frames went to Lawn Boys as they made it 5-all going into the sixth frame. From there on the Red Patch took over and won out by holding their opponents to two singles while they collected enough to win 14-7. The second game saw No. 2 go into the lead with the Red Patch coming from behind to tie it up and go into a lead and continue scoring until they won 15-4, thereby sweeping two victories.

At the Legion, Fire Hall No. 10 in the first game against Legion No. 1 came from behind to tie it up and then go into the lead but they faltered then as No. 1 took over the scoring and holding No. 10 to two singles in the balance of the game won it by a 13-5 score. In the second game No. 10 had to come from behind again to tie it up at 5-all in the fifth frame. Then the battle see-sawed as it was tied twice more, then the Fire Laddies scored a two and No. 1 came back in the next frame with a single. The last frame saw No. 1 lying three when the skip of No. 1 froze one right on the kitty to win a tight battle 10-8.

At the Orange Hall LOL No. 12 met Legion No. 3. The first game saw No. 3 go into the lead but No. 12 tied it at 3-all in the fourth frame and then went into the lead which was never seriously threatened, especially when the LOL team captured the last four ends and also the game by a 16-6 score. The second game was 9-1 in favor of the LOL in the 6th frame. Then No. 3 came to life and started to capture all the ends, except one, including the final end by a single to make the final score 10-all.

At the Legion, Glens No. 6 in the first game came from behind twice to tie the score against Legion No. 9. Then in the eleventh frame No. 9 scored a single to make it 7-all. The final frame saw the Glens score the single and win a very closely fought battle 8-7. The second game saw the Glens again coming from behind to make it 4-all in the 4th frame and then they scored in every one of the next ends, allowing No. 9 to take the last frame only with a 4 as No. 9 lost 8-16. These are the first double games Legion No. 9, who are leading the league, has lost this season.

The games between Orphans No. 8 vs. Legion No. 11 will be played Monday but there is no report on the Legion No. 7 vs. Legion No. 5 game. This game must be played this week.

Queen Elizabeth Opens New Zealand Parliament Crowning Point Of Tour

WELLINGTON, N. Z. (CP)—The Queen today opened her 100-year-old New Zealand Parliament for the first time, going through a ceremony almost identical with royal openings of the Mother of Parliaments, London's House of Commons.

Today's formal opening of the fourth session of the 30th Parliament of New Zealand was the crowning point of the Queen's New Zealand tour.

Ten thousand persons gathered outside the parliamentary building to see the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh.

Three hundred guests were seated on the steps leading up to the main entrance. Inside another 400 sat on tiered seats in the members' social room. Inside the chamber of the legislative council, where the formal opening was performed, were another 300.

Until 1950 New Zealand had the two-chamber system of government but the Legislative Council, New Zealand's upper house, was abolished by the present government. The council chamber now is used only for formal openings of Parliament.

READS THRONE SPEECH

The Queen was gowned in a rich robe of state as she read the speech from the throne. She sat on a richly carved and embroidered throne. On a similar one, to her left and slightly behind her, sat the duke.

The speech outlined the government's legislative plans for the coming session, mostly domestic, and said the Dominion would "continue to contribute worthily towards lessening of international tensions and the preservation of concord among nations.

It praised "the community of spirit which exists among the parliaments of our Commonwealth."

After the formal opening the Queen and the duke attended a reception for members of Parliament, and the Queen held an investiture at the town hall.

Cheering New Zealanders lined the streets for the drive to and from the parliament buildings. The royal couple were mobbed by 15,000 school children at a rally on the local rugger ground.

Choongs Considered Likely To Win Badminton Tourney

TORONTO (CP)—A new crop of champions will be crowned at the 10th annual invitation badminton tournament at Toronto's Strathgowan Club opening today.

But the men's seeded competitions are virtually declared. David and Eddie Choong of Malaya, considered the world's greatest players, have entered the six-day competition, one of Canada's premier badminton events, and are seen shoo-ins over the best that Canada and the United States have to offer.

Stuart Lawson, Strathgowan president, said that none of last year's winners will compete. "A complete new crop is in the cards," he said.

FINALS SUNDAY

A total of 285 entries have been received from Ontario, Quebec and the United States. The semi-finals are scheduled for Saturday and the finals Sunday.

Dr. David Freeman of San Diego Calif., last year's men's seeded singles champion, has retired. Leading contenders for the title are the Choong brothers.

They will be faced by Don Smythe of Toronto, Canadian men's singles champion, and high-ranking Bev Wescott of Toronto and Gordie Simpson of Montreal. Ron Palmer of Fort Monmouth, N.J., eighth ranking U.S. player will also seek the title.

The Choong brothers will team up for the men's doubles' title, won last year by Joey Alston of Detroit and Winn Rogers of Arcadia, Calif. Alston and Rogers are not entered this year. Canada's hopes are pinned on Smythe and Bud Porter of Toronto.

Peg Varner of Mt. Holyoke College, Mass., who upset Marjorie Shedd of Toronto, Canadian ladies' single champion, at the Montreal amateur invitation meet last December, will try for a repeat performance over the Canadian.

TITLE OPEN

Pete Ferguson of Woodstock, last year's open winner, has entered seeded competition, and his title will be fought for by Len Thompson, Dave Smith and John Christenson of Toronto.

Men's doubles competition is expected from George Boner of Toronto and Ray Cornish of Woodstock; Jack Martin and Herb Kirconnel of Toronto; and Charlie McKeon and Lee Ronalds of Toronto.

British Writers Agree Russia Leads In Chess

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—In the wake of a tournament which aroused excited and admiring comment, British writer [illegible] agreed Monday that Russia was destined to remain supreme in international chess.

This [illegible] ters tournament at Hastings, Sussex, which ended in a first-place tie between Russia's 29-year-old David Bronstein and England's 44-year-old Hugh Alexander. Highlight of the contest was a victory for Alexander over Bronstein in a 120-move match which experts consider a text-book classic of sustained pursuit.

But authorities agreed with The Sunday Times that the Russian lead in chess is lengthening.

HIGH FORM OF CULTURE

"The game is regarded as one of the highest forms of Soviet culture," said The Sunday Times.

"Aleaxnder is not the only non-Soviet player to believe that the Soviet masters are far ahead of those of other countries and that—for this reason—the gap is widening."

In a post-tournament statement, Alexander, a former Cambridge mathematician, said:

"When we read our paper now . . . we shall not think of the Russians as a number of sinister and allen creatures sitting in the Kremlin, we shall think of our friend David Bronstein. And when our Russian friends go back and read their papers they will be able to think of us not as top-hatted capitalists or down-trodden workers, but as friends."

"WHO IS THE PAWN?"

Alexander, incidentaly, is a foreign office official. He is also the expert who last year picked Canada's Abe Yanofsky to win the British championship—and win it Yanofsky later did.

One columnist took exception to the general glow of good-feeling reflected in Alexander's kind words about the Russians. Cassandra, writing in The Daily Mirror, suggests Alexander might do well to keep his pawns and politics separate.

"Does he really suggest," asks Cassandra, "that the vast tyrannical regime of the Soviet Union holding down at least 2,500,000 slaves can be influenced in their attitude . . . by the charming civilities of civilized, well-intentioned folk sitting down at the same chess table? Who is the pleasant pawn in this playful business?"

Tokyo Trying For 1960 Games

TOKYO (AP)—Tokyo is trying to outbid 14 other cities for the 1960 Olympic Games.

Japanese Olympic officials have completed blueprints of an ambitious project for their proposed Olympic site, a compact layout at the 120-acre Meiji outer garden in the heart of metropolitan Tokyo.

One major project calls for the construction of a 100,000-seat track and field stadium. It will be built by enlarging the present 45,000-capacity stadium.

An indoor arena with a 10,000 seating capacity now is under construction at the northwestern end of the Meiji garden ground. It will be used for wrestling, gymnastics, fencing, boxing and other indoor sports.

Tokyo's application made in 1952 at Helsinki was accepted along with those of 14 other cities. Tokyo was awarded the 1940 games but the war washed them out.

Lumley, Harvey and Richard were first choices by narrow point-margins over Al Rollins, Chicago, Bill Gadsby, Chicago and Howe. Richard's margin was one point.

VOTES WEIGHTED

Hockey writers and broadcasters in the six NHL cities voted. The number of selectors varied but voting strength was computed to make it identical in each city.

Closest for unanimous choice, 90 points, was Kelly with 87.

The choices for first and second team were:

First Team: Goal: Lumley, Toronto; Defence, Kelly, Detroit, Harvey, Montreal; Centre, Mosdell, Montreal; Right Wing; Richard, Montreal; Left Wing, Lindsay, Detroit.

Marlene Named Ontario's Best Athlete

TORONTO (CP)—Marlene Stewart won a new feather for her jaunty tartan golfing cap today—she was named Ontario's outstanding athlete of 1953 in a poll conducted by the Ontario Sports Writers and Sportscasters Association.

It was the second win for the freckle-faced 19-year-old from Fonthill in the Niagara peninsula. She took the award three years ago when it was inaugurated after she startled the golf world by capturing the Canadian women's close and open championships. This time her victory in the British women's amateur championship brought the award.

The cool little shotmaker, now attending school in Florida, got 5 points in balloting in which 31 association members participated. Cliff Lumsden, Toronto's world champion swimmer, ranked second with 33 points and Tip Logan, place-kicking end of Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Big Four Football Union, ranked third with 2.

TO BE DINNER FEATURE

A plaque commemorating the award will be presented to Marlene at the association's third annual $25-a-plate sports celebrity dinner for crippled children Thursday, Feb. 18. The association gives all proceeds of the dinner to the Ontario Society for Cippled Children and this year expects to raise close to $20,000.

Marlene's second win gives golf a clean sweep of the award in its three years. Last year the winner was Gerry Kesselring of Kitchener, who gave up amateur golf this winter to follow the professional tournament trail in the United States.

Earlier, the Fonthill girl was selected in the annual Canadian Press poll as Canada's outstanding woman athlete of 1953. In another CP poll she ranked even with Mayor Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa as Canada's woman of the year.

East German June Riots Might Have Meant Third War Nuschke Says

BERLIN (Reuters)—Deputy Premier Otto Nuschke of East Germany said Monday he was told by Kremlin military leaders that if the East German government had been overthrown and arrested in the riots last June, "it would have meant a third world war." Nuschke told a press conference the statement was made to him in Moscow recently by Soviet War Minister Nicolai Bulganin and his deputy, Marshal [illegible].

Nuschke demanded that the U.S. government take immediate measures to clean up its "espionage centres" in West Berlin whether the forthcoming four-power foreign ministers conference is held there or not.

He said Western agents should have learned from the anti-government riots through East Germany last June that their efforts would fail to overthrow the Communist regime.

"Assuming even that the June 17 provocation had succeeded and our government would have been arrested, what would have been the result?" he said.

THIRD WORLD WAR

"I asked this question in Moscow recently to Marshal Bulganin and Marshal Sokolovsky. They answered it would have meant a third world war."

Nuschke held the press conference a few hours before the Big Four representatives in Berlin were scheduled to meet here for the third time to discuss a site and technical arrangements for the foreign ministers conference. Western observers believed another meeting would be required after today, but the atmosphere of the talks, started last Thursday, continues to be friendly, an Allied spokesman said.

ALLEGED SPYINGS

Nuschke devoted the major portion of his statement to the alleged activities of American agents in East Germany. He declared their actions marked a "gross breach" of the 1945 Potsdam agreement and contradicted the U. S. "professed aim" of lessening world tension.

Nuschke gave a detailed account of alleged American espionage and sabotage centres in West Berlin, including names, full addresses and telephone numbers of alleged American and German agents.

He said the aim of their "diversionary work" was to weaken East Germany economically and bring about the overthrow of its government.

250 Carpenters Go On Strike

CORNWALL (CP) — Members of Local 2307, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America (AFL) went on strike today in a dispute with Cornwall builders exchange over union security. About 250 carpenters are taking part in the strike.

Neil Merpaw, union business agent, said picket lines were set up for a short time this morning in front of the office and shops of John Entwhistle, exchange president. The lines were withdrawn, however, because of the sub-zero weather.

Only two large construction projects were affected by the strike today. They are an addition to the nurses residence at Cornwall General Hospital and a new stock preparation building at Howard Smith Paper Mils Ltd.

Thomas F. Wilson

WARKWORTH (ENS)—Dartford United church was filled to capacity Sunday afternoon for the funeral of the late Thomas Franklin (Frank) Wilson, a life-long resident of Percy township, who died Friday, in his 73rd year, after an illness of nearly three years.

The Rev. A. L. Siscoe, pastor, who conducted the service, was assisted by the Rev. T. E. Kennedy of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church, Warkworth.

Pallbearers were Alex Merrill, Walter Honey, William Simpson, Alex Lockhart, William Warner and Charles Ewing. Flower bearers were Louis Dunk, Eldon Ewing, Eric Merrill, Thomas Convey, Hayden Smith and John Broadworth Jr. Burial was in Warkworth cemetery.

Relatives attended the funeral from Buffalo, Toronto, Cobourg, Peterborough and Montreal. A solo was sung by John Coggins.

Born on a farm adjoining the one where he spent his last years, Mr. Wilson was a son of the late William Wilson and Annie Ousterhout. He was predeceased four years ago by his wife, the former Bertha L. White.

Surviving are four daughters and one son, Mrs. Charles Honey (Marion) and Mrs. Clayton Young (Mabel) both of Percy township, Clara and William, both at home, Mrs. E. L. Fulsom (Grace) of Buffalo, N.Y. and nine grandchildren. Mr. Wilson was the last of a family of five brothers and sisters.

Marwood C. Chapman

MILLBROOK (ENS) — The funeral on Friday of Marwood Clark Chapman, 41, prominent Millbrook business man was largely attended. It was conducted from his home by the Rev. W. H. Heustin of Grace Presbyterian church, Millbrook, assisted by the Rev. Herbert McCombe, of Ballyduff Presbyertian church. Mr. Chapman died early Wednesday morning in Peterborough Civic Hospital.

Pallbearers were Melville Strong, William Strong and James Godfrey of Millbrook, Gerald Urry of Pontypool, Russell Urry and Louis Urry of Toronto.

There were many beautiful floral tributes. Burial was in the Ballyduff cemetery.

Plan Free Skating For Tiny Children

LAKEFIELD (ENS)—Lakefield tiny tots and beginners of all ages are going to have their free skating period at the arena this winter and the time will be from 11 a.m. until 12.30 o'clock on Saturdays. This decision was reach by the board of management at a recent meeting.

In previous years, the rink time was so scheduled that the beginners who were just learning to skate, had hardly a chance at all. However with this hour and a half at their disposal they should have an excellent opportunity to improve their skating. It is felt by many of the citizens that this is a very generous gesture of the board, and one that the children should appreciate.

Children Only

AMHERST, N.S. (CP)—The Amherst police designated a number of streets which will be reserved for "coasting" during the winter months. Warning signs were posted for motorists.

Hope To Form U.K. Union For Canadians

LONDON (CP)—Frank Darvall, director-general of the English-Speaking Union, hopes to see an autonomous branch of the union established in Canada this year.

Darvall recently returned from [illegible] every mainland province and other cities. He said he hopes that 12 or 15 branches will be formed in Canada, and that these groups will meet later in Ottawa to draw up a constitution for a national body.

The English-Speaking Union was established by Sir Evelyn Wrench in June, 1918, to promote mutual understanding among Commonwealth countries and the United States. Sir Evelyn originally had in mind a purely Commonwealth body, but Sir Wilfred Laurier, former Canadian prime minister, said that in the 20th century such an organization should embrace the United States.

The Daily Telegraph in a report on the tour, says Darval's visit to Canada was not an "unqualified triumph." It says some Canadians felt the name English-Speaking Union would be disliked in French-speaking parts of Canada.

NEW NAME HERE

Commenting on this, Darvall said such fears were expressed, but that in any case the question of a possible new name was a question to be decided in Canada. Among suggestions put forward were the "Commonwealth United States Association of Canada" and the "Canadian-American Commonwealth Association."

Darvall said the curious thing was that fears of the English-sounding name were expressed by English-speaking rather than French-speaking persons. Msgr. Ferdinand Vandry, rector of Laval University, Quebec, and Dr. Arthur Beauchesne of Ottawa had agreed to head branches in their respective cities without worrying about the name.

"Possibly the Canadian concern reflects past worries rather than present realities," the director-general suggested.

The English-Speaking Union now has offices in Toronto and Hamilton. As a result of Darvall's tour, branches are being formed in Edmonton, Regina and Vancouver and there are plans for others in several cities, including Ottawa and Quebec.

Wants Red Atrocities In Korea Punished

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senator Charles Potter (Rep.-Mich.) said Saturday more than 50,000 persons died in Korea as a result of Communist atrocities. He asked that the United Nations find a way to punish "the criminals responsible."

Potter's proposal came in a preliminary report which he filed after a one-man investigation during the last four months.

Based largely on investigations conducted by the U.S. army during the three years of hostilities, the report indicated Gen. Douglas MacArthur and other U.S. leaders had hoped to bring war criminals to trial after winning a military victory in Korea.

Potter asked the Senate to "express its grave concern over these Communist atrocities" and to urge the U.S. delegation to the United Nations to seek "establishment of an impartial investigation commission" by that body.

The flight was to have been made from Winnipeg but poor weather prevented an aircraft from taking off.

Roy Thomson May Acquire More Papers

LONDON (CP) — Canadian publisher Roy Thomson may be interested in acquiring more newspapers in England and Scotland, principally in the smaller cities and towns, it was hinted today.

Thomson, who last summer [illegible] Scottish newspapers, arrived during the week-end to take up residence in West Coates, a parish of Edinburgh. Today the Manchester Guardian commented:

"As if it were not enough to tackle the problems of managing a morning and an evening newspaper in a strange country, he is willing to talk about what he thinks could be done to exploit smaller towns in England and Scotland which are generally thought to be stony ground for daily newspapers.

HANDSOME PROFITS

"At home he has made handsome profits in towns of no more than 20,000 inhabitants, and he is evidently struck by the number of much bigger communities here which might be made to support a newspaper—if it were run by Roy Thomson."

Thomson, whose son Kenneth now runs the Thomson newspapers in Canada, has taken over the house in West Coates formerly used by Sir Edmund Findlay, from whom Thomson acquired control of the Scotsman, published in Edinburgh, and two companion papers.

The Guardian described Thomson as in appearance the "very pattern of the prosperous North American business man." It was only when he warmed to his conversation, always about newspapers, that "the gleam comes into his eye and the note into his voice which tell you that he is more than a prosperous business man, that he has the restlessness and ardor of the expansionist."

Blinded By Lights Of Approaching Car

STIRLING (ENS)—Two minor accidents were reported in this district today. Cars driven by Maurice Faulkner and D. Fleming were slightly damaged Sunday night when the front of Faulkner's car collided with the rear of the Fleming car, on Highway 14, one mile north of Stirling. Lights from an oncoming car blinded Fleming, causing him to stop. The Faulkner vehicle was unable to stop.

A car driven by Harold Morgan, of Stirling, left an icy curve on the Hoard's station road early today, and struck a tree. The driver was uninjured, but the car was damaged to the extent of $200.

Fiery Ball Startles Countryside

Flaming Object Believed Meteor Still A Puzzle

A fiery ball streaking across Peterborough's sky that people from Cavan to Apsley and beyond thought was a private early morning showing today turned out to be an international affair.

Early risers in New York state and all parts of southeastern Ontario reported seeing the flaming object at almost exactly 7 a.m.

What was it they saw? It was a meteor or, more correctly, a fireball, Dr. P. M. Millman, head of the stellar physics section of the Dominion Observatory, theorized today. He didn't see it himself but was working on reports received from hundreds of excited persons.

To people of Syracuse and northern New York state, the flaming ball leaving a trail of fire as it sped west appeared to crash to the ground north of Cleveland in Oswego county. To the people of the Peterborough district, it appeared to come down somewhere between Apsley and Bancroft.

But it was also seen by citizens of Sudbury, North Bay, Trenton, Ottawa, Parry Sound, Perth, and Smiths Falls.

North Bay citizens said the object was seen to the south. Newspaper men investigated a report that an object fell in a field near Powasson 15 miles from North Bay.

Dr. Millman said it was too early to state definitely that the object was a fireball. He urged all persons who sighted it to write to the Dominion observatory in Ot-

Wont' Make Deal

NEW YORK (AP)—State Secretary Dulles will meet the Russians in Berlin soon, firmly pledged against any deal to divide the world between the rule of Moscow and that of the Western powers. There is no plan for a "partnership division of world power with those who suppress freedom," he said Tuesday night in an address to the Council of Foreign Relations here.

Million Dollar Road Swindle At Fort William

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto newspaper says in a story today that a $1,000,000 swindle of the Fort William branch of the Ontario highways department has been uncovered after a four-month investigation.

"There are reports that 10 or 12 arrests, perhaps more, will be made," the paper said.

The paper said the exact amount of the swindle is known but will not be disclosed until charges are filed. Highway Minister Doucett was to make an announcement Friday.

PROSECUTOR NAMED

C. L. Dubin, Toronto lawyer, has been appointed special prosecutor and police will receive orders within a day or so to pick up several government employees, some of them suspended following an inquiry conducted through the auditor's branch of the government, the story added.

"One clerk earning $60 a week was driving a $6,000 limousine and there are reports of 'fantastic luxury' among junior employees of the highways department at the Lakehead," the paper said.

It quoted an official as saying: "Nothing like it has been uncovered in a government department for years."

Padding of payrolls with fictitious names and long hours credited to men who had worked only part time allegedly were found. Machinery, trucks and other equipment were sold and the money never turned in to the department, according to the story.

Gives Self Up To Reporter In All-Night Restaurant; 'Wife' Arrested, Released

Says Smart Trick Fooled Guards In Hotel Escape

Written for The Candian Press
By DENNIS HARVEY

PRESTON, Ont. (CP)—Donald Ritchie thought it was real funny. He kept telling me: "Why did I have to give myself up in this hick town."

I don't know why he did. He is a jovial, round-faced man and he had a hard time persuading me that he was Donald Ritchie, wanted by Michigan state police as a witness in the attempted assassination of Walter Reuther five years ago.

ACCOSTED BY RITCHIE

I met Ritchie in an all-night cafe here at about 2:15 this morning. It was just one of those things. He walked up to me and asked:

"Are you a reporter?"

I answered, "Yes."

"I'm Donald Ritchie. Call the police but wait until I have finished my coffee. Don't tell them I'm here. Just tell them to come down."

I didn't believe him. I wasn't in Preston on an assignment. I came up here for the joy ride with two other reporters so I decided to stick around.

Ritchie was feeling a few drinks. I had him sized up as the town character.

"I am Ritchie," he insisted. He must have told me 10 times. He laughed and chuckled when he said it. Real funny, he thought.

INTRODUCED BY DRIVERS

Two truck drivers were chatting with Ritchie when I walked into the restaurant. The cafe is near the town jail, where I left my friends, and I figured I could get a ride home on one of the trucks. The drivers were talking with Ritchie when I walked in.

"This is Ritchie," they said, smiling.

The fellow was wearing a new suit, new shoes and smart-looking horn-rimmed glasses. I asked him a few questions because I had just talked with the police at the station after they picked up Miss White. (The woman who lived with Ritchie was arrested earlier in the same restaurant.)

"Where did you spend your nights since leaving Detroit last Friday?" I asked.

"In hotels. The General Brock at Niagara Falls, the Belvedere at London and the Reeta in Welland."

SAYS SMART TRICK

WANTED WITNESS — Donald Ritchie, 33-year-old Windsor fish peddler, gave himself up to police in Preston today. Ritchie is key witness in the attempted assassination of Walter Reuther president of the United Auto Workers, at Detroit in 1948, and is charged with attempted murder.

Ritchie Returns To Border With OPP Escort

PRESTON —(CP)— Donald Ritchie, wanted as a key witness in the 1948 attempted assassination of union leader Walter Reuther, was taken into custody by Detroit police early today after giving himself up in this southwestern Ontario town.

Two Detroit officers arrived a few hours after Ritchie surrendered to a newspaper reporter in an all-night restaurant.

WINDSOR (CP). — Donald Ritchie, fugitive key witness-defendant in the Walter Reuther shooting case, balked at crossing the border into Detroit today. He said he wanted to see a lawyer. He has been placed in Essex county jail here.

The officers and Ritchie later started by car for Detroit where he escaped from protective custody six days ago. Ontario provincial police planned to provide a squad-car escort to the border.

Police here said Ritchie apparently decided against fighting extradition to the United States.

BETTY WHITE FREED

Meanwhile, police released Betty White, with whom police said Ritchie has been living. She was arrested in the restaurant where Ritchie later gave himself up. Police had noticed her car outside.

Preston police said the woman planned to go to Windsor by car.

A five-day hunt was conducted throughout southwestern Ontario for Ritchie, who Michigan police say has accused four accomplices of the 1948 attempt on the life of Reuther, president of the United Automobile Workers (CIO).

Ritchie fled from a Detroit hotel room Friday while he was under protective custody. He surrendered at 3 a. m. to reporter Dennis Harvey of the Hamilton Spectator. Harvey walked into the restaurant on the main street in this town two miles northwest of Galt, and Ritchie calmly told him:

"I'm Donald Ritchie."

Harvey said he thought it was a joke but Ritchie produced identification papers. Within minutes police arrived in answer to a call from Harvey and whisked Ritchie to the town jail.

ATTEMPTED MURDER

He is being held for Detroit police who were expected here early

Ontario Provincial Police said Ritchie did not make a statement.

Victoria Fire Damage $50,000

VICTORIA (CP)—Damage was estimated at $50,000 in an explosive fire which hit Pier 2 of the Victoria Machinery Depot shipbuilding yard in the outer harbor here Tuesday night.

Some 100 firemen and fire boats brought the blaze under control after 90 minutes.

A company spokesman said fire walls and sprinkler systems saved valuable naval electrical equipment. He described as "fantastic" reports that damage could go as high as $2,000,000.

He said it would be impossible to estimate the exact amount of damage for several days.

City fire chief Frank Briers said it was the "worst fire to fight Victoria ever had."

"If there had been any wind, that fire would be uptown now," he said.

Attempted Murder Charge Dropped

OWEN SOUND (CP)—A charge of attempted murder against Jack Traynor, 27, of Owen Sound, was automatically dropped in Supreme Court here today when a grand jury returned a "no bill" on the charge.

Traynor was convicted some weeks ago of indecent assault on a school boy and was sentenced to two years in Kingston Penitentiary as a criminal sexual psycopath, and to a further indefinite term.

Plane Strikes Houses, Six Killed In U.S.

LONG BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Shrouded in rain clouds, a United States Air Force jet fighter plane rocketed into a residential district late Tuesday, demolished two homes and exploded, set fire to a third home and damaged a fourth. Six persons died in the inferno and four were injured, two so severely they may not recover.

In addition, an elderly man, horrified at what he saw, suffered a heart attack and died.

The hurtling plane ripped out telephone lines and broke gas mains that erupted into geysers of flames as blazing jet fuel cascaded over what an instant before had been a quiet neighborhood in the oil-producing area which is surrounded by the city of Long Beach.

The pilot, Maj. Robert A. Blair, died in the pyre of his twisted and smouldering jet. A boy perished in the street where he was playing.

FLAMES EVERYWHERE

"There were flames everywhere, in the houses, spread across the street and shooting from gas mains," said Mrs. Dorothy McCormick, who said she was almost knocked off a chair in her home by the blast.

The disaster recalled a similar crash last year in a suburb of Montreal when an RCAF Sabre jet crashed into a row of houses. Nine persons were killed, including the pilot.

Name Macdonald Cabinet Member

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent today announced appointment of Senator W. Ross Macdonald, government leader in the Senate, as solicitor-general.

This is the first time in about 30 years that a government leader in the upper chamber has held an active cabinet post at the same time.

Senator Macdonald, 62, succeeds Associate Defence Minister Campney, 59, who also handled the solicitor-general portfolio.

Mr. St. Laurent said Mr. Campney's defence duties leave him little time to assist Justice Minister Garson as solicitor-general. He asked to be relieved from these additional responsibilities.

Senator Macdonald took over his Senate post this session after a term as Speaker of the Commons. Under the new appointment his pay will be boosted from $13,000 a year to $18,000, of which $2,000 will be tax-free.

$6,452,354 Received By CBC, Fraser Told

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC received $6,452,354 from the revenue department between April and October, the equivalent of excise tax collections on radio and television sets and parts, the Commons was informed Tuesday.

A return tabled for Gordon K. Fraser (PC — Peterborough) said the excise tax collected in sales of television sets and parts totalled $3,938,556 and collection on sales of radios and parts totalled $2,513,798 between April 1 and Oct. 31.

Under the new method of financing the CBC from the excise collections rather than the now-defunct licence fee, these sums were paid the CBC, starting at the beginning of the 1953-54 fiscal year.

Front Wheel Flies Off Car 10 Hurt Near Newcastle

NEWCASTLE, Ont. (CP)—Ten persons were injured, one severely, when two cars collided Tuesday night on Highway 2 about 200 yards from the junction with the four-lane Highway 401. Police said they believed the left front wheel flew off one car, throwing it into the path of the other near this village, 15 miles east of Oshawa.

Six of the injured were members of a Cobourg midget-juvenile hockey team, they were travelling from Cobourg to Bowmanville for a scheduled game.

Most severely hurt was Mrs. Donald Secord of Toronto, an occupant of the other car. She was taken unconscious to hospital at Bowmanville and later to Toronto General Hospital with head injuries. A nurse described her condition today as fair.

SIX PLAYERS HURT

Mrs. Secord had been in a car driven by John Myron of Cornwall, who suffered severe cuts and bruises. Two other passengers, Charles Lefebvre of Cornwall and Donald Secord of Toronto, suffered similar injuries.

All the injured hockey players lived at Cobourg. They were Glen Tyron, driver, who suffered cuts; Ron Stevenson, broken arm and cuts; Gordon Holdaway, broken arm and cuts; and Donald Garlon, Brian Skillen, and Peter McCaig, bruised and cut by flying glass.

Stevenson and Holdaway were admitted to Bowmanville hospital. The other injured hockey players were treated and released.

Bullet Kills Judge In Court

WARREN, Pa. (AP) — Judge Allison D. Wade was shot to death while presiding in his courtroom today by a man cited for non-support payments to his wife.

The man, identified as Norman Moon of Connellsville, Pa., later shot himself six miles west of Warren after a bullet from a state policeman's gun halted his car. He is reported in critical condition in hospital.

District attorney Myer Kornreich said the shooting occurred just as Judge Wade called Moon to the bench to explain why Moon was in arrears of his support payments.

Scour Northland For Lost Pilot

NORTH BAY (CP) — RCAF planes carrying more than 100 spotters today began a mile-by-mile air search of this northern area for a plane piloted by a student which vanished Tuesday night.

Senior officials of the RCAF's air search and rescue command at Trenton arrived to direct the search. Dakota transports, Lancaster and Mitchell bombers, Thunderjets and CF-100s took part in the hunt concentrated within a 50-mile radius of North Bay.

It was feared that if the pilot had managed to survive a crash in his T-33 Thunderjet trainer, his chances of staying alive long in 20-below-zero weather would be slim.

A para-rescue team also arrived from Trenton. It was prepared to bail out into the freezing bushland to help the pilot should he be found alive.

Name of the pilot was not disclosed pending notification of next-of-kin. The air force said he is a student at the No. 3 operational training unit where crews are trained to fly the CF-100 all-weather jet fighter.

Britain To Get Meat From U.S. As Gift

LONDON (Reuters) — Britain will get surplus American meat as a gift under a scheme now being negotiated, it was disclosed today.

A treasury spokesman said: "There will be an announcement shortly, probably simultaneously in Washington and London."

The deal will be ostensibly a purchase under the United States Mutual Security Act but, the spokesman said, "It is purely a gift." The money paid for the meat is returnable to the British government for defence spending.

Britain has bought $20,000,000 worth of American tobacco under the same scheme.

Insurance Policy Factor In Bell Exhumation

BELLEVILLE. — Percy Warner Bell, 51, whose body was exhumed from a Napanee cemetery at the request of the Attorney-General's office is reported to have purchased an insurance policy within the last year.

It's value is believed to be $5,000, and it is thought it was taken to protect a $3,800 mortgage on the Bell home as well and payments totalling $900 for a late model car and a television set.

The insurance company has been asked to keep details of the policy confidential until police are ready to make a complete disclosure. The physician's statement, which usually covers any insurance claim, has not yet been filed.

No announcement has been made about the results of analysis of autopsy specimens taken from Bell's body, to be conducted under the direction of Dr. Ward Smith of Toronto. Officials said findings could not be made public if they indicated poison because they would immediately become evidence.

Rains, Quakes Jolt California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — California was shaken by an earthquake and showered by rain, hail and snow Tuesday in a spectacular combination of natural phenomena.

The quake, rated by seismologists as a major shock, jolted cities from the Mexican border to Sacramento, 500 miles north. There were no injuries, but electric wires were snapped and plaster shattered in numerous buildings.

Girl Hurled From Train Blame Mafia Terrorists

PORT CREDIT (CP) — Police chief Joseph Nelson said today he has "reason to believe" Mafia terrorists may be connected with the fall of a young woman from a speeding Canadian National Railways train here Tuesday.

The Mafia, also known as the Black Hand, is a terrorist society of crime and violence that originated in Sicily.

Sophie DiDomenico, 26, was seen tumbling down the embankment by a railway switchman as the train roared by. She was taken to hospital in Toronto where authorities say her injuries are not serious and that she is recovering.

Chief Nelson said he believes the Mafia was attempting to procure Miss DiDomenico for immoral purposes, and that when she objected she was hurled from the train.

GIANT ORGANIZATION

"Italian residents at Port Credit tell me there is a giant Mafia organization preying on Italian-Canadians and a giant shakedown racket of which procuring girls for immoral purposes is a part," Chief Nelson said.

Port Credit, a village of 3,700, is 10 miles west of Toronto.

Police said Miss DiDomenico came to Canada from Quilla province in Italy two years ago. She lived in Montreal until she moved to Brantford two or three weeks ago, seeking work as a housekeeper. She left Brantford last Sunday to return to Montreal.

WHISPERED TWO WORDS

A handbag found on the embankment near the spot where she fell contained two sandwiches, an alarm clock and a ticket to Montreal. Her shoes were found near the handbag.

For several hours the girl's identity was unknown. While in hospital the only words she could murmur were "Sophia" and "Montreal."

CNR officials said it is unlikely the girl could have fallen from the train by accident. They said it is a difficult operation to open a coach door.

Firemen Save Bad-Luck Ship

LE HAVRE, France (AP)—Firemen dashed to the waterfront of this channel port today after fire broke out aboard the 49,850-ton French liner Liberte. The blaze, described as "inconsequential," was extinguished quickly.

The fire broke out in a storeroom as the liner, one of the prides of the French line's passenger service to North America, was alongside the dock.

The Liberte before the Second World War was the German liner Europa.

BAD-LUCK SHIP

The Liberte has had bad luck ever since she was built in 1929. In that year she was sunk in Hamburg harbor to combat a fierce fire. After being raised, she went aground on her first trials. She was bombed by the RAF during the war and was sunk by a tidal wave at Bremerhaven in 1947.

Handed over to France for reparations, she was refitted at a cost of about $20,000,000. While this was being done, fire broke out involving 100 cabins. It was put out after four hours.

She has gone aground twice since 1950.

Brockville Man Reveals Identity

One of Greatest Spies Warns Canadians

BROCKVILLE (CP)—Capt. J. H. de Graff, former Russian and British espionage agent, who for three years has quietly carried on a lecture-crusade against Communism in Ontario and Quebec, found himself in the limelight Tuesday and reluctantly allowed his story to be told.

His warning to an audience here Monday night that some 3,000 Russian-trained saboteurs are living underground in Canada was on the front pages of newspapers across Canada.

Often in the last three winters, the German-born officer said he has given similar warnings on the Communist conspiracy but always his desire to avoid publicity and live a quiet life has ensured that few people knew his identity and his story.

Last week, Capt. de Graff, 60, granted a Canadian Press staff writer an interview on condition his identity be cloaked by a pseudonym — "Otto." But the wide interest aroused by this article and by his speech here last night killed all hopes that his identity could remain undisclosed.

RESPECTED HIS DESIRE

Brockville residents have known for weeks that a one-time Russian army major, international spy and counter-intelligence agent for Britain's MI-5 was living among them. But out of consideration for his desire to "live quietly", they kept his identity quiet.

The RCMP who describe him as "the genuine article" and a "big operator" agreed this was a good idea.

Capt. de Graff came to Brockville last Oct. 1. He operates a tourist camp here.

"I thought I had a chance to take things easy at last but only for a fortnight," he said.

BACK ON JOB

"I found I was back on the job talking and battling against the evil of Communism. I feel it's my duty as a Canadian citizen to alert the country against this menace. That battle is the most important thing I can do."

His knowledge of Russian was acquired, surreptitiously, in the Soviet Union when he was being trained in espionage at the Lenin Institute in Moscow.

After completing three years' war duty in Montreal with the RCMP who knew him simply as Capt. Johnny X, Capt. de Graff lived in that city for another seven years.

De Graff's life of conspiracy began after he ran away from his home in Hamburg in 1908 to join the German merchant marine. He was 14.

COUP THWARTED

Perhaps, the highlight came in 1935 while working in Brazil for both Russia and Britain. He helped to organize the army for a revolution and then made sure that half the army was opposed to the rebels. The proposed coup was thwarted.

As a seaman aboard the German battleship Westfalen during the First World War he started early to sow dissension among the crew and in 1917 there was a mutiny. Otto was courtmartialled and sentenced to death. Before he could be executed, however, general rebellion broke out in the German services and he was liberated.

After "swallowing" what he described as Communist peace slogans, he joined the party in 1920. But by 1929, he became fed up with "corruption" in the German Communist party and decided to go to the Soviet Union.

He was quickly enrolled in Lenin University at Moscow to study international communism. Next came the Frunse Military Academy. He graduated in 1930 as a major in the Russian Army and was ordered abroad as an agent.

DOUBLE AGENT

During the next seven years he travelled to Britain, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Austria, Romania, France, The Netherlands, Belgium, The Argentine, Brazil and China. Much of the time he was a "double" agent, ostensibly working for the Communists but reporting to British authorities.

Early in his Communist espionage activities he decided he had enough and while passing through Berlin tried to surrender to British officials. They checked his record and decided he should con-

Will Investigate Haunted House In Britain As Blonde Ghost Walks With Sugar Daddy

DUDLEY, England (AP) — Edward Westwood says there is a blonde ghost in his house who wears lipstick and walks around nights with a bald-headed sugar daddy.

He appealed to the Birmingham Psychic Research Society to have investigators spend a night in the place and find out what is going on.

Westood, who has moved out of the house pending developments, says the pretty blonde apparition has tipped one member of his family out of bed, grabbed another by the hair, and made the nights hideous by ringing a ghostly alarm clock.

He said she is sometimes alone and sometimes squired by the bald-headed chap, who apparently just goes along to watch.

Bernard Payne, an investigator for the research society, said he would form a team to spend a night in the 100-year old house.

Use Helicopters In Search Of 220 Casualties

VIENNA (CP) — Helicopters hovered today over the snow-choked Alpine valleys of Austria, Switzerland and Germany as thousands joined in rescue work in the wake of avalanches which have taken a toll of more than 220 dead and missing in the three countries.

The three-day toll from the rolling "white death" is said to be [illegible]

The skies cleared over Austria today, allowing helicopters to take off. They hung over the silent white valleys, looking for signs of life in the battered hamlets.

Only minor slides, which caused no damage, were reported during the night, and colder weather brought hope that the snow movement was letting up. But a Vienna weather official warned that west Austria's average temperatures still are above normal, resulting in danger of more avalanches.

This was the toll so far from the snow slides which began Monday, in the wake of the winter's worst blizzards:

TOLL TO DATE

Austria: 62 dead, 131 missing.

Switzerland: 18 dead, four missing.

Bavaria: six dead.

The centre of the tragedy was the 12-mile Walser valley of west Austria, near the Swiss frontier. There, hundreds of rescue skiers from Austria, Switzerland and Liechtenstein worked frantically seeking the dead and injured in homes in the village of Blons crushed under two massive avalanches.

Reports from the first rescuers who reached the isolated valley said 28 were dead, 72 missing and 23 severely injured. Aid poured into the entrance of the valley and United States army helicopters stood by in Germany and Austria awaiting instructions.

Rescue work continued, too, in Dalaas, in the Vorarlberg sector of Austria, where eight persons are still missing. A huge snow slide Tuesday swept over the railroad station and a train at the platform. Five persons died under the snow and 36 others, some injured, were rescued.

Elsewhere in the Vorarlberg and in the Ziller valley of the Tyrol, hundreds of police continued to search in stricken villages. Countless Austrians, tourists and mountain rescue squads aided.

Farmers Must Initiate Control Of Brucellosis

Township adoption of the Brucellosis Control Act hinges upon voluntary acceptance of its cattle owners.

That feature of the legislation passed by the Ontario Government last year was emphasized by R. H. Graham of the livestock branch of the department of agriculture at a meeting of municipal representa[illegible] afternoon.

Procedure begins with a petition to a township council signed by more than two-thirds of the owners of cattle in that municipality. Petitions are circulated by farmers who are interested in controlling brucellosis.

If there are sufficient signatures, the township council at its next meeting shall pass a bylaw requiring all the female calves within the township to be vaccinated.

Brucellosis is the official name of Bang's disease or as it is commonly known, contagious abortion.

The plan of petition affected control of tuberculosis in cattle to such a widespread extent that it is almost eradicated throughout Canada. Mr. Graham reviewed the clauses of the brucellosis control act.

NAME COMMITTEE

When an authorizing bylaw has been passed, the township council shall appoint a committee composed of the chief inspector, meaning Provincial Veterinarian Dr. Harold Worton, formerly of Peterborough, the agricultural representative, F. C. Paterson, and also three persons, at least two of whom shall be cattle owners and residents of the township. Such appointments are to be made annually by the township council.

This committee is empowered to recommend veterinarians and inspectors for the carrying out of the provision of the Act, and make required reports to the council. Such appointments are to be made by the council.

Frank C. Paterson was chairman of the meeting which was largely attended by representatives of the townships: Harvey, Smith, North Monaghan, Otonabee, Dummer, Douro, Asphodel.

Mr. Graham reported adoption of the Act in four Halton townships, two in Ontario county, a campaign in Grey, virtually all of Dundas county, two townships in Lanark. Durham is interested and action is developing in 15 other counties. He expressed the hope that a beginning would be made in Petreborough this year in at least two or three of the townships.

At the adjournment, Mr. Paterson said that if a group of farmers in any of townships propose a series of meetings for the further explanation of the Act, "just let us know and we shall be glad to cooperate in every way."

SHOULD KNOW FACTS

"We are not trying to promote something the people do not want," Mr. Paterson also said at the outset, "but we are much concerned in having them know the facts about the operation of this new Act. Some cattle owners may be opposed, but we do know from what farmers have told us that many of them are definitely interested in it.

"We are all through the TB campaign. Quite a lot of persuasion and explanation was required to get some people to see the value of controlling tuberculosis in cattle. That disease was cleaned up to such an extent that today it is hard to find a tubercular animal in the whole country when one is needed for laboratory work.

The control of the warble fly was also approached on the voluntary basis, and the response of farmers demonstrated that they were in favor of it, and wanted it. The government has now provided the means of attacking brucellosis on a broad scale, and again the decisions depends on the owners of cattle."

Both speakers stressed the economic value of expanding the health of cattle by the vaccination of calves.

"I'd say that this method is about 98 per cent perfect," Mr. Graham said, but he frankly admitted that there were even cases of recurring TB here and there.

"We don't know where the infection comes from. It is a lot like smallpox among people. If we did not continually keep after it, we would have outbreaks. We don't like anything in these plans that smacks of compulsion. If more than two-thirds of the cattle owners in a township signify by petition that they want this legislation, then it is our duty to see that it is enforced. But, we don't relish going into court against any objectors."

Mr. Graham said he knew of one farmer in the vicinity of Napanee who was still holding out against the anti-TB Act.

The main fact for farmers to consider was that calfhood vaccination "will bring you healthy herds," and that was essential in making money from cattle, particularly in sales for export.

"If we get more than one-half of one per cent of owners against the campaign that is not a healthy condition, and I'd feel that we had failed in our work of convincing cattle owners of the value to them of controlling brucellosis by calfhood vaccination."

"Actually we have been trying to put the brakes on some counties because they wish to take on too many townships. I'd rather see it gradually adopted."

The ages of heifer calves for vaccination are between 6 and 9 months. Inspectors appointed by a township council are assigned to certain sections of the township and once in each three-month period are required to determine and make a record of the number and location of the calves of each cattle owner. He has also to notify the appointed veterinarian of the number and location of calves of each cattle owner. He has also to notify the appointed veterinarian of the number and location of calves for vaccination, and to assist cattle owners and veterinarians in arranging for dates of vaccination.

A veterinarian shall report monthly to the township clerk the name and address of the cattle owners and the number of their calves vaccinated "and the identification thereof." Vaccination fees shall be payable by the cattle owner, who must not prevent the inspector and the veterinarian from vaccinating his calves.

The Department shall reimburse townships for the cost of inspection, "but in no case shall the amounts paid to an inspector exceed 20 cents for each calf vaccinated."

Ritchie Returns

He is being held on a warrant issued by Gerald O'Brien, Wayne county (Detroit) prosecutor, charging Ritchie with attempted murder in the Reuther shooting. The warrant was issued after Ritchie fled from his hotel sanctuary in Detroit.

Ritchie was allowed to talk to Betty White, the 28-year-old woman with whom police said he has lived since 1950, in a basement jail cell. She was arrested Tuesday night after the couple had [illegible] taken into custody by two Preston policemen who had noticed her car parked in front of the restaurant. She identified herself as Ritchie's wife and told police she had left him that morning. In Niagara Falls, Ont. She said Ritchie intended to return by train to Windsor and give himself up.

She told police she was on her way back to Windsor but had taken a wrong road outside Hamilton.

TRACED TO CHATHAM

The car was the one she and Ritchie had bought in Chatham, for $1,400, part of the $5,000 Reuther's union had turned over to the woman for information Ritchie gave Michigan authorities about the attempted murder.

Ritchie escaped from police guards Friday while held in a 12th-floor suite of a large downtown Detroit hotel. He skipped across the border to Windsor and after Miss White picked up the $5,000 the couple disappeared. They were traced to Chatham, where they had opened a joint bank account. Their trail vanished until Tuesday night when the woman was arrested.

She told police they spent Friday night in a London hotel and from there drove to Welland, where they spent Saturday night in another hotel. She said they then proceeded to Niagara Falls Sunday and after staying in a hotel decided Tuesday morning to split up and return to Windsor.

The woman said Ritchie was "extremely nervous" and decided it would be best to return and surrender.

Following her arrest police searched hotels, motels and tourist cabins in the Preston area on the assumption that Ritchie might be in hiding in one of them and that the woman had gone out to obtain food. The search failed to turn up any sign of the wanted man.

Then police in Toronto, 75 miles from Preston, combed the city's downtown district for Ritchie after a report reached them that he was in Toronto Tuesday night. A girl who had been drinking with a man in downtown Toronto told police he had identified himself as Ritchie.

Her description of the man, who had a scar on the left side of his face, tallied with that of Ritchie.

The search started after provincial police in Kitchener, 10 miles from Preston, received a telephone call from Toronto from a man who described himself as Ritchie. The caller told constable George Mitchell he would give himself up to Toronto police if Miss White were released.

Miss White, whom police are holding for questioning, was allowed to make a long-distance telephone call to the couple's lawyer, Donald Morand, in Windsor after her arrest.

Morand had been chosen by Ritchie as intermediary between himself and the UAW and Michigan authorities in order to collect the money the union had posted in the hopes of speeding a solution to the attack against Reuther, then UAW president and now also president of the CIO.

Ritchie's statement to O'Brien led to the issuance of a warrant charging four men with conspiracy and assault with intent to murder.

O'Brien said he knew nothing of the UAW reward advance from the $200,000 it offered in the shooting of Reuther and his brother, Victor, almost a year later. Walter's right arm was maimed. Victor lost an eye. Both were wounded by night-time shotgun blasts fired through windows of their homes.

Warrants in the case have been issued against Clarence Jacobs, 48, of Tecumseh, Ritchie's uncle, Santo (Sam) Perrone, 56, of Detroit, sought by police; Carl Renda, 35, Perrone's son-in-law, scheduled to appear in an American court Thursday; and Peter Lombardo, 51, now in a United States prison on another conviction.

North Korea Just Red China Province

WASHINGTON (AP)—State Secretary Dulles said today Communist China is "virtually incorporating North Korea as a Chinese province," making more difficult the prospect of peacefully uniting all Korea.

Dulles appeared before the Senate foreign relations committee to ask Senate ratification for the new mutual defence treaty between this country and South Korea.

He said he felt certain that "in the long run" North and South Korea would be united, just as he said he believes all Germany will some day be joined.

No Conditions For Meeting Given By Reds

PANMUNJOM (AP) — United States envoy Kenneth Young today said Allied and Red liaison officers will meet Thursday in the first step toward resuming talks to set up a Korean peace conference—apparently on Red terms.

The Communists asked Monday for the low-level meeting—but only to d[illegible] 12 by the U. S.

The Allies replied Tuesday with a note asking that the staff officers discuss both date and conditions for resuming the conference. The Reds answered with a new note today.

Young told questioners the latest Red note did not mention "conditions," but only the time of the meeting.

Peiping radio said earlier that the Communist liaison officers were prepared to discuss only the date and not conditions for resuming the preliminary talks. Peiping said:

ONE CONDITION

"The only condition required to reopen the discussion is that the Americans come back to the conference table. There can be no other condition. . . ."

The Allied note to the Reds did not give any details of what conditions would be discussed.

When U. S. ambassador Arthur Dean broke off the preliminary talks in December after six weeks of haggling, he said he would not meet with the Reds again unless they retracted a charge of U. S. "perfidy."

The Reds have given no indication they will apologize, but sources here have indicated the U. S. might accept something less than a full retraction in order to get the talks started again.

Meanwhile, the Korean repatriation commission prepared to meet Thursday on a secret Indian proposal to solve the issue of releasing war prisoners by turning them back to the commands that formerly held them.

A high Indian officer, Brig. B.M. Kaul, predicted a wrangle at the meeting. Kaul, chief of staff to the commission's Indian chairman, Lt. Gen. K. S. Thimayya, told reporters:

"Your speculation is all right but there is more than one way to turn back prisoners. I predict there will be a great deal of argument . . . before the various opinions . . . are crystalized."

Says Smart Trick

"What did you do with the $5,000 paid by the union?"

BOUGHT CAR, CLOTHES

"Betty and me banked $3,500 in a joint account in Chatham. We paid $1,400 for a car and got some clothes, too."

"Why do you want to give yourself up?"

"Just because I want to."

He showed me two identification cards. One was an unemployment card which read: D. F. Ritchie, Point Pelee, Ont., chef.

When he finished his coffee and answered the questions I called Preston town police.

"Come to Mary's Barbecue," I said. When the man on the other end of the line asked what was the matter, I replied there was something here that would interest him.

When I tried several seconds later to phone my co-workers at the station, Ritchie showed his first sign of anger and snapped: "No more calls."

FOUR POLICEMAN APPEAR

Minutes later detective-sergeant Allen Slidders of the Galt police, constable William A. Coxworth of the Ontario provincial police and constables William Toleff and Jack Rae of the Preston police came into the restaurant.

This man is Donald Ritchie, I said.

We all got in the police car. The police asked Ritchie how he got to Preston.

"I walked," he quipped.

Then he chuckled.

Police searched him at the station. He had a few cigarets in his pocket—nothing else.

JUST SMART TRICK

Ritchie said today it was just a "smart trick" that let him escape from the custody of Detroit police and became the object of a five-day search throughout Ontario.

Before he left he told the story of his escape in Detroit and absolved his guards from blame.

HOW IT WAS DONE

Ritchie said he was in a Detroit hotel suite with three Detroit detectives. He told them he wanted to take a shower.

"I took off my T-shirt in the sitting room of the suite and walked into the bedroom," he said. "I immediately turned on the shower, pulled on my shirt and sport jacket and opened a door from the bedroom, which was unlocked and which led out into the hall.

"I went down to the lobby, engaged a taxi and had him drive me to Windsor. I still owe that cabby a dollar of my fare."

"I hear they are giving those police lie detector tests but they will certainly show that I just fooled them and that they did not help me in any way."

Fiery Ball

tawa giving details of appearance, size and direction.

Dr. Millman said a meteor or fireball burns itself out before reaching the earth. A meteorite enters the atmosphere without burning and falls to earth as a solid mass.

"There have been no reports yet of any detonations occurring during the time the object was seen," Dr. Millman said. "This leads us to believe that it was a fireball that burned out 30 miles or so above the earth."

Dr. Millman said detonations would indicate that the object was a meteorite which passed through the earth's atmosphere without burning, and fell to earth. The detonations are sho k waves caused when a falling meteorite penetrates the atmosphere.

The reports, Dr. Millman said, indicate that the object was 30 miles or more above the earth when it was sighted and was in the process of burning out.

"A bright fireball usually appears to be closer to earth than it actually is," he said. "Many people believe they see such an object plunging to earth when it actually is passing below the horizon."

"A long, noiseless streak of flame," 100 feet long tore across the sky and disappeared, George Mathewson, an employee of the Colonial Coach garage told the Examiner. He noticed the flame, but no explosion to the left of his car as he was driving east from Selwyn. He pinpointed the flame between Apsley and Bancroft.

"Probably a meteor," said Tom Mason, proprietor of the general store at Buckhorn. The flame was a "prominent red glow," travelling across the north horizon from east to west.

Richard Hall, a Buckhorn oldtimer, saw the mysterious flame too and confirmed that it was noiseless. None of the witnesses has connected the flame with unconfirmed rumors of explosions.

Joe Robson, who drives a school bus into Buckhorn, says he saw the "ball-of-fire" just before getting into his bus. He didn't know what to make of it.

In town, Mrs. James Bell, 284 Juliet St., had just got up. From her kitchen window Mrs. Bell saw a "flash of light" across the sky but "I didn't pay much attention to it." She said the flash was north and east of the city.

K. P. MacLeod, chief of the public weather section in the Toronto office of the federal government's meteorological division said "from all reports we've had, it seems to be a meteor."

Outer space is "loaded" with rock particles, said Mr. MacLeod. As these enter the earth's orbit they heat up due to friction from the atmosphere. Most of these rock particles, or meteors, burn themselves out several miles from the earth but those which do not become hot and fiery like the phenomenon described by district residents today.

Trans-Canada Air Lines pilots reported to the RCAF at Trenton that they believed the object was a meteor or meteorite. Officials at a Syracuse, N. Y., airport identified it as a meteorite.

At North Bay, there was a flash that lighted the entire sky for 15 seconds. Hundreds of citizens called newspapers and police to find out its source. Airport observers said they thought it was a burning meteorite.

One report was the object, appearing as a fiery blue ball, fell to the ground near Battersea about 12 miles north of Kingston. Provincial police searched the area for signs of it.

At Toronto it appeared as a falling flash of light. One observer said he thought it might have been an aircraft on fire.

Sudbury observers said an object in the sky disappeared after giving off a bluish glow over the entire area.

Pilot 'Chutes Safely From Flaming Plane

WIARTON (CP)—Gordon Lyons, 20-year-old pilot from Niagara Falls, Ont., parachuted to safety near here Tuesday night when the engine of his light plane caught fire. The plane crashed on the frozen surface of a nearby lake.

Lyons told police he was on his way to St. Catharines from Porquis Junction, 30 miles north of Timmins. He said he refuelled at Earlton, 35 miles south of Kirkland Lake, then became lost in gathering darkness and "had no idea where I was."

He flew westward across Georgian bay, thinking he was in the Lake Nipissing area.

MOTOR CATCHES FIRE

Near this town north of Owen Sound his motor started to act up. He was trying to reach the Wiarton airport when the motor caught fire and he jumped.

Lyons said a strong wind carried him away from his plane and he could not see exactly where it crashed.

It was his 32nd parachute jump but "the first one I was ever forced to make." He is a member of the St. Catharines Flying Club and made the other jumps at air shows.

Lyons said he had gone to Porquis Junction to pick up his plane which was damaged when he made a forced landing in northwestern Ontario last fall.

European Ring Behind Contraband Plot

MONTREAL (CP)—RCMP said Tuesday a multi-million dollar European smuggling ring using Montreal as a distribution centre is believed to have master-minded a contraband plot smashed here with the seizure of $200,000 worth of diamonds.

Jacob Kusmierski, 25, and Moses Mandel, 40, whose arrest led to the gem seizure were "definitely" involved in the ring, police said.

But they worked as carriers or "runners" bringing the diamonds to Canada and taking them into the United States for sale at black market prices that might have netted as much as $250,000, the police added.

The suspects were scheduled to be arraigned Tuesday but this was postponed until today at the request of Mandel's lawyer.

Ottawa Rejected Slav Designer's Jet Engine Plans

OTTAWA (CP)—Dusan Premovic, 37-year-old Yugoslav engineer arrested Friday at St. Albans, Vt., by United States immigration authorities, submitted plans for a revolutionary jet plane engine to national defence headquarters be[illegible] [illegible] he left Canada [illegible] said Tuesday the plans, believed to deal with a "verticle take-off" engine, had "some merit." He added that they were rejected by air force experts "because at the moment they do not justify the large expenditures involved in their development."

Premovic, who came to Canada last September as an immigrant, was arrested by border patrol officers on a charge of illegal entry.

JAILED IN VERMONT

A St. Albans news report said blueprints taken from him at the border were taken to Washington Tuesday for delivery to U.S. air force officials. Premovic, meanwhile, was held in jail at Burlington, Vt.

Spokesmen for A. V. Roe (Canada) Ltd., and de Havilland Aircraft Company of Canada, Ltd., said in Toronto earlier that Premovic was not known at their manufacturing plants.

tinue to work for the Russians and keep the United Kingdom advised. His Communist jobs included straight espionage, training of party members in various countries and the planning and implementation of revolutionary movements.

CAREFUL PLANNING

De Graff recalled the Brazilian episode:

"It was my job to organize the army for revolution and train party members accordingly. Through careful planning, I worked it so that half the army was in favor and the remainder opposed."

The Brazilian government quelled the uprising in Rio de Janeiro in four hours.

He recalled that he subsequently was returned to Moscow and grilled for 15 months, but four agencies could not shake his story that the uprising was not a revolution of the proletariat but rather a military rebellion.

LOANED TO RCMP

He was in Brazil when the Second World War started, en route to another assignment in Japan. He decided to break with Moscow however, and the British authorities agreed. They told him, however, that they were worried about Nazis in Brazil and asked his help. For almost a year, he gathered information on Nazis and pro-Nazis in the Brazilian government and army.

In 1940 he was called to London and later was loaned to the RCMP. About this time, Lieut. Werner Janowski, saboteur and radio expert, was captured when he landed from a German submarine on the Gaspe peninsula and agreed to cooperate with the RCMP. De Graff kept watch over him in a Montreal cellar for nine months, making sure the messages sent and received from Germany by Janowski were not garbled deliberately.

After the war he served with British occupation forces in Germany and in 1946 he resigned and returned to Canada to live.

Street Blackout Annoys Campbellford Councillors

CAMPBELLFORD (ENS) — Salvation Army captains S. Mutton and M. Baker addressed the 1954 town council at the inaugural meeting here on Monday. Council met at 11 a.m. and adjourned at noon for dinner as guests of the Rotary club. They re-convened at 7:30 p.m. at which time the striking committee reported.

The striking committee was composed of the mayor, Reeve D. R. Mayhee, Deputy Reeve George [illegible] W. A. Kingston. The committee recommended that the special parks committee of 1953 council carry on their work in dealing with the dominion government in connection with beautifying the strip of land along the Trent canal on Grand road. Negotiations are now in progress whereby the town wil lease the land from the government on a 20 year basis, at the rate of one dollar a year. The government will contribute part of the money needed to level the land and convert it into a park.

Two additional offers for the old hospital building were received. Thomas G. Wallace offered $3,000 for the building and A. D. Bennett $3,200. After some discussion, council decided to take no action at preset.

Council voted $2,800 to the public Library.

APPOINTMENT APPROVED

The appointment of Bruce Fairley and William Holmes by the Rotary club to the community arena board was approved.

Council named councillors George Vice and George Nicholls to the arena board.

The police committee will study a request from Chief Constable Charles M. Lockwood, that a third man be added to the force. Chief Lockwood said it is practically impossible to give the town 24 hour police protection with a two-manforce. The police committee will bring in a report at the next meeting.

Council decided to amend the present taxi-bylaw and to allow the police committee, together with the chief, to review all applications for new licenses, and applications to renew existing licenses, before any such licenses are granted.

After discussing the problems involved in hiring a new tax collector, it was decided to have the treasurer carry on until a new man can be hired. The tax-colector's job paid $150 a month, and this amount will be added to the treasurer's salary while he is acting tax collector.

Council decided to accept prepayment of 1954 taxes at the rate of 70 mills for public school supporters and 65 mills for separate school supporters. A by-law authorizing the treasurer to borrow up to $50,000 if needed was passed. However council usually receives sufficient money from prepayment of taxes to carry on without borrowing money.

STREET LIGHTING

Councillor Kingston asked council to re-consider the street lighting. He said that it was bad business to have the town without street lighting after dark. The public utilities commission asked council this in December to do away with street lighting after [illegible] of hours after dark, because the local power house was operating at capacity, and that the power they purchased from the Hydro was steam power, and very expensive. The condition was expected to last until early in January, and is still in effect. Various members of council agreed with Mr. Kingston that the situation was dangerous, and the mayor was asked to take the matter up with the PUC.

A bylaw appointing Dr. O. C. Watson to the library board for three years was passed.

Council adjourned about midnight, after passing the pay sheet.

Permission to build an eight-unit addition to Kawartha Motel, Lansdowne St. west, was granted by North Monaghan council on Monday. The applicants were L. M. Reilly, Toronto, and Stanley Tuff.

Council accepted the tender of J. L. Graham, [illegible] for the $26,000 debentures that are being issued to pay for the new Brealey School. They pay 4¾ percent and are issued for 20 years.

Application is being made to the Department of Highways for the statutory grant on the township's expenditure of $7,029.79 on township roads last year. The subsidy is half the cost of the roads and 80 percent of the cost of culverts.

The following accounts were passed for payment: roads and streets, $518.68; paysheet No. 27 for roads and streets, $188.70; relief and welfare, $104.20; printing and supplies $4.37; sundries $35.35; council for attendance at meetings Dec. 28, $25; Sick Children's Hospital $25.

Council decided to hold a Court of Revision for added assessments, buildings only, for this year's taxes, on Monday, Feb. 8 at 2 p.m.

A resolution noted that maintenance of the boundary road between Smith and Monaghan is to be done this year by Smith, and also stipulated that each township shall pay up to but not more than $400.

Harold Ball and Mervin Edgerton asked the council for a grant to maintain a skating rink at Scott's Corner for the young people of that community. Cavan township has contributed $50 and North Monaghan council decided to give $25.

CBC To Hear Peterborough TV Applications

OTTAWA (CP) — Two applications to establish a privately-owned television station on channel 12 in Peterborough, will be considered at a meeting of the CBC board of governors in Montreal Jan. 29.

Announcement Tuesday that the board will consider these applications on channel 12—a channel previously [illegible] permanent [illegible] ough—indicated that the government has decided to make it available there.

Later, a transport department official said the United States and Canada have agreed to amend their agreement on channel allocation permitting use of channel 12 at Peterborough. Its use there will not affect possible use of the same channel at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., since the two points are far enough apart to rule out mutual interference.

The Peterborough applicants are Kawartha Broadcasting Ltd., a group which includes Senator W. Rupert Davies and Roy Thomson, both of whom have newspaper and radio interests, and Herb May, Toronto radio personality.

The application by Kawartha for a Peterborough station came before the board's December meeting but the board recommended that action be deferred until it could be learned whether channel 12 would be allocated to Peterborough.

Previously, the only channel available there was on the ultra-high frequency band—channel 22. Channels on this band are not used at present in Canada and only a few in the United States. The newly-allocated channel 12 is on the very-high frequency band, used by all Canadian and most U.S. broadcasters.

In Canada, the CBC has recommended that the government license privately-owned television stations in 16 cities exclusive of Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver, Winnipeg and Halifax which are reserved to the CBC by government policy.

Private stations are operating in London, Ont., and Sudbury, while the CBC has stations broadcasting in Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and Vancouver with others in preparation at Winnipeg and Halifax.

Cobourg Mayor Advocates Street Paving Program

COBOURG (ENS) — "In spite of all there is to be caried out we should be able to hold the tax line and I look forward to continued growth in 1954" declared Mayor Jack Burnet in addressing the inaugural meeting of the town council. The mayor outlined a suggested program of civic improvement for the ensuing year.

He proposed hard surfacing of a definite area of streets every [illegible] permanent [illegible] which a start being made this year and financed either by a direct levy or debenture. The mayor said he favors debentures because ownership of properties are changing from time to time and he believes debentures are a fairer way of handling the cost. Sidewalk repair should be continued. Due to the increase in work of the tax collector and assessor, he thought that consideration should be given to the advisibility of separating these two offices. Merchants should be given protection from hawkers, peddlers and mobile canteens, said the Mayor, through passage of by-laws.

RE-ALLOCATE SPACE

The Mayor suggested also that rental of dock space at the lakefront should be re-allocated so that space would be available for the docking of ocean-going freighters, in view of enquiries received in the past month from Old Country firms. Since the new highway appears slated to go through the area being used as a dump north of town thought should be given to the erection of an incinerator, perhaps in partnership with the neighboring town of Port Hope. The land assembly scheme commenced in 1953 should be continued this year. The police committee will be asked to bring in an over-all plan to regulate traffic, including a stop light at the University and Division Sts. intersection.

Mayor Burnet also said that consideration should be given either to renovating the present rest station or building a new one on ground level. (By "rest station" the Mayor referred to the public lavatories in the town hall.) The town clock should be repaired and the outside of the town hall also repaired. There was need for improved steet lighting on certain thoroughfares. At the harbor there was a need for improved docking facilities for oil tankers.

COMMITTEES NAMED

The following committees were named, the first one on each committee being the chairman:

Public works committee, Jack Erskine, Lilian Richards and Roy Dodge; public buildings and printing, Alex McKinnon, Lilian Richards, and Louis Caine; police committee, Jeff Rolph, Jack Erskine, and L. Caine; fire, water and light, Charles Johnston, Alex McKinnon, Jeff Rolph; by-laws, Roy Dodge, C. Atomic War Will Not Be Banned

For the world's future the most critical part of President Eisenhower's message to Congress on the State of the Union was the declaration that the use of nuclear weapons is part of American defence policy. Here is the significant passage: "While determined to use atomic power to serve usages of peace, we take into full account our great and growing number of nuclear weapons and the most effective means of using them against an aggressor if they are needed to preserve our freedom." This is a declaration of the most momentous decision that has been taken since the first atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima. It means no less than this: if there is another war on a large scale, it will be an atomic war.

* * *

The American defence policy based on atomic weapons is already in effect. American ground troops are being reduced in numbers (two divisions are being removed from Korea). Appropriations indicate that in the United States itself and in Europe there will be fewer Americans under arms. The military power of the United States is being based on atomic weapons, and the planes to carry them and the machines to fire them, rather than on men. This being American policy, how can the United States afford to agree to a ban on A-bombs? Russia can afford it, for her superiority is in men, not in atomic weapons. The United States will certainly not surrender her dreadful superiority in exchange for a mere Russian promise. Atomic war will not be banned until all war is banned.

* * *

These are the realities which face the Soviet and American officials who are now exploring the possibility of a conference on atomic weapons, to try to find means to put atomic energy to peaceful, rather than warlike use. The alternatives are not ban or no ban on atomic weapons, but atomic war or atomic peace.

* * *

A conference would have great use, because both sides have declared their desire for concord and to rid the world of the terrible shadow of the A-bomb. Even though their approaches to the subject may be poles apart, they do have the theme in common. Negotiation and compromise are possible, if the intentions are sincere. As Mr. Anthony Eden said Monday, the essence of all successful international negotiation is compromise. On this horrible yet hopeful problem of atomic energy, positive compromise rather than a negative absolute is essential, and can be attained. Russia has proposed an absolute ban; the United States has proposed an international pool of fissionable products from national stock-piles. Between these two proposals there is much room for negotiation.

What Time Is Leisure Time?

Elsewhere on this page we print a letter from a Lindsay correspondent who disagrees with some remarks we made recently about leisure. We think that many of his points are well taken, but we must point out that in such a discussion everything depends on your point of view. We considered leisure as the time when a man was not actually working for his bread; our correspondent thinks of leisure as the time when a man has no obligations of any kind.

There are 168 hours in a week. A man who works forty hours has, in our view, 128 hours in which to do pretty much as he pleases. He must sleep, of course, but if sleep is not leisure, what is it? And he must eat; if eating is not a pleasant use of leisure for him, it is nobody's fault but his own—or perhaps his wife does not think of eating as a form of pleasure. But if he gets eight hours a night, and spends three hours a day enjoying his food (which very few people do) he has still more than fifty hours a week in which to do as he pleases.

With this fifty hours he commands infinite riches. If he chooses to spend it gardening, he can make a great garden; if he prefers nature study and outdoor life, he can make himself an expert on some aspect of it; if he likes reading, or music, he can, in the 2,500 hours a year this gives him (notice that he have given him two weeks in which to do nothing at all) become master of the greatest creations of man; he can be an amateur scientist, an astronomer, a physicist—any of a thousand things, in his leisure time.

Provided, of course, that he wants to do so. Most people employ their leisure in wishing that they had more leisure, in order that they might have time in which to do something—they are not quite sure what it would be, but they know it would be something wonderful.

Christmas Trees Go

Today the city's Sanitation Department sent out its men and waggons to collect the ghosts of Christmas past—the Christmas trees, now discarded in back yards or strewn along front lawns, no longer admired, wanted or pleasing. A few trees were still in position—and [illegible] its trees aglow, so did a small shop nearby. But now, a week after Twelfth Night, they seem somehow almost as out of place as the trees which have been littering streets.

City officials give people enough time and to spare to take down their trees. Opinions vary about the proper time for this obsequial task, but the latest date is Twelfth Night, the end of the twelve days of Christmas (January 6th). We hope, by the way, that citizens have taken note that after today's collection they "will be responsible for the disposal of any trees still in their possession." A hint to those who have not. The evergreens make a spectacular blaze in the fireplace—but put the branches on with care, for now that the trees have had three weeks to dry, they will, with a little coaxing, take light, and immediately flare.

One final word, and we are done with Christmas trees for another eleven months. Some well-meaning people deplore the "waste" of trees. All those beautiful little conifers cut down just for a week of decoration, and then cast out with the garbage, to be burned! We ask: what pleasanter use—yes, and more profitable—can be made of a little evergreen than to deck the hall with living greenery and celebrate the great festival? Most Christmas trees are now grown especially, as a crop, and they take only seven years to reach a desirable size. Is an evergreen not better used as a Christmas tree than to make the pulp for a crime comic?

Great South America

Immersed in self-conscious examination of their own country and overshadowed by the great mass and people of the United States, Canadians tend to look no farther south than Florida, Texas and California. They underestimate the importance of Mexico and South America.

What makes these Latin American countries important, you may ask. They did not play large parts in the two world wars; their voices are not forceful in world councils; they have no share in NATO. Their importance rises from their resources and their population. The population of the Latin American countries is now greater than that of the United States. The population of Brazil alone is more than three times as great as Canada's population. There are over fifty million people in Brazil. The Argentine has more people than Canada has; the latest figures is 18,379,000, three million of whom are not native to the country. The population of Mexico, a small country by Canadian standards, has risen from thirteen to twenty-five million in the last few years.

Latin American countries have not advanced economically and socially as fast or far as Canada, but a continent with so many people and great and varied natural physical endowments cannot be insignificant nor for ever take a minor place in the world's affairs of business, wars and politics. Poor governments, unstable, corrupt, selfish or near-sighted, have delayed the progress of the Latin American republics; low standards of living and inadequate educational opportunities have retarded the people. These conditions will change quickly, through the efforts of the people themselves, the policies and actions of U.S. business and government, and not a little because of the influx of Europeans during and since the war.

Canada should not overlook South America. Its markets are potentially among the greatest in the world. Further, South America is America, as Canada is. In considering defence as well as trade, one should remember that from the Canadian Arctic to the southernmost tip of Chile, these two continents are one land mass, a hemisphere unto themselves.

Is This Your Problem?

We read with interest in a British paper called The People that guardians and physicians in charge of oversexed delinquent girls find that these frisky creatures can be tamed, and their desires brought under control by feeding them a diet containing a high proportion of raw swede turnip and beetroot. This 'raw, hard and fibrous food' brings the girls back to what the experimenters call 'a wholesome natural outlook and an improved emotional balance.'

We can believe this. Anything less calculated to inflame the passions than raw swedes and beets can scarcely be imagined. If utter depression represents a good emotional balance, such a diet would unquestionably produce it. We pass the information on to any readers who may have to cope with alarming adolescent outbreaks.

CHESS AT HASTINGS

Your Move, Comrade

By EDWARD CRANKSHAW

THE RUSSIANS were expected to steal the show. It is so many years since representatives of the greatest chess-playing country appeared at the Hastings Congress which began last week in this English south-west town. Any Russian would have been an expert [illegible] But close to taking the world championship from Botvinnik two years ago; and Alexander Tolush, a good deal older but less famous outside Russia until he startled everyone by taking the first prize at the great Bucharest competition last year.

But as it turned out, these two stole the show: not by wiping the floor with their competitors, but by their admirable bearing and their unfailing and often highly adventurous sportsmanship. Chess is the last resort of democratic internationalism in its purest and most spontaneous form. Lately there have been faint signs that the transatlantic passion for winning at all costs was beginning even in chess to corrupt the desire to see and to understand. The Russians, too, obviously wanted to win, for their own glory and the glory of the Soviet Union. But chess has always come first, and they have set an example in that chivalry which, to the delight of every competitor, has marked the progress of this congress.

THE BASEMENT HALL of the White Rock Pavilion does not look like an arena for the display of high thinking and higher sportsmanship. It looks more like the scene of a village whist drive. At trestle tables covered loosely with green baize, fifty pairs sit in rows, all organized in sections of ten players. Only the chessboards and the double stop-clocks for each pair indicate that twice fifty intellects are wrestling in a sustained agony of concentration.

There is incessant movement, but no loud talking. Wandering between the lines of tables, competitors waiting for their next move murmur confidences, glance curiously at other people's games, fetch themselves cups of coffe and petit beurre biscuits from the buffet, or drift to the top of the room at the foot of the platform where the officials take their ease to see how the Masters are getting on. These five pairs again, are formally segregated, each pair with its own trestle table which sags disconcertingly in the middle under the weight of the thinker's elbow, and protected from the spectators in the single row of chairs by a yellow rope, which is a convention rather than a barrier.

✧ ✧ ✧

HERE may be seen not only five simultaneous exhibitions of chess at its highest but a display of human psychology in rich profusion. Bronstein and Tolush are themselves worth a week's study. Bronstein is all attractiveness and charm, small, neat, in a double-breasted blue suit with a rather startling tie of flaring red and blue. He has the self-containment of a great musician. Pale, with a forehead which is high and ample rather than immense, with horn-rimmed spectacles, the gentlest and most diffident manner, a delightful smile and an air of extreme sensibility, he offers for much of the time a spectacle of perfect relaxation. He returns to his table for his move like an experienced surgeon about to make a critical incision, remote and cool. Only under extreme pressure, as in his tremendous duel with Alexander, does he show the slightest sense of strain, and then only by a little tightness at the mouth. But he also shows then that his disarming exterior disguises a will of steel and an apparently infinite endurance, as well as the mind of a creative theoretician.

✧ ✧ ✧

IT IS Tolush, not Bronstein, who turns out to be the poet. A heavy, stocky figure in early middle-age, he looks like the most dependable type of Russian general in mufti, apparently impervious to all the failings of common humanity — except that he smokes like a chimney. But his game tells a different story: behind the stolidity there is a furious boldness which at times amounts to recklessness, and a delight in complex combinations for their own sake which may take him into territory he has not fully reconnoitred — just to see what happens. Sometimes the wrong thing happens. He attacks like a whirlwind. Bronstein attacks though swiftly, with the thoroughness of the mills of God.

A whirlwind may sound an inept image for the game of chess — thirty-four moves in the first two hours; seventeen moves an hour thereafter. It may seem particularly inept when applied to Tolush, who, when he met Bronstein and was confronted at the seventh move with an entirely new experience, sat down to think about it for an hour and ten minutes. (The new experience, which Bronstein had kept in cold storage for three years, had been christened by him the Hastings Variation of the Nimzovitch defence). But the mind has a lot of ground to cover in all too short a time. An average of three and half minutes is not long for a move which must lead ineluctably to the ruin of a fine-spun, intricate, apparently invulnerably logical mental process — either your opponent's or your own.

YOU HAVE to keep moving. There is no time for the contemplative trance. The clock ticks away the minutes of each move. The clock drove Bronstein and Alexander to go at it hammer and tongs for the whole of their epic eight hours on Wednesday. There was not a moment's let-up in the excitement of that game, perhaps the greatest of the series, in which the British ex-champion all day long outplayed the Russian grand master.

Superficially, no two men could be more different. Both have the same high spirited attitude to life and chess — although Bronstein is subdued, Alexander ebullient. Both have the same mathematical genius — although Alexander seems to have more intuition, Bronstein the more God-like view of serried regiments of permutations. Both have the same sense of humour — although Bronstein's response to a joke is a quick smile, Alexander's an uninhibited outburst of delight.

✧ ✧ ✧

WHAT is the common denominator of all these players? Look for it as you may, there is none visible: clergymen and schoolboys, charming young women like the Belgian lady champion and old, old men (but the accent is very much on youth), they are all as different from one another as human beings in any crowd. The common denominator can be only a passion for chess and the sort of mind that can cope with it. It is essentially the sort of mind which prefers skill to luck, which likes to know where it stands.

And all these temperaments — from the Belgian, Count O'Kelly, who, looking as though he had strolled in from a race course, defeated the veteran Frenchman, Tartakower, by sheer knowledge of everything that has ever been done in chess, plus the power to apply this knowledge — to the New Zealander, Wade, with his fighting flare for seizing and holding the advantage presented by a superior player in a moment of weakness, as in his remarkable victory over Tolush — all these temperaments share a sort of toughness which scorns those games in which failure can be pushed off on to bad luck and can face without flinching the very image of retribution. For failure in chess is retribution and nothing else: it is your brain that has failed, and there is no escape from it. There is nothing like it for finding out where you stand.

OUTLOOK FOR THE BERLIN CONFERENCE

Berlin and the Cold War

By RICHARD LOWENTHAL (in Berlin)

This is the first of a series of four articles on the outlook for the Berlin conference.

THE four-Power conference which is to open here on January 25, will be the first serious attempt since 1949 to overcome the cold war stalemate in Europe. Then [illegible] to liquidate the last great Soviet adventure in Europe — the Berlin blockade. Soviet expansion on the old continent had clearly been fought to a standstill; the Communist defeat in the Italian elections of 1948, the successful defection of Yugoslavia from the Soviet camp and the collapse of the guerrilla war in Greece were proof of that fact, as was the failure of the blockade itself. The time for a territorial settlement, including a decision on the future of Germany, seemed to have come.

The stumbling block was the question of the control of a united Germany. The Soviets proposed a return to full four-Power control as provided by the Potsdam agreement, with the right of each occupying Power to veto any decision. The Western Powers were prepared only to accept four-Power control on the Austrian model, under which any Austrian law becomes effective unless vetoed unanimously by all four occupying Powers. In later years, the Russians may have frequently regretted that they were not ready to accept this Austrian solution in 1949. For a few months later the Federal Republic of Western Germany and the "German Democratic Republic" in the East came into being; and when Communist aggression in Korea prompted the Western rearmament drive in the following year, the movement for building up an intergrated Western Europe, including Western Germany, soon became linked with plans for re-arming Western Germany within the European Defence Community.

TODAY, as in 1949, the four Powers meet at a time when a stage in the cold war has clearly ended. The Korean war has ended in stalemate, and the armament race which it began has reached a point where both sides wish to slacken the pace. Atomic competition has put at the disposal of both sides the means of total annihilation, but has left the West with a great advantage in the possession of ready tactical weapons for local mass destruction.

The readiness for serious negotiations now springs on both sides chiefly from a wish to reach agreement on a limitation of armaments — that is what the universal talk about "relaxation of international tension" really means. But any limitation of armaments clearly depends on an agreed definition of the security requirements of both sides, and of their legitimate frontiers. That is where the issue of Germany comes in: as the principal unsolved territorial problem, and hence the principal security headache, of both sides in Europe.

During the intervening four years of partition, opposite political, economic and social systems have hardened on both sides of the border, and have developed powerful vested interests. It is true that in the contest for the allegiance of the German people, the West has been overwhelmingly successful. There could be no more striking proof of the weakness of the Eastern regime than the rising of June 17, 1953, nor of the solidarity of the Western regime than the elections of September 6.

But the very completeness of the West's political victory may make a compromise on German unity more difficult, even if the problems of military security can be solved. There is certainly no prospect whatever of such a compromise unless the security issue is settled first. For it has been the security fears of both the Russians and the Western Powers which have kept ther troops in the heart of Europe, and have kept Germany divided long after Russia's post-war European offensive had spent its force.

THERE are several kinds of such fears—fears of one another and fears of a re-armed Germany. On the Soviet side, the principal anxiety seems to be that a re-armed Germany, if allied with the West in one form [illegible] the lost eastern provinces by aggressive war, and would be backed in this enterprise by those elements in the United States which desire to "liberate" Eastern Europe by force.

As long as this fear exists, Russia will clearly not consent to German unity in freedom, nor will it withdraw its occupation forces from German soil.

On the Western side, there is the fear that the pressure of the Russian armies, even after a possible withdrawal from Germany, will still not be matched by any Western forces on the continent unless Germany is re-armed; and there is the further problem, that a re-armed Germany, unless tied to the West by a virtual indissoluble alliance like the European Defence Community, may one day be tempted to the Russian side by the offer of a frontier revision with [illegible] Western Powers will clearly not renounce their plans of tying either a divided or a united Germany to the Western alliance.

To overcome these fears a German settlement would have to satisfy three conditions: first, it would have to assure a disengagement of Russian and U.S. forces from the centre of Europe. Second, it would nevertheless have to offer a long-term balance between Eastern and Western military forces on the continent. Third, it would have to guarantee an eastern frontier for a reunited Germany which would be accepted by all parties, including the Germans themselves.

Letters To The Editor

THE LORD'S DAY ACT

SIR: On Sunday afternoon I went down to Riverside Park to watch my 7-year-old son playing "hockey" with some of his friends. There were a few happy games going on when down came the law, and stopped all "hockey." It seems the boys were breaking the law (the Lord's Day Act). I wonder whose stretch of imagination could possibly include such an amusement in such an act. Talk about religious dictatorship, this take the cake, small boys having a wonderful innocent time, were confronted with the law. During the week the kids are put off the same ice so that church league may play, then the same group have them put off on Sundays. Is it anti-religious to enjoy one's self? I heard it suggested that they go to the lake which brought dread to my mind as I pictured all sorts of fatalities, and I'm afraid that's just what's going to happen if this ridiculous prohibition is pursued.

Yours,
"AMATEUR SPORTSMAN"

LEISURE TIME

SIR: I read your editorial on "Shorter Working Week in Peterborough" and I must take issue with it. You say "a forty hour week is precisely one and two-thirds days. Thus, out of seven days in the week many Peterborough people are working only one and two-thirds days. The rest of the time is their own, to do with as they wish." This is pure nonsense. I suppose when men were working seventy-two hours a week, they were only working three days and had over half the week to do with as they wished. Eating and sleeping take up 60 hours or more. Dressing, washing, and miscellaneous chores would take up approximately 4 hours a week. Most people spend a considerable time going to work and returning, say on the average 4 hours a week. Add on the 40 hours worked and this comes to 108 hours, leaving 60 hours for leisure which is a little over a third of the week instead of the three-quarters of the week which you say people have "free to dispose of as they wish." I understand the work week before was 44 hours. The reduction to 40 makes only a 7% increase in leisure time.

As for your fear that "production is not enough to maintain them on the high material plane to which they have grown accustomed." This appears to be a hypothetical problem. In my opinion, the problem would be overproduction, not underproduction.

How can anybody that works 8 hours a day, 5 days a week, become "so unaccustomed to work as to be incapable of it." You say "they may be conditioned to idleness, both inside and outside the plant." This, also, is a hypothetical problem. The idle worker would never be tolerated in an efficient, well-run plant, except maybe during a manpower shortage. The very shortness of the working hours tends to make the employer intolerant towards loafers. He wants production maintained at a high level in spite of short hours.

I don't see how anybody who takes any interest at all in the world around him could be bored with life as you seem to think people with their increased leisure are in danger of becoming. Many white collar workers work only 35 hours a week. Are these people better equipped to deal with problems arising from increased leisure than the manual worker? There is no reason why the labouring class should not benefit from man's inventive genius in making machines do much of his work for him. Nor is there any reason why this class should not have the leisure time to devote to hobbies, travel, entertainment, reading, cultural pursuits, and other things that broadens one's outlook and develop well rounded individuals.

Sincerely,
H. L. REEDS.
Lindsay, Ontario.

Bible Message

(From the Authorized Version)

In the way of righteouness is life; and in the pathway thereof there is no death. (Prov. 12:28.)

And, behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life? And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God: but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. (Matt. 19:16, 17.)

✧ ✧ ✧

And by the hands of the apostles were many signs and wonders wrought among the people . . . There came also a multitude out of the cities round about unto Jerusalem, bringing sick folks and them which were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed every one. (Acts 5:12, 16.)

California's Cars

(Calgary Albertan)

Alberta leads all the provinces in the number of vehicles per capita of population. In cars alone it is tied with BC for second place at one car per 5.1 people; Ontario was first with one for 4.7 people, and the Canadian average was one per 6.3. But Alberta has more trucks in proportion, and that brings its total mobility to the highest in the nation.

But if anyone thinks this province's roads are cluttered up with too many vehicles, the California figure is sobering. There are more than six million cars in that state, and only twelve million people. That's one car for less than two people.

No wonder California traffic is "out of this world."

Special Moscow School Operates On Shift System

By BILL BOSS

MOSCOW (CP)—School 702 is a product of Moscow's 10-year plan to provide better educational, medical, cultural and residential facilities for its citizens.

The five-storey brick school for girls is 25 minutes drive from the heart of Moscow in October Fields, an old suburb getting a new look. Around it are ancient one-storey shacks and large, modern apartment blocks under construction.

Moscow's 10-year building plan by 1960 will provide 26,000 hospital beds, 25,000 cinema seats, 108,000,000 square feet of apartment floor space and 400 schools.

School 702, whose principal is 43-year-old Mme. Taissia Ivanovna Khodorovskaya, is one of several already finished under the plan.

SHIFT SYSTEM

Its pupils are the daughters of workmen employed on the project, and of artisans, clerks and professional men and women living in the completed blocks.

Boys from the same area, including Mme. Khodorovskaya's nine-year-old son Alexander, attend a similar school nearby. Her husband is a metallurgical engineer.

I visited the school one Saturday afternoon. Because of an accommodation shortage Moscow's schools operate in two shifts. Youngsters attend from 8 a.m. until 1:25 p.m., and the older children from 2 p.m. until 7:20 p.m. School runs six days a week.

The completion of 170 of the proposed 400 schools, scheduled for September, 1955, is expected to make enough accommodation available to end the shift system.

Principal Khodorovskaya is a graduate from both the geography and history faculties of Moscow Paedagogical Institute. Of her 65 teachers all but four are university graduates. All are specialists, average 24 years of age and teach one shift.

The 1,700 girls take classes from the Canadian equivalents of first-year public school to high-school matriticulation. From the time Russian children begin school at 7 years until they are ready for higher education at 16 or 17 they remain at the same school under the same team of specialists.

DRESS DIFFERENTLY

The girls resemble well-behaved little girls anywhere, except that they dress differently and almost all have braids.

The school has a woman doctor on duty six hours a day, and a nurse who works four hours. The doctor's school work is her principal responsibility. All schools have doctors.

There is a large statue of Stalin in the main lobby and his picture is in most rooms. The top floor is given over largely to the auditorium and the Pioneers workroom.

Pioneers are the Soviet version of Brownies and Girl Guides. They wear red scarves around their necks. From them are taken members for the Young Komsomol League, from which in turn the Communist party is recruited.

Of this school's 1,700 girls, 1,100 are Pioneers and 208 are Young Komsomols. Girls may be accepted into the Pioneers from the age of nine, and into the Komsomols from 14.

HAS OWN ROOM

Each class has its own room, where all lessons except the sciences and physical training are taught. Lessons are 45 minutes with a 15-minute recess between each. Pupils are responsible for the decoration of their classrooms. They have a home-room teacher. Their specialist teachers rotate from room to room to conduct lessons.

Most children buy a buffet snack for lunch, or a drink to go with sandwiches brought from home. Between 250 and 300 hot meals are served daily, 30 of them free to children whose parents earn substandard incomes.

For one ruble 30 kopeks (33 cents at the artificial exchange rate of four rubles to the dollar) a girl has a choice of tea, coffee, cocoa or fruit; a meat dish with macaroni or potatoes; a salad. Schools get the best milk, sold to children at 17 Kopeks (four cents) a glass. Tea costs 16 kopeks, coffee 60 and cocoa one ruble. A bologna-sausage sandwich costs 81 kopeks.

MOST WEAR UNIFORMS

While it is not obligatory, most girls wear pinafore uniforms. When they go to parties or to the theatre the girls put a frilly, starched white apron over their uniforms.

Besides the normal run of academic subjects there are classes in music, singing, drama, drawing and painting, dancing and handicrafts. While they don not learn Marxism as such in public schools, they study the Soviet constitution, Russian history and the history of the Communist party.

There are two weeks' winter holiday and two months' summer vacation.

SIX-DAY SCHOOL WEEK—Children attend school six days a week in Russia. Children begin school at the age of seven and youngsters such as this pupil in the arithmetic class go to school in Moscow's new School 702 from 8 a.m. to 1.25 p.m. Her teacher is a distinguished Russian educator, holder of the Order of Lenin, highest decoration in the U.S.S.R. Note the heavy clothing worn by the children in the classroom.

SCHOOL IN RUSSIA—School 702 in the October Fields suburb of Moscow has 1,700 girl pupils from seven to 16 or 17 taking the equivalent of grade and high-school training in Canada. Pupils attend the five-storey brick school in two shifts of 22 classes each. It is part of Moscow's 10-year plan to provide better educational, medical, cultural and residential facilities for its citizens.

Australia Carries On Canadian Wheat Clash

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — A reported Anglo-Australian conflict over Canadian wheat purchases was carried a stage further today. The Times of London commented that Australia "seems to be crying out" before she is hurt.

The difference was said to have arisen Monday in Sydney, Australia, in a secret economic meeting held as part of the conference of Commonwealth finance ministers. Reports said the Australian [illegible] in particular [illegible] buying dollar wheat in Canada instead of spending sterling for surplus Australian grain.

NEEDS HARD WHEAT

British spokesmen in Sydney were quoted as replying that Britain had always bought and will always buy some of her wheat from North America because it is hard wheat needed for mixing with Australia's soft wheat. Wheat is classified as hard or soft according to the amount of protein or gluten it contains.

Commenting on the Sydney reports, The Times says in an editorial today that while it is certainly irksome for Australia to have to cope simultaneously with a large crop and a more competitive market, it was "much too early to presume that Australia will not have a market for her surplus at fair prices."

Other press reports published here today suggest that Prime Minister Robert Menzies of Australia does not share the reported feeling of the Australian wheat board that Australia should reduce wheat acreage.

DEPLORES CONTROVERSY

"I deplore the controversy which has made the world wheat situation appear weaker than facts justify," Menzies was quoted. "Export prices are still well above Australian production costs."

Britain's purchases of North American wheat follow a long period last summer when she cut down dollar purchases after refusing to sign the international wheat agreement because the price of $2.05 per bushel was too high.)

bought 123,400,000 bushels of Canadian wheat during the crop year ended last July 31, and is "buying continuously from us."

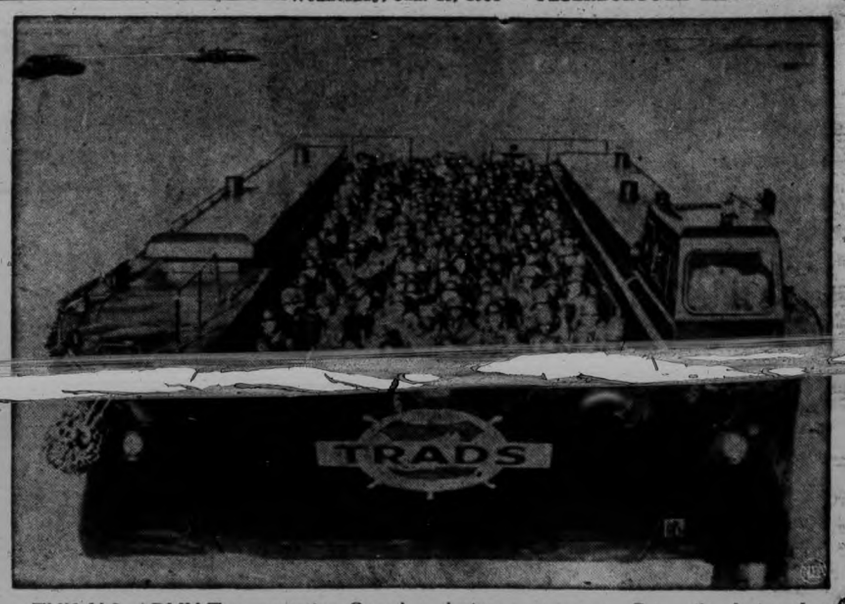
Bleeding Statue Tested Found Solid Wood

NICE, France (Reuters) — An X-ray examination Tuesday refuted scoffers' claims that a little wooden statue of Saint Anne was made to drop "miraculous" blood by means of a trick device inside it.

Radiologist Andre Tropini said his tests confirmed that the statue was solid wood all the way through.

The 20-inch figure has mystified inhabitants, priests, doctors and chemists in the little town of Entrevaux since Dec. 27 when its owner, hotel proprietor Jean Salade, accidentally broke one of its fingers, and the broken edge, he said, immediately began to drop blood. Chemists said analysis showed the red liquid was human blood.

One theory was that some device had been inserted when the statuette was made about 200 years ago which would provide the "miracle."



THIS U.S. ARMY Transportation Corps' 60-ton amphibious vehicle named the "BARC" carries 203 field-equipped troops during a test run. Primarily designed to carry heavy equipment such as tanks, cranes and locomotives, it is also being considered as a potential troop carrier.

See Increase Of 300,000 At Ball Games

NEW YORK (AP)—The addition of Havana and Richmond, Va., to the International League will mean an over-all increase of some 300,000 in attendance during 1954 if the [illegible] president Frank Shaughnessy holds up.

Shortly after Havana and Richmond were admitted [illegible] would draw approximately 300,000 customers next season.

Havana and Richmond replace Baltimore and Springfield, Mass., as members of the oldest of baseball's minors.

Robert Maduro, president of the Cuba club which attracted only 30,000 in the class B Florida International League, also said he looks for a season's attendance of 300,000. The Havana ball park seats 30,000.

INCREASE SEATING

Richmond's Parker Field seats only 4,048 but owner Harry Seibold has assured the league it will be enlarged to hold 12,300 by the time the season opens April 20.

Both Havana and Richmond will open a day early with Toronto and Rochester the respective opponents. League secretary Harry Simmons said the schedule has not been completed but each club will make two trips to Havana and Richmond and will play an entire week at each city.

Maduro has guaranteed all of the clubs the extra cost to transport players to and from Richmond.

Tonight the Neill Trophy bonspiel continues.

Dr. R. Morgan, Dr. R. Nott, Dr. D. Clark and Dr. L. Calvert are playing in the men's open bonspiel today in London.

This Saturday, at 1:30 o'clock, we are having another of those popular bonspiels — the first 14 men's rinks entered, schedule calibre. Give your entry to Pete Collins, Archie Lister, Vic Brown, or Ira Moore.

The draw is made for the second schedule and play begins next Monday night. All information is posted on the notice board.

Playing with Garth Braund, A. Winslow and Z. Levine over the weekend, A. Ingram made the high score of 50 in the points competition. We think this will be hard to beat, not only here but anywhere in the province. Al Winslow had a score well up in the 40s. It was the first time the boys had tried for a score this season, and it was a mighty fine effort.

Tomorrow morning at nine o'clock we have the district playdowns played here for the Governor-General's Trophy. Fred Stenson and Harry Baptie will skip the two local rinks.

FOR TANKARD

Also on Thursday, and at Lindsay, in the district playdowns for the Ontario Tankard, W. M. Cruthers and Dave Charlton will pilot the two Peterborough rinks.

Mrs. D. Charlton, Mrs. C. Coons, C. Coons and D. Charlton won the second event in Lindsay's two-day open mixed rink bonspiel.

Dr. R. Clark has a rink entered today in Oshawa's open bonspiel.

Also today, and playing at Lindsay, are two local rinks skipped by T. Doughty and C. Lawrence.

Junior Petes Get Victory Against Lindsay Squad To Lengthen Lead

LINDSAY (ENS)—The junior Petes increased their OHA junior "B" group lead to a full three games here last night, as they hung on long enough to down the under-manned Lindsay juniors, 6-5, in a tightly-played game. Buddy MacDougall netted the winner with less than four minutes left in the final period.

Gary Kearns scored the first goal after the game was only three minutes old when he took Uren's pass from behind the net, giving Kemp no chance on his shot. The Lindsayites with but one regular defence man dressed tightened up and held the Petes scoreless for the balance of the frame. Kemp turned some great saves, while at the other end poor shooting cost the home club at least three goals.

DIVIDED SIX

In the second, the clubs split six goals. The Lindsay club went out in front, 2-1, early in the period on goals by Hutton and Growden, the second with Frizzelle sitting out a minor. Lucas was off at the half when Coyle tied it again, tipping in Morrow's screened shot, and before he came back, McDougall banged in Frizzelle's rebound to give the visitors the lead.

Graham got that one back for Lindsay on a rush with Pearson but with five seconds to go. Hook took Davis' pass alone in front to score.

The third, which was played at straight time, as the timer's clock froze in the four-below atmosphere, opened with Frizzelle scoring on a solo rush while Lucas was off. The Lindsayites roared back, and tied it on goals by Hutton and Truax, coming within two minutes of each other. Two minutes later, McDougall grabbed the puck at centre, stick-handled by the Lindsay defence, and blasted a back-hander through Kemp's pads for the winner. A penalty to Graham with two minutes left killed any chance Lindsay had to force overtime.

UNDER CONTROL

The game was rugged but fairly clean, as Referee Jim Crombie kept the teams under his thumb. He called 13 penalties, 12 minors, with seven going to the homesters, Gardner drew a 10-minute misconduct in the first for arguing a penalty too strenuously.

For the Petes, McDougall, Kearns, Morrow, Byrne and Frizzelle stood out. Truax, Hutton, Teel Graham and Kemp were the pick of the 11 Lindsayites dressed for the tilt.

Jr. Petes: Goal, O'Brien; defence, Byrne, Frizzelle, Pue, Hook; forwards, McDougall, Gardner, Coyle, Kearns, Uren, Doris, Morrow, Ferguson, Ball. Lindsay: Goal, Kemp; defence, Crawford, Graham, Lucas; forwards, Hutton, Truax, Packer, Cochrane, Growden, Pearson, Teel.

Don't Expect Football "War"

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There may be some skirmishing, but a couple of National Football League executives doubt there will be much of a war between the NFL and Canadian professional football.

George Preston Marshall, president of Washington Redskins, said "Canada doesn't have the population, cities or stadiums to afford teams such as the National Football League has."

And Nick Kerbaway, general manager of the champion Detroit Lions, added: "If anybody wants to go to Canada, I know the right travel agents who will expedite their trip. If an American boy who has built his reputation under American football wants to lose his identity for future business contacts by running up to Canada, that's his business."

Lakefield Downs Cobourg In 4-3 Lakeshore Tilt As Fans And Clock Freeze

While everything else, the time clock, the public address system, the fans and the referees were frozen practically solid, Cam Wasson's Lakefield intermediates were hotter than a firecracker Tuesday night as they edged Cobourg 4-3 in the Lakefield arena. The tired Comets, playing their fifth game in a week were no match for the fresh Lakefield team which kept Comets hemmed well inside defensive territory. Lakefield's victory allowed them to crowd closer to Cobourg and Lindsay in second place and at the same time kept Cobourg from jumping into first place with Orono.

The 10-below-zero temperature didn't stop the fans from turning out but it certainly stopped the clock. Therefore, for the first period the teams played straight time, shifting back to stop time for the remaining two when a hand stop-watch was found.

While everyone else was warmly bundled, referee Maurice Walsh of Toronto and linesman Bun Kingdon shivered in their light white sweaters. The cold hit their ears, finally they added a toque for Walsh and a ski hat for Kingdon in the second.

CHILLED EARLY

The Comets were chilled quickly. They possibly took a chill after becoming hot in the first three minutes of the game when Dave Casey and John Fisher gave the lakeshore team a 2-0 lead. But after that they were cold.

At the same time Wasson's lads became hotter as the night grew colder. Pressing hard, hemming the Comets in and making goalie Clark Sommerville work, Lakefield rallied, tying the game at two quick goals.

Ab Carravaggio scored the first on a blueline screen shot which was neatly blocked from Sommerville's view. Doug Hunter was set into the open two minutes later with Tom Birch and Wasson to tie the score.

Still carrying play to the Comets, Lakefield Lumbermen again outplayed and outscored the Comets in the second. Ken Floyd whacked in a loose puck, followed up by Coach Wasson rapping in a second counter after a neat bit of forechecking inside the Cobourg blueline.

The Lumbermen forechecked Comets well inside the blue line again throughout the third. They checked so hard that Comets had only three shots at Lakefield goalie Ray Harding. One of these by Bernie Flesch beat Harding with only a half-minute to go.

Cobourg: Goal, Sommerville; defence, Flesch, McKeen; centre, Casey; wings, Legrow, Fisher; Alts.: Irvine, Stevenson, Campbell, Alexander, Harnden.

Lakefield: Goal, Harding; defence, Richlark, D. Wasson; centre, McCracken; wings, Floyd, N. Wasson; Alts.: Birch, Hopkins, Hunter, C. Wasson, Carravaggio.

Officials—Walsh of Toronto, Kingdon of Peterborough.

GRANT'S SPORT CORNER

By DON GRANT

We'll dish up a column with a little international flavor today. Don't try to digest all of it, the spicy parts might keep you awake at nights.

We'll deal with the plight of the Peterborough Ornamental Swimming Club whose genial coach, Mrs. Pansy Forbes, will be honored next week as Peterborough's citizen of the year (1953).

These young ladies (down boy, they are either married or have steadies) want to attend two big meets this year. But unfortunately like with most sporting groups there is a slight question of finances, in fact lack of finances.

With a little backing from some civic clubs, i.e. the Lions Club, the swimmers generally PAID THEIR OWN WAY to championship meets. They're willing to keep on doing this but want a little more extra help to gain laurels for the club and city in far-off places.

Skip Big Meet

The really big meet, the United States outdoor title which they won last year, is not for the Peterborough club this year. Although meet dates were especially arranged for the city lasses to atttend, they won't be going.

Mrs. Forbes said today that since this year's championships are in Beverley Hills, California, the girls feel it's just a little too far for the pocket books to stand.

But they're working to raise funds to attend the British Empire Games (also the Dominion championships) and perhaps the United States indoor championships in Chicago.

Of the two the girls really prefer to head west to the coast, to Vancouver and the games. They, as North American and Canadian champions, were invited to the Games. If the Games committee likes the new sport, basing its likes on the Peterborough showing, synchronized swimming may become a part of the B.E.G. in 1958.

Penniless Too

The Amateur Synchronized Swimming Association, is still in its baby stage and therefore like the city club is penniless. The Ontario section is endeavouring to raise money to help send Peterborough's team, the Canadian solo and duet champions.

So far the Ontario section has $200 raised from Peterborough club performances in Thornhill and Toronto.

How much will be need? Mrs. Forbes said a group of 15 will probably be sent, meaning they'll get special rates. If they go by train, it's $148 a person. If they go by plane, it's $256 a person.

Using our Grade 4 mathematics this means they'll have to raise between $2,000 and $3,840 for the trip. Throw in the other three swimmers from Montreal and the figure jumps more. The $200 is now only a drop in the bucket (man's size).

The performance for the Games will be on July 27, one day before the BE Games are over. They'll duck two days later into the Dominion team championship against teams from Toronto and Montreal.

Therefore by going west they do two things: show other countries in the British Empire what synchronized swimming is like and also bring home the Dominion honors.

Extra For Chicago

While raising money for the western trip, the swimmers will also be aiming for extra funds for a jaunt to Chicago. There in April, two and a half months away, the US indoor title will be at stake in the Illinois Athletic Club.

If the girls could enter and win that event, they would bring home nearly the same honors as from the outdoor championships in Florida last summer. In 1950 the Peterborough club placed third; a half-point behind second-place Des Moines and a full point behind the champions, Michigan.

It would be quite a summer for the girls and for Peterborough if they could win the United States title, the Dominion championship as well as attending the Games.

But to do this they'll need help. The girls would appreciate any ideas anyone can offer which will help ease the strain on their wallets. They'd also appreciate a good response to their money-making schemes.

Murphy's Fractured Jaw Key To Ranger's Upsurge In League Wins

By ED SIMON, Canadian Press Staff Writer

The jaw-bone, which hasn't figured as an offensive weapon since Samson came from behind to whip the Philistines, looms large in the improving fortunes of New York Rangers. The Rangers were heading nowhere in the National Hockey League before Dec. 20, the night Montreal's Bernie Geoffrion slugged Ron Murphy with his stick and put the New York left-winger on a liquid diet. But ever since Murphy [illegible] jaw his teammates have looked more and more like playoff contenders.

It was the prospect of bloodshed that pulled the crowds into Madison Square Garden after the Geoffrion-Murphy fracas. But the sight of the long-absent faces in the stands inspired the Rangers into playing winning hockey. And every win brought in another crowd.

SCORED 6 VICTORIES

As Murray (Muzz) Patrick makes his debut as Rangers coach tonight, the team's record stands at six victories and four defeats since they lost Murphy. A victory over Detroit would leave them two points behind the fourth-place Boston Bruins and would give them a five-game winning streak, their longest since the last time they led the league in 1941-42.

Patrick, relieving manager Frank Boucher of double duty, admitted Tuesday that he has a tough assignment in steering the club to the playoffs, but added that he thinks he can do it.

"From what I've seen of the Rangers so far, they're a happy and hard-working team," he said.

The schedule calls for them to be particularly hard-working (if not happy) in the next two weeks, in which they play seven games, five of them on the road. Three meetings with brother Lynn Patrick's Bruins could make or break New York's Stanley Cup chances.

LONG ROAD TRIP

Tonight's second NHL game brings the last-place Chicago Black Hawks to Toronto to close out a long and rocky five-game road trip in which they saw their playing strength cut to 14 men by injuries to forwards Bill Mosienko, Gus Bodnar and Jim Peters.

Hec Lalonde of the junior Galt Black Hawks will move into the Chicago line-up against the Leafs. Ken Wharram of Quebec Aces in the Quebec Hockey League and Hillary Menard of Guelph junior Biltmores may also see action for the Hawks.

The third-place Leafs have yet to taste defeat on home ice this season but suffered a humiliating 4-1 setback on their last visit to Chicago.

4 Ball Players May Make Hall Of Fame

NEW YORK (AP)—At least one, and perhaps four, players may enter baseball's hall of fame this year.

The annual balloting hasn't been concluded and the results won't be known until next week. But based on the 1953 elections and the rule changes barring all players inactive after 1928, Bill Terry figures to become the 65th player to join the game's immortals at Cooperstown, N.Y.

Along with Terry, such former stars as Joe DiMaggio, Bill Dickey and Walter (Rabbit) Maranville, may make it. Only two players—Dizzy Dean and Al Simmons—were elected last year, getting the required 75 per cent of the votes of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Dean received 209 of the 264 votes with Simmons getting 199, one more than necessary for election. Terry, a brilliant fielding and hard-hitting first baseman with New York Giants, missed with 191 votes. Dickey got 179, Maranville 164, and DiMaggio 117.

Hoad Trades Racket For Army Rifle

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)—Lewis Hoad, Australian Davis Cup tennis star, today became Pte. Lewis Hoad of a national service training battalion as he traded his racket for a rifle.

Hoad, who defeated both Tony Trabert and Vic Seixas of the United States in the recent Davis Cup challenge round, said he is looking forward to army training as a welcome break from tennis. He'll do 98 days of basic infantry training, then two years of part-time service.

Mercurys Edge Tigers With 4-2 Win

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

With more than a month remaining in the regular schedule Ab DeMarco, veteran forward for North Bay Trappers of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, has set a league record.

DeMarco collected two assists while the Trappers were defeating Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians 4-3 in North Bay last night and his booty gave him a total of 49 assists so far this season—a record.

But DeMarco wasn't the only star in senior hockey around Ontario.

Eric Unger scored three goals and assisted on the other two as Niagara Falls Cataracts defeated Chatham Maroons 5-2 in an Ontario Hockey Association Senior A game at Niagara Falls. Ed Plata fired the other two goals for the Cataracts.

INCREASE LEAD

In the other OHA game Tommy Burlington notched three counters for Owen Sound as the Mercurys increased their first-place lead with a 4-2 victory over Hamilton Tigers in Owen Sound. Vern Gardiner scored the winner for the Mercurys.

In the second NOHA game Pembroke Lumber Kings downed Sudbury Wolves 3-1 in Sudbury.

Hub Anslow and Murray Comfort tallied for Hamilton against Owen Sound.

NOHA IDLE

Mike Bukacheski, Ed Marineau, Alf Guarda and Don Hogan gave the Trappers their win over Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.), Indians. Marcel Clements fired two for the losers with the other going to Hank Backor.

Jack Schmidt scored two of Pembroke's three goals against the Wolves. Orval Gravelle nothed a single and Orval Lavell scored for Sudbury on a long shot in the third period.

Windsor Bulldogs meet the Dutchmen in Kitchener and Owen Sound plays the Indians in Stratford in the OHA tonight.

The NOHA is idle tonight but Thursday Sault Ste. Marie (Mich.) Indians meet Sault Ste. Marie (Ont.) Greyhounds in Ontario.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert, builder of the New York Yankees baseball team, died 15 years ago today at 71. Ruppert, with TIL Huston, bought the Yankees — then the Highlanders—for $365,000 in 1914, and helped them win four straight world series including the one after his death in 1939. The current Yankees hold five straight league titles and five straight world series.

Roberts Fires Contract Back

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Pitcher Robin Roberts fired his 1954 contract back to the Philadelphia Phillies Tuesday with a claim he doesn't think he should have to take a pay cut.

Roberts wouldn't discuss the figures on the contract, except to say that the pay cut did not amount to $5,000. Most guesses here have been that he got in the neighborhood of $40,000 last year.

Roberts won 28, lost seven in 1952, and had a 23-16 record last year when he ran into difficulty toward the end of the season.

"I don't think there's any reason why I should be expected to take any less in 1954," he said.

Gavilan Gets Chicago Site

CHICAGO (AP) — Kid Gavilan, convinced Chicago is hot for him, has won his first skirmish with Bobo Olson, the man he'll meet for the middleweight boxing championship of the world April 2.

The Cuban kid, current welterweight champ, persuaded Olson, middleweight titleholder, that dollars can be had for the asking in Chicago Stadium where, it was announced Tuesday, the match will be held.

Gavilan has enjoyed immense financial success in Chicago and international boxing club sources say he and his manager, Angel Lopez, convinced the Olson camp that holding this "natural" anywhere else would be sheer waste.

Whether this could be considered a victory for Gavilan was debated in some quarters. Terms call for Olson to receive 35 per cent of the gate, the Kid 25.

Jamaica Draws Match With Marylebone Club

KINGSTON, Jamaica (Reuters) A century by John Holt, son of a former West Indies test player, enabled Jamaica to draw their match with the touring Marylebone Cricket Club Tuesday.

Needing 230 runs with 90 minutes of playing time left at the start of their second innings, the visitors were able to score only 34 for the loss of one wicket.

Frontenacs Clip Barrie In 6-2 Victory

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Earning points in Ontario and Quebec Junior A hockey action last night was no easy task.

In four games, including three interlocking clashes between Ontario Hockey Association and Quebec Amateur Hockey Association [illegible] Another overtime game ended deadlocked.

Quebec Frontenacs had the only easy time as they scored a 6-2 win over Barrie Flyers in Quebec. In Kitchener, Galt Black Hawks came from behind to tie the game i nthe third period and added another counter in the extra session for a 4-3 victory over the Greenshirts.

St. Catharines took a 7-6 homeice decision over Trois-Rivieres Reds and in Montreal Hamilton Cubs fought the Royals to a 2-2 draw.

OVERTIME GOAL

George Faulkner, scoring a goal a period, was the big gun for the Frontenacs. Ray Cyr, Stan Parker and Richard Bouchard counted the others for the winners. John Martan and Dan Polizziani were the Barrie marksmen.

Cec Hoekstra's overtime marker, his second goal of the night, gave St. Catharines the edge over Trois-Rivieres. Don McLean, Barry Cullen, Bob Armstrong, Ian Cushenan and Hugh Barlow shared the rest. Windy Fournier paced the Reds with a pair of goals. Gaston Marcotte, Jean Cosette, Leon Michelin and Ivan Houle added singles.

John Sleaver's long shot provided the freak goal that defeated the Greenshirts. Kitchener netminder Claude Pronovost stopped the puck but it bounced into the air and fell into the net behind his back. Hec Lalonde fired two goals for the Hawks with the other going to Ed Switzer.

BROKE LOSING STREAK

Buddy Horne, Grieg Hicks and Gary Collins gave Kitchener an early lead.

The Montreal tie against Hamilton broke an 11-game losing streak for the Royals. Cummy Burton and Ed Louttit had given the Cubs a 2-0 first-period lead but Gardner's two counters in the second deadlocked the score.

Trois-Rivieres heads for Galt while Barrie goes to Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Marlboros to Guelph Biltmores in tonight's action.

Outdoor Artificial Rink Born When Engineer Saw Disappointed Children

By JIM BASTABLE

TORONTO (CP)—Cliff Meadows looked out of his office window in central Toronto on a mild winter day, saw some youngsters glumly toting hockey skates and sticks, and decided to do something about it. That's when the outdoor artificial ice rink was born into community life.

"Those kids looked unhappy," Meadows said in an interview. They had just left one of the city's natural ice rinks, which was a puddle of water. That's when I determined to do something for them."

He has. In four years Meadows, 62-year-old consulting engineer, has supplied 15 of the 35 or so outdoor artificial rinks in the United States and Canada. Seven are located in the Toronto area.

PLANNED SYSTEM

"The outdoor artificial rink isn't new," Meadows said. "But it is the first time they have been used in a planned system in the community."

What does that mean to the youngsters who some day may be headliners in big-time hockey?

"They've saved the hockey lives of many children," says Norm Ware of Toronto, general-secretary of the Catholic Youth Organization, which operates 75 teams in the city. "I'm sold on them."

Dave Appleton, recreation director for suburban York Township, feels the same way. He says:

"One of the best investments a man can make. Just the thing we need for the mild winters, which are getting warmer every year in eastern Canada."

President Fred Heintzman of the Toronto Hockey League and its 350-odd hockey teams, says:

"We don't use the outdoor rinks but they undoubtedly are wonderful. We need more of them. Most Toronto Hockey League teams have used the closed arenas for years. We probably won't change now but there are plenty of other teams that will use them."

ALWAYS READY

For as little as $87,000, cities and municipalities can invest in one of Meadows' rinks and forget about the weather. It's a sure thing, civic officials added, even with the mercury hitting as high as 70 degrees.

"It's already proved its worth," says Oscar Pearson, Toronto deputy parks commissioner. "They're cheap when you consider the benefit kids and hockey clubs as a whole get out of them."

Meadows, who has designed sport centres and arenas in various parts of Ontario, has plenty of orders for his rinks, costing between $87,000 and $125,000. Even places which get cold winters—such as Regina, Fort William, Sioux Lookout, Ont.—are looking into the project. He has inquiries from Milwaukee and Chicago. Civic officials in London, England, and New Zealand have shown interest.

"They are going all the time," said Appleton. "We have teams on the waiting list. But we make sure that pleasure skaters get plenty of opportunity to use them."

LUXURY MODEL

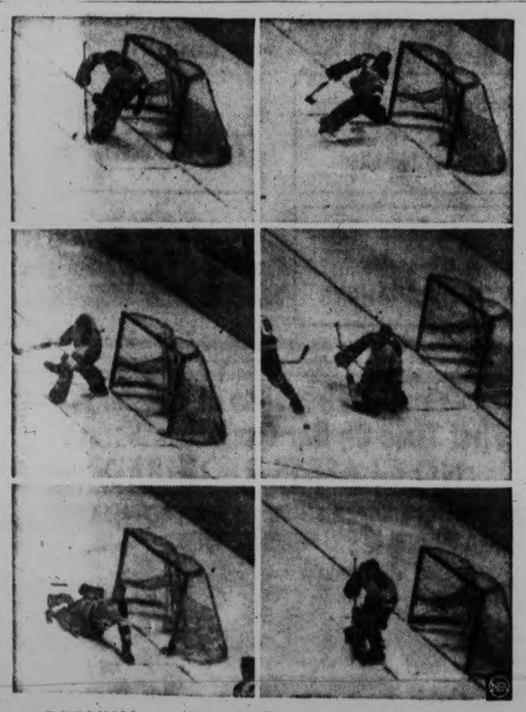
Meadows started his plans on the outdoor rinks after he built Riverdale Terrace, a $500,000 venture, for private interests. The terrace is enclosed, has a snack bar and other frills, and even the bare rink cost $125,000.

"They come cheaper than that, though," Meadows said. "Some communities just can't afford the bigger rinks. The smaller rinks do a wonderful job, too."

Meadows has also designed a space and money-saving "roll-up" rink. This consists chiefly of light, strong plastic pipes and a minimum of freezing equipment. It can be set up or taken down in a day and the field used for football or tennis.

If a community decides to build a group of portable rinks, a booster freezer can be supplied to cut down the freezing equipment of each rink. Mobile, the booster goes from rink to rink for the initial freezing in the fall and supplies extra freezing power for unusually warm weather. The rinks need only equipment to maintain the ice once it's frozen.

The permanent and portable rinks are built along the same lines. Thousands of feet of plastic pipes, able to stand the weight of ice and pressure of the refrigeration solution they carry, are under the cement slabs.



DERVISH — Johnny Bower slips, slides, slaps and sticks his way to a 4-3 victory over the Chicago Black Hawks, but the New York Rangers' goalie has yet to register his first shutout in the National Hockey League.

Four Rinks Still Unbeaten In Holton Trophy Spiel

HAMILTON (CP) — Four rinks from Oshawa, Owen Sound, Sarnia and Hamilton Victoria clubs remained unbeaten as the women's Holton Trophy bonspiel ended its third round. Semi-finals and finals will be completed today.

Mrs. Chilvers Gooch, whose first-round upset featured the first draw continued on to two victories Tuesday, the first over Mrs. C. E. Howard of St. Catharines, 8-6, and again over Mrs. H. B. Paddon [illegible] final against Mrs. H. B. Baldwin of Sarnia. Mrs. Baldwin defeated Mrs. H. F. Gorrie, Hamilton Thistles, 8-6.

The Owen Sound rink, skipped by Mrs. E. Fraser, took two decisive wins, 11-4 over Mrs. C. G. Teskey of Kitchener, and 12-6 over Mrs. C. Foley Bennett's Thistle entry. She will play in the second semi-final against Mrs. A. G. Coppin's Oshawa quartet, which eliminated the Huntsville entry of Mrs. E. Wilston 14-1 and the Toronto High Park rink of Mrs. M.C. Code 10-8.

THISTLES PLACE FOUR

In the Cheriton Trophy event, Hamilton Thistles, whose four first-round winners in the Holton event were defeated Tuesday, placed two rinks in semi-final play. Mrs. J.F. Brunton defeated Mrs. M. F. McIntosh's Woodstock rink 13-8 [illegible] Toronto Curling Club foursome skipped by Mrs. D. A. Robinson, 7-6.

Also in the running in the Cheriton were Mrs. R. C. McCandless of Sarnia, with an extra end 10-9 win over Mrs. A. L. Garson of Hamilton Thistles, and Edith Creswicke of Toronto Curling Club, with an 8-7 extra-end decision over Mrs. D. Hastings of Midland.

VOTED THRILL OF YEAR

NEW YORK (AP)—The gallery of some 10,000 fans pressing closely around the final hole of the Tam O'Shanter world golf tournament in Chicago last Aug. 9 conceded the $25,000 first prize to Chandler Harper.

The 39-year-old veteran from Portsmouth, Va., had just pitched a No. 9 iron shot 20 inches from the cup for a cinch birdie 3 to finish with a 70 for a 72-hole total of 279, nine under par.

Then, in one of the most dramatic and fantastic endings in golf history it happened. Playing right behind Harper was Lew Worsham, 1947 U.S. open champion from Oakmont, Pa.

Worsham needed a birdie 3 on the 410-yard 72nd to tie Harper and send the match into a sudden death playoff.

Lew slammed a drive that left him about 140 yards short of the pin. As the crowd swarmed around, Worsham then fired away. The ball hit on the lower part of the green, bounced about three times and rolled 35 to 40 feet before dropping into the cup for an eagle 2.

The amazing shot gave Worsham a one-stroke victory, and was worth $15,000—the difference between first money of $25,000 and the $10,000 second prize.

This bit of sports drama was voted the thrill of 1953 in the 23rd annual Associated Press year-end poll.

SOLD TO HALIFAX

VICTORIA (CP)—Stan Maxwell, left-winger with Victoria Cougars of the Western Hockey League, has been sold to Halifax Atlantics of the Maritime Major Hockey League, it was announced Tuesday.

Cougar general manager Fred Hutchinson did not say when Maxwell would leave for Halifax and it is reported that he is refusing to go.

Maxwell, a North Bay native, formerly played for Seattle Bombers and New Westminster Royals in the WHL.

"TOPPY" SIDELINED

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins Tuesday added the name of Jerry Toppazzini to their hospital roster. "Toppy" was sidelined for 10 days on orders of Dr. Thomas Kelley, the National Hockey League club's doctor.

X-rays showed he has a chipped right elbow. The forward hurt the joint against Chicago here Sunday and was thought to be recovering until he reinjured it Monday in practice.

Defenceman Bob Armstrong also is sidelined with a torn knee ligament suffered last Saturday night in Toronto.

Rearguard Bill Quackenbush has been working out but still is unable to play. He is recovering from a cracked ankle bone suffered in Toronto Nov. 14, when the team lost winger Real Chevrefils for the season with a broken leg.

PROTESTS NBA RATING

NEW YORK (AP)—This must be an open hunting season on the National Boxing Association.

Bobby Gleason, manager of Cuban heavyweight champion Nino Valdes, opened up with both barrels Tuesday on the NBA for "slighting my fighter."

Gleason said he's "burned up" at the NBA for declaring there are no logical contenders for heavyweight champion Rocky Marciano and for placing Ezzard Charles ahead of Valdes in the list of outstanding boxers. The NBA did that in its winter ratings released two days ago.

"I sent a telegram to Andrew Putka, the NBA president, to protest the ratings," said Gleason. "How does the NBA get Charles ahead of my guy; Valdes beat Charles. He's the heavyweight champion of Cuba. He knocked out Heinz Neuhaus, the European champ in four rounds."

Charles 3-To-1 Choice To Upset Satterfield

CHICAGO (AP)—Ezzard Charles former heavyweight champion close to a shot at Rocky Marciano's title, is a 3-to-1 favorite to dispose of Bob Satterfield in a 10-rounder which seems unlikely to go the distance at Chicago Stadium tonight.

Satterfield, a boxing enigma, either knocks out his man or gets knocked out himself in a hurry.

It has been rumored that if Charles defeats Satterfield convincingly he would be matched with Marciano in a June title bout.

Charles, at 32, is about as near a chance for a bout with Marciano as he will ever be. The Cincinnati Negro at 188 will have a six-pound weight pull over Satterfield, listed as a light heavyweight.

E. Basciano Leads

Ethel Basciano rolled high single of 263 and J. Doby Has Agreed To '54 Salary Terms

CLEVELAND (AP) — Outfielder Larry Doby has agreed to 1954 salary terms, Cleveland Indians' general manager, Hank Greenberg, said today. It will be Doby's seventh season with the baseball Tribe.

"Larry seemed aware that 1953 had been a somewhat disappointing season for him and is very confident he will be of greater help during the coming season," Greenberg said.

Doby wound up the season with a .263 average, his lowest since he joined the Indians and 25 points under his lifetime average.

Boom Boom Geoffrion Gives Comments On Campbell Rulings

MONTREAL (CP)—This may be an indication of things to come.

Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, a sports columnist like Maurice (Rocket) Richard, winds up his stint in the current issue of the French-language weekly Parlons Sports with these words:

"I think, dear sport fans, that this column is the last one for me for some time. But I think I'll be back with you."

The Rocket and Boom Boom are both high-scoring rightwingers with Montreal Canadiens. It was the Rocket's column, in the opposition Samedi-Dimanche, which set off a big furore. Richard blasted president Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League.

BOOM BOOM'S IDEAS

Boom Boom writes he is happy personally that the Rocket thought it proper to defend him and that Richard "has always been on my side when I was right."

Pending some decision as to what will happen to the Rocket, Boom Boom also has a bit to say about the NHL president:

"When I was fined $250 for having pushed Mr. (Referee) Udvari, the league president was there and was taking little notes.

"One week later Rollins (Al Rollins, Chicago goalie) checked the referee, pushed him, elbowed him, etc. The president was there and I don't know if he was taking down little notes. Rollins was fined only $25 because the referee did not make a report."

Royal Believes NFL Putting Up Front

EDMONTON (CP)—Coach Darrell Royal of Edmonton Eskimos says he believes the United States National Football League is "putting on a front."

Just returned from a scouting trip in the U.S., the Western Interprovincial Football Union coach commented on recent reports about possible all-out war between the American and Canadian leagues for player talent.

"In public the NFL people deride Canadian football and say that it is ready to fold and is unsound," Royal said. "But in private they admit that we've got them on the run and can give them a formidable battle in the player market anytime."

He said he had preliminary talks with several American import prospects but none was signed.

Havelock Boys Get Bantam Puck Fray

HAVELOCK (ENS)—Havelock Bantams were victors over Campbellford in a clean, fast game in the Havelock area, Tuesday night by a score of 7 to 6.

Bill Watson of Havelock was the star player of the evening scoring four goals, three of which he got in the last four minutes of the game to bring victory to his team. Bob McLaughlin also scored two for the locals.

The first period ended with Havelock leading by a score of 2-1. At the end of the second period it was tied 3-3. O'Riley and Beatty were the outstanding players for Campbellford, each scoring two goals. Referee was Si Johnston, linesman, Doug Ruttan.

Suggest N.B. Use Co-Op House Building

FREDERICTON (CP)—Legislation to enable co-operative house building, similar to systems in Nova Scotia and Quebec, has been urged in a brief presented to the New Brunswick government by several labor, co-operative and credit union organizations.

The brief made these requests:

ing needs of the province.

2. Legislation making mortgage funds available to co-operative building groups at interest of three and a half per cent or less.

3. A permanent housing commission to administer the legislation and assist in plans and legal matters.

4. Amendments enabling building groups to incorporate under the Co-Operative Associations' Act and build, own, buy, rent or sell housing.

5. Funds for efficient operation of the commission.

6. Legislation permitting municipalities and the province to sell land to co-operative building groups at nominal rates, and permitting municipalities to enter into valuation agreements with such groups to assure low taxation for the term of the mortgages.

HOME OF THEIR OWN

The brief said co-operative housing can work in New Brunswick, where the cost of home ownership "has so far outstripped our wage standards that it is beyond the hope of a large group of our wage earners ever to possess a home of their own."

Under a housing commission set up for Nova Scotia, the brief said, 41 groups had co-operatively built six-room houses at costs as low as $3,500. These rented for about $45 a month, including principal and interest, taxes, insurance, water rates and, in most cases, mortgage insurance.

In Quebec, up to September, 1952 more than 17,000 units for about 77,000 persons had been built through "the family housing division" of the Quebec farm credit bureau. The province pays all mortgage interest over two per cent on loans up to $7,000 if the interest rate does not exceed five per cent.

Leadership Training Course For YPS Groups

NORWOOD (ENS) — A leadership training course for the Presbytery of Peterborough of the Presbyterian Young Peoples' was held in St. Andrew's church, Norwood, Saturday and Sunday. Young people were present from Norwood, Warkworth, Campbellford, Havelock, Peterborough, Centreville, Millbrook, South Monaghan and Lakefield.

The course was conducted by five of the executive of the Synodical Young Peoples' Society, who were Don Christie, presbytery of East Toronto, Ivan Cronsberry, West Toronto, Alice Chadwick, West Toronto, Peggy Graham, Lindsay and Barbara Luther, Peterborough. This was the first time that Norwood had had the leadership training course here.

A worship service, conducted by Gerald Finnie of Centreville and assisted by Misses Norma Ball, Peterborough and Mary Eagleson, Centreville with Miss Sandra Dalgleish, Peterborough, at the piano, was held after registration.

The synod officers took over the program by introducting themselves. Choruses were led by Miss Barbara Luther, Don Christie, the leadership training convener for the synod, announced that five discussion groups would be held with one of the Synod officers taking each group. The discussion groups were on missions, fellowship, worship, evangelism and stewardship. These discussion groups met in various rooms for an hour after which reports were made of their findings.

The young people were then told to gather together in their own societies and ask questions of the Synod officers. These questions continued until the banquet was ready.

The banquet was served to the young people by ladies of the church. Those at the head table were: the Rev. W. H. Heustin, Centreville, Miss Peggy Graham, vice-president of the synod executive, the Rev. Gilbert Smith of St. Giles church in Peterborough, honorary president for the presbytery, Miss Barbara Luther; fellowship convener for the synod, Don Christie; leadership training convener for the synod, Miss Alice Chadwick; evangelism and stewardship convener for the synod, Mrs. Arden MacNaughton, Warkworth; banquet chairman, Miss Lorraine McCrory of Campbellford; president of the Peterborough presbytery, Ivan Cronsberry; president of the synod executive, Fred Morgan; president of the Norwood Young Peoples' Society, and the Rev. and Mrs. R. D. Duncason of Norwood.

The young people broke up into three discussion groups again following dinner. The groups discussed church question.

After the groups came together to discuss their answers a short worship service was held after which the meeting was adjourned for the night.

In the morning the young people's executive for the presbytery held the church service. Lorraine McCrory conducted it with Edgar Kee reading the scripture lesson and Bob Duncanson giving the prayer. The sermon was delivered by Rev. Smith, who spoke of our unwillingness to surrender some things to obtain eternal life. A quartette by Misses Shirley Davey Ruth Davey and Mrs. Jack Bitten called "Leave it There" was sung.

In the afternoon at two o'clock the young people gathered at the church and were again divided up into discussion groups. Each group was to discuss prayer. The decisions reached were then read before the whole meeting and answers compared. As the Sunday school was about to begin, the young people retired upstairs to the main body of the church where discussion groups were formed to discuss what a Young People's Society might do in one of their regular meetings.

More choruses were sung, a prayer given by the Rev. R. D. Duncanson and a piece of scripture read by Don Christie. The young people were thanked for turning out and the conference was then concluded.

Co-operate To Overcome Juvenile Delinquency

By B. FAITHFULL-DAVIES

LONDON (OFNS)—The jangling music failed and my guide, a German ex-paratrooper and social worker in Lubeck, remarked it was just like London, wasn't it? Then someone put another 10-pfennig in the nickelodeon and the hard-faced boys in their long jackets and narrow trousers resumed their dreary jitterbugging, with dutiful Madchen trying to look tough like their partners. Yet, it was all too like London, or any other big European city. Surely," said my friend

They are indeed. But what exactly is this "youth problem"? Fundamentally, it is simply the asocial attitude and anti-social behavior of a minority of youngsters. How large a minority? No one knows. Juvenile crime figures, representing only the success-rate of an overworked police force, are no guidance; nor are any other statistics. But it is obvious to anyone with personal experience that our "problem" boys and girls form a dangerously large minority.

They contribute little or nothing to the community. Their attitudes can easily infect other children. All too soon they will perpetuate their anti-social behavior in children of their own. And they cost us an unconscionable amount of trouble and money. If the Government were to pay £300 a year to every man who guaranteed to keep just one boy out of Borstal, it would actually save money.

AIMLESSNESS

The hallmark of this dangerous minority is their utter aimlessness. They live for the present; desires of the moment must be instantly gratifield. What could have been more aimless than the recent fatal fracas on Clapham Common? Could anyone have been more utterly absorbed in the present than Craig on the factory roof? These are extreme examples, perhaps, but in my experience not untypical.

Naturally, these youngsters have no morals, no standards of behavior. Though vaguely aware that certain acts may precipitate police action, they do not really understand why. As a Borstal governor put it: "My hardest task is to persuade these wayward individuals that they have done anything wrong."

One can hardly blame them. From earliest days they have probably been taught that cheating is the only real cleverness — cheating the boss, the bus conductor, the referee. Many, too, have been fantastically spoiled by over-indulgent parents. Nevertheless, too many, even with both parents living and unseparated, have never [illegible] which is the only foundation for healthy development.

It is hardly surprising, then, that in their present state our problem minority are useless and unwanted. To their parents they are nuisances, to their teachers ineducable. By the young organizations they are dubbed "unclubbable"—a word distressingly frequent in such circles nowadays.

NO HELP

Church bodies, like everyone else, mostly reserve their organizations for the tractable children who least need help. Industry is at its wits' end; the services, especially the army, biggest recipient of "useless" conscripts, peck half-heartedly at the problem of changing these boys into self-respecting young men.

However, I do not want to sound pessimistic. After 20 thoroughly frustrating years in youth work I know that the whole problem could be wiped out in 10 to 15 years, given a little good will, tolerance and common sense. If this sounds paradoxical, let me add that my frustration has not come from the children—they are as lovable and easy to handle as ordinary children once you know them—but from the uncomprehending adults, mostly in official positions, who so largely control their fate.

First, the needs of the neediest children must be given absolute priority. All schools, for instance, could try to concentrate as much on character-training as the public and the better grammar schools do. Industry—employers and unions alike — could ensure that every young entrant works under a man who is morally as well as technically sound. Years ago, at Brathay Hall, we proved that adult leadership and a chance to do something could influence permanently a "problem" boy's mentality in one week. What could not the army do in two years?

Youth organisations must concentrate on the "Unclubbables" whom they now reject. The schools, and industry, too, must for the first time in history take the youth bodies into working partnership.

The foundation of all this work will, naturally, be the youth worker, whose basic job is to provide a substitute for the parent-child relationship which has gone wrong in so many cases. He, or she, must provide not merely an impeccable personal example (we should all do that, yet rarely do), but also the leadership, training, counsel and even the give and take of affection which parents cannot or will not give.

But if every needful child is to get personal attention, the numbers of voluntary, part-time youth workers must increase enormously. Anyone can do this work, provided he or she has some enthusiasm to communicate — boxing, bees or ballet, it does not matter — and is not, like too many youth "leaders," a neurotic refugee from an adult world. Of course, you will be terrified of these loutish children at first, just as I was. But accept them as they are, and you will soon learn to understand and probably even to love them.

Finally, if the youth movement is to do its job, full-time workers must all be properly trained and, of course, properly paid. We respect the man trained to lead these "problem" boys when they are dressed in khaki and called soldiers. Why should not similary practical training be devised for civilian leaders? Nothing of the sort exists at present, and the quality of men offering themselves for youth work is appalling.

WORLD'S LONGEST PIPELINE—A $300,000,000 pipeline—world's longest—may be delivering Alberta natural gas to Ontario and Quebec by 1955 as a result of the merger of two competing gas-carrying companies. The deal, largest such merger in Canadian history, virtually assures a start of construction on the 2,240-mile line from Princess, Alta., sometime this year. The company at present plans a 30-inch line to Toronto, touching at Regina, Winnipeg, Kenora, the Lakehead and Sudbury. It would drop to 24 inches from Toronto to Montreal. A line from Winnipeg to Minneapolis, Minn., also is part of the plan if approved by United States authorities.

Soviet Industrial Chiefs Warned To Cut Down Costs

By DON DALLAS

LONDON (Reuters)—Soviet industrial chiefs got a renewed warning Tuesday that they must cut production costs to aid Premier Malenkov's campaign for more and cheaper goods for the people.

Pravda, organ of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party, published [illegible] run industry for waste and inefficiency. But some other branches of industry were praised for cutting costs and saving material.

The editorial, quoted by Moscow radio, disclosed that many Soviet enterprises have been working at a loss. Pravda listed as "particularly unsatisfactory" enterprises of the timber and paper industry, the coal and metallurgical plants, the transport and heavy machine building industry and the building materials industry.

Individual ministries direct these enterprises and Pravda complained that many leading officials in the ministries, and the central industrial managing bodies, did not pay proper attention to the lowering of production costs.

TOO MUCH FUEL

Pravda said the ministry for the production of building materials had "lagged behind the plan" [illegible]

The paper added: "Enterprises of this ministry use much more fuel than planned and produced an excess quantity of scrap.

"The cement industry used 70,000 tons of fuel above plan (more than was estimated), while scrapped production caused a loss of 34,000,000 rubles (about $8,500,000 at the Soviet-fixed exchange rate.)

"Building carried out by the ministry of construction usually costs much more than estimated," it said.

New Pipe Line Won't Affect Chances Of B.C.

OTTAWA (CP)—Trade Minister Howe said Tuesday the east-west gas pipe line will not affect British Columbia chances of obtaining natural gas from the Peace river.

Replying in the Commons to Edward T. Applewhaite (L—Skeena), he said sponsors of a gas pipe line from the Peace river to Vancouver and into the northwestern United States are hoping for an "early decision" from the U. S. federal power commission.

Opposition leader Drew started the ball rolling by asking for a general statement from Mr. Howe on the project.

OUTLINES MOVES

Mr. Howe outlined the moves leading to merger of the two companies seeking to pipe natural gas to eastern Canada and said the federal government acted as an "honest broker" in the deal.

Mr. Howe said the Ontario and Quebec hydro-electric power commissions and the Shawinigan Water and Power Company are considering acting as distributors for the gas in their territories, but no decision has been reached at the moment.

Two Escape Fire

KINGSTON (CP)—A fire in a book store and a children's clothing store on Kingston's main street late Tuesday night drove two persons from their second-storey apartment and caused an estimated $25,000 damage to the stock in the two stores. Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Wilson ran out of their apartment on the second floor and escaped injury.

Says Growers Bring Trouble On Themselves

TORONTO (CP)—The president of the Ontario Fruit and Vegetable Growers' Association said Tuesday a lot of the growers' troubles could be laid at the feet of the growers themselves.

Harold Willian of Leamington told the Association's annual meeting that 1953 had been a year of general deterioration for the industry.

"Our marketing legislation needs revision, but such revision will not alter one pertinent fact, and that is that marketing schemes as such will not do a complete job until there is a greater realization of two basic fundamentals—that legislation of this kind is not designed to enact all that the traffic will bear; that we growers are responsible for many of the acts which jeopardize the success of the various schemes."

SALES WERE LOST

For the year ahead there was a need for leadership in developing improved marketing services and an overhaul of existing marketing schedules.

M. M. Robinson, secretary, said that another "lamentable shortcoming" of growers is the refusal to recognize the elementary necessity of maintaining supply.

He told delegates there prevails a habit, in market of firm prices, of refusing good offers on the ground that a better offer is around the corner. Because of this a sale was often lost.

Hearst Facing Bankruptcy Unless Aid Soon

TORONTO (CP) — A delegation from Hearst in northern Ontario told Premier Frost Tuesday that the rea faces economic bankruptcy unless action is taken within a matter of weeks.

The delegation [illegible] and other government officials a story of farmers forced to live on a diet of potatoes supplemented by beef from depleted dairy herds.

The group said the farmers in the area are caught in an economic squeeze between decreasing pulpwood quotas and a depressed lumber market. The district's economic collapse began in 1948 when a government quota on the export of pulpwood went into effect.

FAVORABLY RECEIVED

The delegation, which conferred with the premier, Mines Minister Kelly and Deputy Lands and Forests Minister MacDougall, told reporters later that their case had been favorably received.

The farmers depend on their livelihood in winter by either cutting pulpwood on their own farms or working for lumber companies. Until two years ago, the farmers did not feel too much the effect of the government's pulpwood export quota since their cut was almost all absorbed locally.

Plead Guilty Assault Charge

KITCHENER (CP)—Five young Ayr men pleaded guilty here Tuesday to assaulting last Hallowe'en a police officer who they said had been their friend since Boy Scout days.

A charge of forcibly seizing, or "kidnapping", the officer was withdrawn.

The defendants, Douglas Sherk, Raymond Sherk, Erle Goodwin, William Mitchell and George Mitchell, were each fined $25 and [illegible]

They admitted forcing special constable William McLeod into their car at Ayr, 10 miles south of here, and driving him into the country. After about eight miles they released McLeod and he had to walk back to the village.

McLeod said his uniform had been torn in the scuffle. But he admitted he had been a friend of the five men, adding: "I still am."

New Power Exchange Announced By Hydro

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario hydro announced Tuesday a new international power exchange arrangement with the Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation of Syracuse, N.Y. It will permit the transmission of 250,000,000 kilowatt hours of power from the American utility to supplement hydro facilities.

The arrangement was approved by the U.S. federal power commission Jan. 9. The connection will be made between Massena, N.Y., and Maple Grove, near Cornwall.

The commission said the need for additional power in Ontario has been urgent this year because of the record low flow of the Ottawa river, one of hydro's chief hydraulic sources.

Bulb-Snatcher Flees

VICTORIA (CP) — Police in "darkest Victoria" are seeking a bulb-snatcher. M. Emms, hearing someone prowling his front porch during the weekend, snapped on a light and dashed out. That is, he snapped the switch. He blundered in darkness through the garden shrubbery and out on to the street, but the thief escaped. The thief stole every porch light in the block.

Head Of Knights Templar Order Challenges Statement Of Vicar

Frederick G. Mann, grand master of the Order of Knights Templar, spoke in defence of the Masonic fraternity, at a Masonic meeting Friday in London, Ont.

Mr. Mann challenged the statement of an English vicar that no clergyman who was also a Mason could speak from his pulpit. The vicar didnt know what a Mason really is, he said.

"The Order of Knights Templar is founded entirely upon Christian principles," he said.

"As churchmen, you must know that his position in this matter must be entirely due to ignorance of what we stand for. It is no secret that no man can become a member of Knights Templar unless he first declares a firm and steadfast belief in Christian principles."

Mr. Mann was speaking to an assembly of Richard Coeur de Lion Preceptory No. 4, KT, that included top ranking Masons from Toronto, Chatham, St. Thomas and Stratford.

Quebec Taking Drastic Action Against Sect

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec government has decided to take drastic steps against Jehovah's Witnesses, the religious sect that has been at odds with Quebec authorities for years.

Premier Duplessis made known the government's intention Tuesday as the Legislative Assembly resumed the session adjourned for the holidays.

The P[illegible] 30-year-old Quebec Freedom of Worship Act and said it would authorize municipalities and the attorney-general to apply for injunctions against individuals or organizations distributing certain types of religious tracts or making "outrageous" statements.

Text of the bill, given formal first reading unopposed, was not distributed immediately. An injunction is an action in which a civil court orders the interruption of specific activities. Violation automatically involves contempt of court.

SIMPLE PROCEDURE

Mr. Duplessis said the bill would provide for some simple court procedure instead of the usual proceedings under Quebec's Napoleonic civil code.

The government's action in seeking amendment of the worship act follows a ruling by the Supreme Court of Canada, which by a 5-4 vote declared invalid a Quebec statute enabling municipalities to ban distribution of circulars and pamphlets by the Witnesses except with permission of the police.

Mr. Duplessis said provincial statutes guarantee freedom of worship but not licence; certain religious tracts and "outrageous" utterances will be held to constitute licence.

The bill is the latest move in a long fight between the Quebec government and the Witnesses.

ORDEAL IS OVER—Leland H. Towers (left) and Pte. Homer H. Cox congratulate each other after their release from a Soviet prison camp. The men were turned over to American officials at Berlin by their Russian captors. Towers was captured in Russia when he entered the country to see what it was like. Pte. Cox said he was lured into captivity and held for more than nine months.

House Divided On Whether To Retain Death Penalty

OTTAWA (CP) — A sharp split between Progressive Conservative and CCF members of the Commons on whether to retain the death penalty for murderers likely will be carried into a Commons-Senate committee which will study the question.

Members of the two parties took opposing viewpoints on the issue Tuesday as the House debated and approved a government motion to establish the joint committee.

Seventeen Commons members will be named to the committee to consider whether the Criminal Code provisions on capital punishment, whipping and lotteries should be changed. The number of Senators on the committee has not yet been set.

Opposition Leader Drew said the death penalty was a "horrible thing" but so was murder.

WANT MORE EVIDENCE

"To the extent that the death penalty may act as a deterrent, then everyone on this committee and in this House should be most reluctant to change the law as it now stands until he has heard more convincing evidence than has yet been submitted."

The aim should be to give the courts the power to prevent murder by the example of the punishment.

If humanitarian principles were to be considered "let that consideration rest on the innocent people who are being shot down or knifed or otherwise destroyed." Humanitarian instincts should not be carried to the extent of giving any encouragement to crimes of violence.

NOT DETERRENT

Harold Winch (CCF—Vancouver East) said there is conclusive evidence that capital punishment does not deter murder.

The death penalty was a "throwback to savagery and barbarism," he said, describing a hanging he said he witnessed 18 years ago at Vancouver's Oakalla prison. He described the "whanging" of the rope against the sides of the hanging pit as the victim swung back and forth and the "gurglings and sighings" of the executed man.

If society held that human life is sacred, then it should not take a life, even if the crime is murder.

Justice Minister Garson urged that the joint committee have a "reasonably open mind" on the issue. But in reply to members who criticized the death penalty, he said Canadian law provides a great deal of justice and mercy to those accused of murder.

The proper punishment for murder was a complex matter. There were all types of murder, some brutal and some which evoked more pity than condemnation. The committee must consider how to make the legal treatment of murder more flexible to reflect those differences.

Discussion of the question lasted all day and postponed until Thursday the start of debate on the government's new housing legislation. Today's sitting is devoted to private members' proposals.

URGE RETAIN HANGING

Davie Fulton (PC — Kamloops) held that there is no need to abolish the death penalty for murder. Any extenuating circumstances were taken into account by juries, who seldom convicted a man accused of murder if they didn't think he should be hanged.

There should be no hasty move to eliminate whipping. The power to order corporal punishment in certain cases was used sparingly by judges, and only in exceptional cases.

On lotteries, Mr. Fulton said the committee should decide whether it is a crime to conduct or take part in properly supervised lotteries. People laughed at the present lottery laws because they were not fully enforced.

W. B. Nesbitt (PC—Oxford) said the Commons - Senate committee would have to consider that if it chose a "less barbarous" method of capital punishment than hanging, the deterrent to others might not be so strong.

MONTREAL (CP)—A new agreement providing for wage increases and other benefits had been signed between N. M. Paterson and Sons, shipowners of Fort William, and the Canadian Merchant Service Guild.

The agreement also calls for dues checkoff, annual leave with pay and other concessions, including a school for deck officers to enable them to obtain higher licences.

Says Reds Concentrate On Quebec Unions

QUEBEC (CP)—Labor Minister Barrette said Tuesday Communists are concentrating their efforts on labor unions in Quebec province and the government plans to do "everything possible so that they will be eliminated of all such spheres."

Mr. Barrette, introducing a government bill authorizing the Quebec labor relations board to decertify unions led by "known Communists," said he failed to see how there could be any opposition to the bill.

The government measure is one of two labor bills being amended at the request of Quebec labor unions. The amendments were not immediately known but it was understood the prineiple of the bill remains unchanged.

TWO FIRE ALARMS

A flooded oil heater brought firemen to Richard Lillico's home 287 Stewart St. early today. The firemen allowed the blaze to burn itself out and didn't use an extinguisher. On Tuesday noon another flooded oil burner flared up at William Siebert's home, 275 Westcott St. Again nothing was used.

NO POLICE COURT

There was no magistrate's court today. Police had made no arrests overnight and no cases had been held over. It is the first occasion in approximately six months that there has been a free day at the court and officials were making the best of a brief respite to catch up on some back work.

FILM FESTIVAL

This year's Peterborough Film Council will hold its annual festival February 25-26-27, in Queen Mary's school auditorium. Ronald Ward, president of the National Film Board, announced that restrictions on foreign films have been lowered and as a result films from Norway, Sweden, Germany, the Netherlands, Pakistan, New Zealand and Australia will be shown together with Canadian and United Kingdom films.

Lindsay Schools To Make Big Expansion

LINDSAY (ENS) — A far-reaching plan for future expansion of the Lindsay public school system, which school board chairman Walter Peel calls "the heaviest expansion programme in elementary school accomodation ever encountered by a school board in Lindsay" has been announced to cover the next two years. It includes the basic re-organization of the whole school system, the building of two new schools and the establishment of kindergarten in the public schools for the first time in some years.

The plan outlined in chairman Peel's inaugural address, will take effect next year, with further changes being introduced by September, 1955.

First change will be the establishment of a senior school at the present Central school building. This will house the pupils of Grade 7 and 8 in the schools at present. Brian H. Bennett, presently supervising principal of the public schools, will head the new school with an assistant. He will also continue his present duties.

The new school will be organized to provide for both thinking and interest subjects. Students who do not need extra work on their basic subjects may spend more time at other phases of the curriculum, while others needing special attention to the usual subjects will be allowed to spend extra time on them. Classes will be conducted on the rotation plan, thus preparing the pupils to some extent, for secondary school. The presence of the collegiate a short distance from the school building will also help to provide a mature environment.

The other three schools in the town will be converted to junior schools, for pupils from kindergarten to Grade six. These facilities will be increased by September, 1955 with the erection of two new schools, one in the north-west section and the other in the south-west. The locations are planned so that none of the children will have to cross busy highways on their way to and from school.

The principals of the present four schools will take over the junior schools and will rotate their positions every three years. Kindergarten, for years discontinued through lack of facilities in the public schools, will be started again in September 1955. The entire system will go into effect in 1955, when the new schools are opened.

Exhibition To Be Held In August

Forced To Accept Early Date To Get Conklin Shows

After lengthy discussion, dates for the 1954 Peterborough Exhibition were established as August 16-19 inclusive, by the exhibition board, Tuesday night.

It is the opinion of the board that the success of future exhibitions depends to a large degree on the securing of a high grade midway, in this case the Conklin Shows. A committee was set up to negotiate with this midway with the result that two August dates were open in the Conklin schedule.

The first date was from August 4-7, which occurs on the later part of the week, but this date, it was decided, is too close to the industrial holiday season. The second date, August 16-19 falls on the first part of the week, and for this reason was unfavorable to the board. However, considering that the onus is on the board to produce an attractive midway, and that the board is in no position to bargain, D. J. McGillis moved that the mid-August date be confirmed.

CHANGED TWO YEARS AGO

Until two years ago, the Peterborough Exhibition was perenially an August affair, but in 1952 the date was changed to September with the hope of accommodating rural people too busy in August to give their full support. The 1952 exhibition was poorly attended due to an inferior midway and grandstand show.

In 1953, although the grandstand show and the midway were improved, the exhibition still incurred a loss of $5,669.82. A big factor in this was poor weather. The final day, a Saturday, which was expected to attract the largest gate, was completely rained out.

Because of a clause in the Conklin policy limiting the appearance of his midway to locations more than 50 miles apart, and because Conklin was contracted to the Lindsay Exhibition, it was not possible to bring the show here.

However the Lindsay exhibition board granted Conklin a release from this specification in this particular case, providing that his show did not play in Peterborough within a month of the Lindsay appearance.

Because of these factors, the Peterborough board has accepted the Conklin offer of August 16-19, with the hope that a successful exhibition this year will give them more bargaining power in the future.

Broken Windows Cost $1,200

Superintendent of schools K. S. Wightman told the education board's property committee Tuesday night that $600 worth of glass windows had been broken in Peterborough public schools in 1953. It costs another $600 in labor to replace them — a total cost of $1,200. He considered most of the damage was done by vandals after school hours and he mentioned air rifles.

Board chairman Charles Huffman said that he had received an air rifle for Christmas.

"It might be a good place to get some practice," he added.

"Are you sure you haven't been there already," quipped W. B. Gordon.

"No, not yet," came the laughing rejoinder.

Town Helps Family Living In Tent

BROCKVILLE (CP) — Residents of this town today went to the aid of a man and wife and two small children who have been living in a small tent at the town's northern outskirts.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Mitchell and their sons, aged 4 and 5, have survived a week of sub - zero weather after a winter - long stay in their tent.

Today offers of homes, apartments and other accommodation were received by relief officer William Hollister, who stated he had arranged for a house for them in town.

Mitchell, a railroader, said he had been unable to find a place to live despite his ability to pay a fair rental.

3 Nearly Perish In Cottage In Below-Zero Temperatures

By JACK OLIVER

How they smashed their way into a cabin, huddled by a smoky fire and ate rice boiled in snow water, is the story told by three Peterborough youths who arrived back in the city Monday evening after spending nearly 30 hours marooned near Mississauga lake in temperatures which ranged down to 23 below zero. The two 16-year-old boys, Dorland Wager, 273 Park St., and Garnett Covert, 536 Charlotte St., accompanied 23-year-old Gene Bayes, who also lives at 536 Charlotte St., on a car ride Sunday afternoon. They drove through Buckhorn and on to Catchacoma lake.

Then they struck a side road leading down to Mississauga lake and unable to find a turning place, struggled on until the car finally gave up in snow drifts. This was at 11 p.m, Sunday night.

Dressed only in light winter clothing, the youths soon discovered that their only alternative to freezing to death was to get inside somewhere near a fire. Covert lost a shoe and had to carry on in a stockinged foot.

The party attempted to break into several lakeside cabins and it was only on their fifth attempt that a lightly-made door yielded to Bayes' fist.

FROSTBITE

Bitterly cold, bewildered and suffering from the first stages of frostbite, the three stumbled into the cabin. They managed to get a fire going which produced more smoke than heat. Wrapping towels around their feet and donning any spare clothing lying about, they took turns at going outside and looking for wood.

"We got our feet frozen and thawed out about six times," said Covert.

Eventually they ended up by huddling together on a mattress "almost on top of the fire." There was little sleep for anyone. Coupled with freezing temperatures was the added worry that they might not get back to safety.

In vain the boys tried to kill the knawing pains of hunger by brewing coffee in snow water and eating rice prepared in the same way.

By Monday morning the two younger boys were feeling definitely ill. Probably the fact they knew that no one would know where to look for them, added a major worry. Once they heard an airplane overhead and thought that perhaps it was searching for them. It vanished before they could attempt to signal it.

WENT FOR HELP

About 1 o'clock Monday afternoon Gene Bayes put on the only pair of snow boots, wrapped a blanket about himself and started out for help. After a four-mile hike he stumbled into Forest Ranger Russel More's house three miles north of Rockcroft on the Catchacoma trail. The Mores fed him a belated breakfast and rang through to Buckhorn for a tow-truck.

Gene told The Examiner that "I took my time because it was pretty cold." However, considering the difficult journey he actually made remarkably good time and his action probably saved his friends from an unenviable fate.

Later the tow truck was able to get the car and the boys back on the road to Peterborough. One of the tires of the car went down with an expiring hiss just as it came to a halt at the Covert home.

Since the three adventurers had announced their intention of only going for a short spin in the car, the parents of Covert and Wager began to imagine the worst by Sunday night. Police were notified at 10 a.m. Monday.

It was believed the party might have gone to Kingston and even to Niagara Falls, which is the home of Bayes' parents. Several long distance calls proved fruitless.

Both mothers were desperately worried when at 6 o'clock Monday night, three woe-begone youths appeared in the doorway.

With towels around their feet, borrowed sweaters and blankets, and Wager with a pair of outsize red pyjama pants over his own slacks, they made a sorry sight.

WORKED SHIFT

After the first meal in nearly two days the younger boys made for a hot bath and bed, but Bayes, who works at Canadian Raybestos, went on to work a night shift from 7 p.m. until 6 a.m. Wager and Covert, who are pupils at PCVS, took a couple of days off from school.

All three are more than thankful for a narrow escape, but blackened ears and swollen feet tell the tale of their brush with death.

As yet they have not discovered who owns the cabin at Catchacoma lake, but the boys intend retracing their steps Thursday armed with a packet of rice, some coffee and, incidently, some very warm clothes. Naturally the red pyjama pants will go along too. They also intend to put the cottage in order.

Within the warmth and security of home, Tuesday, the wanderers were able to laugh at the episode, but they'll never forget the time when home seemed a long way off and laughing a thing of the past.

"All's well that ends well, but never, never again," is how they summed it up.

Propose Microfilming Deeds Placed In Registry Office

The microfilming of deeds in the registry offices of Ontario, a proposal generally approved by registrars and lawyers as a time-saving method of record, may be sanctioned by the provincial government.

The act pertaining to registry offices requires that a written copy be made of each deed, today a typewriting chore. With all the activity in realty up and down Ontario, meaning transfers of property, the volume of the necessary duplication has been heavy. Staffs are pressed to keep up with the flow of registrations.

The extra copy of a deed is made for the purpose of security of the record in the event of anything happening to the original.

The switch from typing to photographing the deeds would obviously be a big help in registry offices, and would relieve assistants of much typewriting. The microfilms are not much bigger than a postage stamp but are enlarged for reading by a machine that is virtually the same as a moving picture projector. The Examiner's files are gradually being microfilmed, and the same operation is under way with the Peterborough newspapers that have long been stored at the public library.

One salient difference stands out: the original deeds at the registry office must be kept, but the old newspapers are destroyed after their pages have been photographed. It is understood that some exception of older papers may be made in filming these only records of the passing history of Peterborough, or at least as much of it as the press impersonally wrote from day to day.

Some registry offices tried photostatic copies for a time, but the cost of that kind of duplicate was comparatively heavy. It is understood that the office in Ottawa has done some microfilming, probably as experiment, but the legislation which would be required for dispensing with the typists's work has not yet been indicated.

A lawyer said today that 'stacks' of film of deeds could be contained in a cigar box, suggesting both the saving of work and also the space required for the secondary record books.

Christmas Trees Ready For Fire

Christmas trees were piling up today in a field on the west side of Erskine Ave. for their approaching burning. J. E. Pierce, superintendent of sanitation, estimated that their green mound would cover most of an acre.

They are being dumped from the department's collecting trucks three or four hundred yards in from the street on the city's industrial property.

"We'll wait a week or so for the unsold trees that dealers have to get rid of," Mr. Pierce said. "Then we'll set fire to the pile when the wind is in the right direction, I suppose from the east."

The young pines and spruces will be liquidated with a great crackling of their needles, and only an acre of ashes will be left of their sacrifice to the celebration of Christmas.

Alex Sinclair Says Leadership Needed

Alex Sinclair, former recreation director of Peterborough, was presented with a copy of "Renown at Stratford", by William Graff of the Peterborough Film Council at the January meeting, Tuesday night.

Mr. Sinclair addressed the meeting on the subject of recreation, stressing the fact that leadership was of more importance than facilities. "Leadership must be cultivated in Peterborough to a higher degree and a program of leadership training should be accentuated. It is the responsibility of the people to express their needs to the recreational director and city council."

Vice-presidents named by the travellers are T. J. Casey and M. B. Middleton. The new slate of directors consists of: Edward Crossfield, Boyd Stinson, Ralph Hutchinson, Bernard McCracken, Kenneth Hanbridge, K. E. Doughty, D. J. Delaney, Richard Ouimet and Robert McElroy.

Committee Discusses Repairs For Schools

The Peterborough education board's property committee Tuesday night discussed various repairs and improvements to be made in public schools in 1954.

Among those mentioned was a new boiler for west wing of Central school, further improvements to the playground at the Prince of Wales school and extensive repairs to the roof and eaves at Queen Alexandra school.

Better lighting facilities for several buildings was also considered, but the committee made no definite statement as to how general improvements would go this year.

It was decided, however, that in view of recent freeze-ups in the heating system at PCVS, immediate action would be taken to keep the system working during weekends until the cold spell has passed. This will require keeping a caretaker on duty each Sunday.

CNR Employee Otto Jenkisson Dies

TORONTO (CP)—Otto E. Jenkisson, 62, former senior clerk in the department of public relations of Canadian National Railways, died Tuesday.

Born in Prescott, Mr. Jenkisson joined the Grand Trunk Railway in Toronto in 1905 as a junior clerk. When he retired last June he was in charge of the CNR's advertising program in Ontario.

2 Land Appraisers Set Value On Brown Property

Two land appraisers have given their evaluation of the 20.4 acres of land expropriated by the city from Klondike Gold Brown's farm on the northern outskirts of Peterborough. A strip of land running along the west side of Highway 28 for some 2,700 feet, located across from the filtration plant, was expropriated by the city [illegible] Peterborough utilities commission. The PUC, anticipating water needs in the community, wanted the property for future expansion.

The two land appraisers, both called by the claimants (Klondike Gold Brown and his three sons and two daughters), gave these estimates of value:

Gordon Hancock, of the firm of Nugent and Hancock, valued the land at $10 a foot for the 2,700 foot frontage (a total of $27,000), less $5,000 for levelling and grading suitable for subdivision. Estimate —$22,000.

Bruce Sargent, of the firm of Irwin and Sargent, calculated that the land could be split up into 40 half-acre lots, with a value of $600 a lot after grading was completed. Estimate—$24,000.

$2,000 DIFFERENCE

The variation betwen the two expert witnesses was only $2,000. None of the expert witnesses for the city has yet been called.

What Mr. Brown and his three sons and two daughters think is a fair price for the property has not come out in evidence. In his original claim for compensation back in 1948 he asked for a total of $217,000 No such figure, however, has been quoted by his legal counsel, T. J. Carley, QC, and Messrs. Hancock and Sargent who were called to testify on his behalf, valued the land at $22,000 and $24,000, respectively.

The will of the late Elizabeth Brown, Mr. Brown's mother, gave him a life interest in the property. When he dies it will go "equally to such of his children who survive him". So the five children—Reginald D. Brown, Norman Alfred Brown, Wilfred Brown, Mrs. Fern Elizabeth James and Mrs. Isobel Lenore Finnie—have a "remainder" interest.

Mr. Carley is counsel for Mr. Brown; W. B. Gordon is counsel for the other members of the Brown family, and Alex Elliott, QC, is counsel for the city and, incidentally, the PUC.

DELAYED 5 YEARS

The arbitration case has been delayed five years while legal difficulties that would complicate the arbitration have been resolved. In that interval of time Judge S. L. Smoke, who originally ordered the city to pay $9,000 into court pending the arbitration award, has died. Judge John de N. Kennedy succeeded him and is the arbitrator in this case.

First witnesses were heard last Thursday and the case will last all the rest of this week, at least.

The city is now asking for 17.7 acres; though originally they wanted 20.04. Soon after expropriation proceedings started back in July, 1948, the department of highways moved in and expropriated 2.341 acres to straighten the route of Highway 28.

Mr. Carley claims the city or their agents moved in and took possession of the land. Mr. Elliott denies this and says his clients didn't tamper with the property before the department of highways moved in.

Early today Howard Powell, PUC general manager, was called as a witness to describe what part the PUC played in the expropriation.

Mr. Powell said that the decision to expropriate was taken before he came to Peterborough. The land on the east side of the highway (beside the river) would continue to be used for processing the water; the Brown property on the west side of the highway was wanted for water storage purposes.

Mr. Carley cross-examined Mr. Powell closely on whether or not in his opinion, all of the 17.7 or 20 acres was necessary for storage purposes. Mr. Powell said that he would have to give the matter some engineering study before giving an opinion.

The PUC general manager said that 4.6 acres of land on the east side of the river, just above the dam, were bought from Mrs. Percy Edwards for slightly over $3,000. This was to prevent any possible fouling of the water supply in the future from septic tanks.

The case is continuing.

Exhibition Board Wants A Voice In Centre Affairs

Efforts by city council to have the Morrow Trust amended, and the Memorial Centre located in Morrow Park, met with another snag, at least temporarily, Tuesday night.

A resolution was presented to the exhibition board by city council stating the policies to be followed by the Memorial Centre trustees concerning the location and operation of the centre. This resolution must be approved by the exhibition board before further action can be taken.

The contention of the board after the resolution was read, was that due consideration was not given them in choosing the site on the grounds. The resolution said in effect, that once permission was granted by the board to build, any site on the grounds, chosen by the board of governors of the Memorial Centre, would be available.

The dimensions of the building were not defined, nor were the occasions when the exhibition board might use the facilities of the building declared.

If the council's resolution had been confirmed by the exhibition board as it read Tuesday night, the board would have no authority as to the site, and little as to the actual operation of the centre.

A delegation from the exhibition board is planning to meet with representatives from city council and Morrow park trustees Thursday night, to demand more authority concerning the erection and operation of the proposed centre. An amendment to the resolution is expected.

The authorization of the exhibition board is required before any further action may be taken to amend the Morrow trust allowing the construction of a Memorial Centre on the exhibition grounds.

City To Consider Rent Controls

In keeping with his promise to work towards the institution of municipally-controlled rents in Peterborough, Mayor Norman Graham has announced that he will shortly call a special meeting of council to sound out the views of the other members on the problem.

His Worship told The Examiner that the meeting would probably be held towards the latter part of next week. It will be an informal meeting held in private.

"It won't be a policy meeting," Mayor Graham said. "I just want to talk it over with the other members and get their views on whether or not the city should take over rent controls. It's a big problem and the solution is up to the entire council."

DROPPING CONTROLS

Council received formal notice of the province's intention of discontinuing rent controls March 2 in a letter from a select committee of the legislature which has been studying the matter.

At the suggestion of Ald. Harold Rehill, the finance committee of council Monday night instructed City Clerk E. A. Outram to find out from the department of municipal affairs how many municipalities still have rent control.

Mayor Graham said he thought the city ought to take advantage of the province's offer of advice and assistance.

Festival Play Choice Poor Suter Declares

TORONTO (CP) — Ajudicator Graham Suter Tuesday night praised the performance of Eileen Chapman of the Oshawa Little Theatre in her role as the comic aunt in J. B. Priestley's domestic comedy, Laburnum Grove, but said the play itself was poor.

The performance, directed by Cara Malcolm, was Oshawa's entry [illegible] Drama

Mr. Suter said the evening was not as bright throughout as it should have been because he said too poor a play had been chosen. The adjudicator said Priestley had written a potboiler when he wrote this comedy and added that it you play a potboiler you have to make the pot bubble.

Miss Chapman, Mr. Suter said, gave a rich characterization, had plenty of attack and in general supplied a theatrical feast. The one complaint about her performance was her tendency to drop her voice at the end of statements.

Mr. Suter also had praise for the group for the trouble it took with the play and the success achieved in the matter of atmosphere and general detail. Several of the players received ncouraging words from Mr. Suter, British actor and lecturer.

The friends and neighbours presented an electric tea-kettle and silver butter dish.

Those present included: Mrs. J. Deane, Herb and Margaret, Mr. Tom Tanner and Mary, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Nelson; Mr. and Mrs. Allie Watkins; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davison; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kelley and Roy; Mr. and Mrs. Herb. Syers; Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Jackson; Messers Norman, and Henry Jewison.

Doris King introduced the program which followed.

Says U.S. Red Tape Worse Than China

OSHAWA (CP)—A Roman Catholic priest who was expelled from China after 28 years' mission work said Tuesday it is easier travelling through Communist countries than it is through the United States.

The Rev. Jos. Venini, about 58, of Oshawa said in an interview that he had more trouble crossing the U. S. on his way to Canada than he had crossing China.

The missionary said he was refused a U. S. visa because he came from a Communist country. Father Venini arrived here last Friday. He said that after being held up in Portugal and Cuba for three months, he was granted passage-in-custody by the U. S.

"That means you come through as a criminal," Father Venini said. He added that he was escorted by guards while travelling by plane from Havana to Detroit.

May Force Landlords Supply Proper Heat

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto board of health decided Tuesday to ask city council to pass a bylaw that would force Toronto landlords to supply a comfortable degree of heat to tenants or face prosecution.

The board was prompted to action by Controller Ford Brand who said a family in east Toronto had no heat Monday when the temperature outside was zero. Mr. Brand said that when police were called they found glasses of water in the house frozen. Several children and the parents were shivering, Mr. Brand said.

It was noted that Hamilton had a bylaw similar to the one needed to cover the situation in Toronto.

Mine Strikes Delay Dept. Plans To Propose Compulsory Union Dues Checkoff Scheme

By JOHN LeBLANC

OTTAWA (CP)—Delay in settling metal mine strikes in northern Ontario and Quebec is holding up labor department plans for proposing that Praliament make the checkoff of union dues compulsory to employers' under federal control.

The government, informants said is ready to bring in legislation for the checkoff at this session of Parliament. But it is unwilling to step in while the issue is at stake in big strikes under provincial jurisdction.

Establishment of a settlement pattern in the tieups, these sources declare, would pave the way for legislation. This might be done with contracts in about three of the major mines, the informants said.

So far, only one of the dozen strikes has been finally settled, with another settlement in the making. The timing of further signings will determine whether Parliament gets legislation making the checkoff compulsory on industries in its jurisdiction.

ACADEMIC ISSUE

These are such businesses as railways, communications, shipping and airlines that operate across provincial boundaries. They employ around 375,000 workers.

A federal bill would call for the "voluntary revocable" type of checkoff. Employers would be required by law to deduct union dues from a member's pay envelope and turn them over to the union, so long as the employee wished.

Several of the provinces—though not the two where the checkoff is being fought out in the hardrock mines—have legislation along this line in one form or another.

For the federal government itself, the issue is largely academic. Most workers under its jurisdiction have negotiated the checkoff in contracts with their employers.

Employee associations among the 140,000 federal workers also have a modified checkoff of association dues, though they have not the collective bargaining rights of unions in private industry.

While federal legislation on the checkoff could have no direct effect on the Ontario-Quebec strikes, the federal government has been holding back action largely because it does not want to give the appearance of thrusting itself into an issue that is troubling two provincial governments.

NO EMBARRASSMENT

The government here, it was understood, is particularly anxious not to embarrass the Ontario Progressive Conservative government. Though on the opposite side of the political fence, Premier Frost's administration has been getting on well with Ottawa.

The federal favor for the checkoff represents a reversal of the stand the government here has taken for many years, influenced by the fact that the largest single bargaining group of workers in the county—the 150,000 non-operating employees of the railways—got the checkoff by a negotiated contract little over a year ago. They are under federal jurisdiction.

Now before the Commons is a bill by Stanley H. Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre) to write the checkoff into the federal labor code. On the outcome of the mine strikes depends whether his measur—or more likely a government amendment to the code — goes through.

Clear Orderly In Bludgeoning

TORONTO (CP)—A 28-year-old hospital orderly who had been held on a vagrancy charge in connection with the bludgeon-killing last week of Helen Boyle, 24, laboratory technician at St. Michael's Hospital, has been "eliminated from the case," chief of detectives Archie McCathie said Tuesday.

The man had formerly worked at the hospital and after the slaying came forward to suggest what [illegible] happened to Miss Boyle [illegible] evicted from a waiting-room of the [illegible] slaying [illegible] week on the vagrancy booking.

Judge Gives Ruling On Eccentric Will

TORONTO (CP)—Richard Lee Elliott of Lindsay, who died in 1950, directed in his will that from the balance of his estate a monthly bonus be paid to "agencies, institutions or persons not guilty of smart practices against me in old age, who provide me with home and food until death." He specified hospitals did not qualify.

The balance is $7,145 and Mr. Justice R. I. Ferguson of the Ontario High Court Tuesday ruled the money should go to Elliott's next-of-kin. He dismissed the claim of the Salvation Army.

He said the will specified any claimants had to comply with a six-month probationary period and although the Salvation Army had looked after Elliott at Guelph for a period, the Army did not do so for six months.

Bavarian, Austrian Touches On Spring Travel Costumes

By DOROTHY ROE

NEW YORK (AP)—The weather—and the travel habits of American women—are ruling factors in designer Vera Maxwell's wearable and colorful collection of spring fashions.

Vera explored Denmark, Austria and Bavaria for inspiration for [illegible] with a group of Danish print cottons, hand-woven flax linens from Bavaria and Austrian details such as green velvet collars on linen coats.

Miss Maxwell, an inveterate traveller herself, has concentrated on travel costumes for a number of years, featuring dress-and-coat combinations which can be dressed up or down for various occasions. This season her prize outfit is a straight coat of chiffon-weight camel's hair lined in a Liberty print silk matching the accompanying dress with adjustable wraparound bodice in the favorite Maxwell manner.

She also shows a camel coat with grey and beige striped dacron dress and lining, which resists wrinkling and is easy to keep fresh on a long trip.

A suit of Bavarian hand-woven flax linen in natural color has a blouse and jacket lining of red plaid cotton and a green velvet collar. Another highlight is a loose coat of yellow linen with a Chinese print, lined in solid-color blue linen to match the sheath dress that goes with it.

Vincent Monte Sano makes news with loose, soft coats that achieve fullness by means of box pleats falling from shoulder yokes, sometimes belted in just below the shoulder blades. The pleats permit a slim effect with actual fullness.

Belted suits are important in the Monte Sano spring collection, one recurrent model having a soft shirt top belted at the natural waistline. Another suit has fitted midriff jacket suggesting the high Empire waistline.

Black and navy silk coats, fitted or loose, are important in this collection, as they are throughout the New York wholesale market.

COTTONS POPULAR—London fashion experts say the fabric choice of smart women in offices and Mayfair drawing rooms or at royal garden parties next summer will be cotton. This is a regency print in Sudan cotton poplin, with a crisp bow at the neck and long loose sleeves. It is featured by a number of leading London couturiers.

Mid-Price Cottons In Favor For 1954 Summer Fabrics

By MURIEL NARRAWAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The fabric choice of smart women in London offices and Mayfair drawing rooms or at royal garden parties and big racing events next summer will be cotton.

When the Queen included some off-the-peg cottons in her Commonwealth tour wardrobe, the seal of royal favor was placed on a dress choice that has been steadily gaining favor since British clothing came off ration.

Already the retailers are stocking up with the widest selection of mid-price cottons seen in recent years. A favorite game for the fashion-conscious, since the Queen wore the first cotton dress in Bermuda, has been spotting copies of the royal choice in London's shop windows.

Within a week, a facsimile could be purchased for about £5. And for those who want something less conspicuous than the duplicate of a royal choice, there is already a wide selection in similar prints and materials.

FOR OFFICE WEAR

It's possible, for instance, to turn up at the office looking demurely business-like in a regency print sudan cotton poplin costing less than £6. With loose shirt sleeves, tie-bow neck and shirt front, vertical stripes and rose-trellis work, it has a lavender and old-lace effect.

For just seven guineas it's possible to purchase a black sculptured sudan cotton evening dress with simple princess lines and strapless top.

Some of the smartest summer styles this year in a wide range of prices will be in sudan cotton.

Britain's biggest cotton, holiday and sportswear outfitters, and couture houses, like royal designer Hardy Amies, are going for cotton. There's everything from beach wear at less than £4 to evening and cocktail outfits at about £10. Typical for cocktails or smart beach wear is a full-skirted sudan cotton with trailing ivy design and draped halter neck. The bodice line is attractively trimmed with cut-out ivy leaves and a brief jacket buttons over empire-line bodice.

Apsley WI Hears Parliament Talk

APSLEY (ENS)—The Apsley branch of Women's Institute met in the public library with 17 members present and President Mrs. Sid McCauley presiding. A committee composed of Mrs. Martin Reddick, convener, Mrs. T. H. Lean and Mrs. Newberry was appointed to arrange for a "hard time" dance in the near future.

The heater is to be put in use again in the library.

The invitation to visit Selwyn branch has been accepted and plans were made for transportation etc. Miss W. Robinson, teacher of grade nine in Apsley central school, whose father is member of parliament for Huron attended the opening of parliament in Ottawa and gave a very interesting first hand story of it. Mrs. T. H. Lean introduced the speaker and Mrs. B. McIlmoyl voiced the thanks of the meeting.

A "jumbled flower" contest conducted by Mrs. Bert McIlmoyl was won by Mrs. Norman Reddick.

The lunch committee served lunch and a social hour was enjoyed.

Trinity Auxiliary Hears Miss G. Clark

"Christians in China are being sifted like wheat, but wheat is still wheat," said Miss Greta Clark, recently retired missionary, who spent 33 years in the Anglican Church mission field in central China and who was guest speaker at the Elizabeth Parker Auxiliary meeting in Trinty Church parlour Monday evening.

Miss Clark cliamed that all that has ever been told of the communistic terror rule in China is true and that the half has still not been told. She said when she began her work in China the missionaries were free to teach and to preach and to build schools and hospitals which were needed so badly and that they helped children to acquire a desire to go to school and learn, which they lacked. They unbound the feet of young girls and healed the multi-present eye diseases.

She told of having lived and worked through 4 years of the Japanese war and quite graphically pictured several instances of personal experience and of faith in God which carried them through critical and trying ordeals.

She claims that there are many, many staunch Christians in China still bravely witnessing and serving Christ and she pleaded for prayer for them.

Miss Clark declared that the only answer to communism is Christ and that those at home must be ready to convert our own young people to witnessing Christians lest they become communists.

Miss Grace Sargent gave Miss Clark a warm welcome and introduction and Miss Olive Armstrong fittingly thanked her for her inspiring message.

President Mrs. F. W. Horton, presided for the worship period and short business session. Miss Evelyn Bailey, Mrs. W. Head and Miss Clara Seens shared in the worship. The theme of which was "The Church — an Image of the Kingdom."

Mrs. Horton voiced a welcome to the new executive as follows: honorary president, Mrs. R. F. Downey; president, Mrs. F. W. Horton; vice - presidents, Miss Grace Sargent and Miss Olive Armstrong; treasurer, Mrs. M. Hart; recording secretary, Miss Jean Armstrong; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. J. Fallen; envelope secretary, Mrs. F. Rappe; temperance secretary, Mrs. S. Harrison, supply secretary, Mrs. C. Thackeray; missionary monthly secretary, Miss Evelyn Bailey; community friendship, Mrs. F. Leslie and Mrs. WW. Derry; Christian stewardship, Mrs. W Head; press secretary, Miss Clara Seens; flower secretary, Mrs. H. Gray; literature convener, Miss Helen moore; pianists, Miss Margaret Wolstenholme and Miss Greta Giles.

Group leaders: (1) Miss Cora Bailey and Miss Mabel Brown. (2) Miss Margaret Wolstenholme and Miss Greta Giles; (3) Mrs. Hazel Blatty and Mrs. Ida Dawson. (4) Miss Ila Giles and Miss Helen Staples.

Installation of these officers will take place at the evening service in the church this coming Sunday.

Bucket Theme Stressed In Hats

Most popular trimming was a bird—or several birds. One bisuit-colored bucket had a dozen scarlet and green birds perched all round the brim.

LAKEFIELD

Mrs. Arthur Kingdon, health convener of the Lakefield Home and School Association, was in charge of the program for this week's meeting. The president, Mrs. Stanley Burger presided for a business session.

The Rev. H. Kaye of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church led in the opening devotions.

The three-fold program, that of lay education, bandage making and fund raising of the Canadian Cancer Society was explained by Mrs. Douglas Davis who asked for help in making the dressings. Meetings for this purpose are held the first Thursday of each month in the council chamber. She also appealed for used white cotton or linen, suitable for the dressings.

Dr. H. L. Bean was the guest speaker and in his address emphasized the importance of proper diet during the pre-natal period when the child's teeth begin to form. He also suggested that children should make friends with their dentist at an early age and that it was preferable that they should be sent to the dentist rather than being accompanied by a parent. He particularly deplored the habit of thumb sucking, especialy at night as the prolonged period of pressure forced the teeth out of their natural position.

Introduced by Mrs. Davis, Dr. Bean was thanked by Mrs. E. Dracup.

Piano solos were played by D. J. Armstrong and Mrs. C. H. Hunter announced a series of radio programs on parent education which will begin on January 17 at 6.15 p.m., and urged that parents should listen to the broadcasts.

Attendance prize was won by Miss Bertina Beavis' room and the mothers of Miss Irene Madill's served refreshments with Mrs. George Graham as convener.

DRESSES FOR SPRING take on new look with narrow-skirted, soft and generally slimmed down lines. We show this new silhouette here with awide -skirted alternative. Straight walking dress (left) by Mollie Parnis illustrates the new line very well. Waistline is high with a wrapped feeling. This sheath is in grey silk and worsted alpaca, has white silk twill collar and bow. Hat is by Lilly Dache. Black, all-silk taffeta with white pin dots (right) by Jacques Fath for Joseph Halpert has white pique collar and three-quarter length cuffed sleeves. The skirt is worn over Swiss organdie.

Daytime Dresses Slimmed - Down

By GAILE DUGAS
NEA Woman's Editor

NEW YORK (NEA) —The billowy, bosomy, dressy dresses of seasons just past are gone. Replacing them this spring, we have soft, slimmed-down dresses.

The dress look is a narrow look, with a straight line from neck to hem. Length is about an inch shorter than last year but appears to be even shorter because of the narrowness.

Though three-fourths of the clothes in the spring collections are straight, there's a remaining one-fourth devoted to the wide and spreading skirt, particularly true in after-five fashions.

In these wide-skirted fashions, the skirts with back fullness and the flared princess should be included.

The introduction of softer, lighter, more feminine fabrics for suits and coats has spread to dresses, too, and produced an entirely different aspect for daytime. Crepes and soft silks, prints in rayon, silk and cotton all conspire in developing the dress with slim lines.

The Empire and princess silhouettes are so closely allied (and so important) as to be nearly synonymous. This means that the one-piece dress has greater importance than the two-piece or the soft separates.

Dresses with their own jackets are strong in the costume category. Sometimes the jacket of a ligthweight wool dress reveals, when removed, a halter-top dress suitable for after-five wear.

Navy is the big dress color. Next come the beiges or the blues. Which comes first depends upon the locale. But mauve gets a mention, and so does pink.

MARY MOORE SAYS:

Desserts For Dinner Party Of Eight

Tomorrow I am going to describe to you in as much detail as one column will permit how I went about preparing a dinner party. We had nine, but two were small children so the meal would serve eight, and I hope you will pardon me if I suggest that it was a select — even elegant — little dinner that may fit into your plans, from the viewpoint of the budget, the tastes of your epicurean friends and the time you have at your disposal.

I will not have room for the desserts tomorrow. (I provided two desserts because I knew my sisters would skip the steak and the [illegible] welcome a sherbet.)

STEAMED HOLIDAY PUDDING

One cup cranberries drained from cranberry sauce, 1 cup seedless raisins, ½ cup each citron peel, blanched almonds left whole, dark brown sugar, ¼ teaspoon each cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon baking soda, 1½ cups sifted all-purpose floor, 1 egg. Sift together the sifted flour, spices, salt and soda. Mix together the fruits, nuts sugar and stir in well. Turn into generously buttered 1½-quart pudding mould, (one with tight-fitting cover is preferable) or into 2 1-lb. [illegible] parchment paper, and tie a double ment paper, and tie a double thickness of it over top of moulds snugly. Stand on a trivet or a rack in steamer or large kettle add water by pouring it down sides, to 2-inch depth, cover steamer or kettle and bring to boil and boil gently 2 hours. If this is made before mealtime reheat by steaming in the same way pudding was cooked for 1 hour. Turn out on large round serving dish. Pass.

HARD SAUCE ROSETTES

Cream in a bowl until soft ½ cup butter. Gradually cream into it 1½ cups sifted icing sugar and 2 teaspoons vanilla until very [illegible] (I just pile this on a pretty plate, sprinkle top with nutmeg and chill until hard.) But I put it into the cookie press and forced it through the small star disc, and made little rosettes that looked more like tiny birds' nests than anything else. I worked directly onto the serving plate on which it was to be passed. I sprinkled each rosette with nutmeg and chilled it until hard.

When my youngsters were little they used to pop these tasty morsels into their mouths like candy. Eleanor's youngsters passed up the hot pudding but not these.

ORANGE MILK SHERBIT

To ¾ cup orange juice which includes the unstrained pulp add ¾ cup sugar and 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Soak 1½ teaspoons gelatin in 6 tablespoons cold water 5 minutes, then stir it over hot water until gelatin is dissolved. Stir the sugar-juice mixture until sugar is dissolved, add the gelatin mixture to it, stir, then add 1 cup milk. This may curdle a little but don't worry. Pour into freezing tray and freeze to mush. Remove the freezing tray to cold bowl, break it with a spoon and beat a little. Beat the white of 1 egg until stiff add the yolk and beat just enough to mix and fold this into the frozen mixture until smooth. Return to freezing tray and freeze hard.

NOTE TO REDUCERS

If you want to make the above dessert without sugar, omit sugar and dissolve 16 sucaryl tablets in ½ cup warm water (this is additional water) and add this to the orange juice, and proceed as in above recipe.

DOROTHY DIX

Book On "Facts Of Life" Disturbs Teen-Age Girl

DEAR MISS DIX: So much is being said about telling young people facts of life, one wonders what to do. I gave my daughter a book to read, and had a terribly upset girl on my hands. She cried and said, "Who wants to know all that at teen age!" She was disturbed about this for a long while. Don't you think we are pressing our young people too far? A young man told me that in college nothing was left unsaid, and that he didn't like it in mixed classes. S. E.

✧ ✧ ✧

AN INDIVIDUAL PROBLEM

ANSWER: How fast a teen-ager should be sped on the road to complete knowledge of life is such an individual matter that only the parents, perhaps with the help of someone who knows the child, can judge. Some girls and boys can assimilate a large amount of information, others must be instructed more gradually. The best is to answer questions frankly, but without too much embellishment. Giving a young girl a book on sex to read is apt to do more harm than good. To teen-agers love is a thing of full moons, rosy clouds, daydreams, and the ideal man. To have this romance set down in a matter-of-fact way of only ONE aspect of love, is bound to be somewhat disillusioning. Books written specifically to present the so-called facts of life (though there are some facts beyond their scope), naturally have no traffic with the stuff of which dreams are made. Such literature is meant for parents to read so they can pass it on at the opportune time.

Robbing love of all its mystery is doing the young no favor. Something should be left for the morrow, or the next year, or later. No knowledge can be acquired in one fell swoop, sex least of all. There is no book, no form of instructoin comparable to complete understanding between parent and child. When that exists questions and answers come in a normal way; facts aren't presented to a youngster too soon, nor are they withheld too long.

If you have friends who are perplexed by this problem, advise them against the book method, and urged them to cultivate the confidence of their children.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I have two boy friends, Gordon and Robert. Gordon and I went together last year and were quite fond of each other, but I haven't seen him for five months. Then Robert appeared on the scene and we dated for a while, then he went overseas. He asked me to wait for him, but as yet I haven't given him my decision. I still like Gordon better. Do you think there's a chance he'll ever come back?—ALINE.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: It would be very unfair for you to promise Robert to wait when you heart still belonged to Gordon. Perhaps you just need more time to get over your first beau, and perhaps he might come back. In either case, this is no time to give a soldier false hopes. Tell Robert you'd like to continue being friends with him, but that you are not ready to give any pledges.

✧ ✧ ✧

DEAR MISS DIX: I'm 21 and in love with a boy who is engaged to another girl. I know she'll never make him happy; it would be better if he broke with her and went with me. We did date for a while before he met the other girl. Do you have any suggestions as to how I can go about this—JOSIE.

✧ ✧ ✧

ANSWER: If I did have any ideas along these lines (and haven't) wild horses wouldn't drag them out of me. It's not up to you or me to decide who would be happier with whom. These young people are engaged and apparently happy; your role is completely out of their picture.

Omemee Groups Honor Newlyweds

OMEMEE (ENS) — In their beautifully remodelled and redecorated church basement the choir, Sunday school and YPU of Trinity United church entertained on Monday evening in honor of newlyweds Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Raffan and Mrs. Vivian Raffan, Don Raffan and Mr. Rodman who have moved to Lindsay.

Miss Marion Zufelt, YPU president was chairman and Don Blakey, recreation convener, in charge of the sing-song and games. William Weir, choir leader in his humorous way explained the purpose of the gathering and in a more serious vein spoke of the work done by each of the guests in the various organizations. Others who spoke were Arthur Weir for the Sunday school, Miss Zufelt for the YPU and the Rev. V. E. R. Zufelt. Presentation of a planter lamp was made to Mr. and Mrs. Harrison by Miss Orma Brooks, a Bible to Mrs. V. Raffan, by Mrs. Russell Brooks, a revised version of Bible to Mr. Don Raffan by Miss Phyllis Nelson and to Mr. Ernie Rodman books were presented by Art Weir. Each recipient expressed his or her thanks and the very pleasant evening closed with the traditional YPU closing. Lunch was served by the young people.

Month In Jail For Assaulting Young Woman

LINDSAY (ENS)—A 19-year-old Fenelon Falls youth, Leo Hart, was sentencde to a month in jail this morning when he pleaded guilty to assaulting a 22-year-old woman, Tuesday morning.

The charge arose from an incident on a lonely [illegible] and two other youths threatened to leave the woman in the sub-zero cold if she did not compromise with them. When she refused, Hart pulled her from the car in which they were sitting, and threw her in a snowbank.

Only the arrival of OPP Constable Clive Naismith prevented the youth from leaving the girl to possibly freeze to death, Crown Attorney Lorne Jordan told the court.

The girl testified she had gone for a ride with the youths after they picked her up at her boarding house in Fenelon Falls. She had gone with them because Hart threatened to take her to the car in her nightclothes if she did not agree to change into her clothes. The youths drove to a place near Powles Corners, where they changed seats, one of the others sitting with the girl in the rear seat. During the episode the girl said, the rear door of the car was slammed on her foot. Then the group drove to near Little Britain, southwest of Lindsay where Hart pulled her from the car. He then got back into the vehicle and drove away. The boys said they intended to scare the girl, but when they turned to come back to where she was standing, the cruiser had pulled up.

Constable Naismith picked up the girl and made a vain chase after the car. Hart was arrested later in Lindsay. The car was found Tuesday in a snow bank, where it had failed to round a curve at high speed.

Crown Attorney Jordan in commenting before sentence, said "Hart's action belies his declaration of affection for the girl. It was a cold night and she was 20 miles from home when they left her. She might have frozen to death had not the police arrived."

Magistrate Gee added in passing sentence, "let this be a warning to others with the same ideas. Hart, you should have been the girl's protector, instead of agreeing with your friends in this thing."

BAILIEBORO (ENS)—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Beebe entertained Saturday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Armstrong who were married 25 years on January 5.

Cards were played in the early part of the evening. The honored couple were presented with a set of dishes, silverware and glassware.

Those present included Mr. and Mrs. George Beebe, Misses Maude Lord and Janet Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wood, Mr. and Mrs. William Morrison, Mr. and Mrs. James Wood, Mr. and Mrs. E. Westington and William, Mr. and Mrs. Truman Morton, Mr. and Mrs. A. Cox and family, Mrs. Alice Gaynor of Peterborough, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ellison and family of Keene.

The celebration was a complete surprise as Mr. and Mrs. Armstrong were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Beebe.

Firemen Rescue Child

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Eight-year-old Albert Salvia fell 20 feet down a manhole into icy sewer water Tuesday. He fought against the current until four firemen formed a human chain and rescued him. Hundreds witnessing the rescue operation cheered when Albert, who had been swept about 200 feet by the current, was lifted from the manhole after about 20 minutes in the water.

Cable Car Halted

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Nineteen pesons were shaken up Tuesday when a crowded cable car slammed to a halt, tossing the passengers to the floor and jarring its front windows from their frames. The sudden stop was caused by the car's brake hitting an obstruction in the underground slot where the moving power cable runs.

Trapped Three Days

AUBURN, Calif. (AP)—A paralyzed 73-year-old woman was agonizingly trapped without food or water for three days, pinned by the lifeless body of her husband, it was disclosed today. Mrs. Maude Wallrab was rescued Monday, police said, when an inquiry was made to find out why Wallrab had not reported to his job. He had died of a heart attack and fallen across his wife in bed.

UNHAPPY FAREWELL—There will be two unhappy grandchildren in the Turkish "White House" when President Celal Bayar and his wife leave Ankara for their trip to the U.S. later this month. The girls are the children of the president's daughter and Dr. Ahmet Gursoy, a physician and a member of parliament. To keep the children in good spirits, they have promised to bring back some real American dungarees. The president and his wife will tour the U.S. for one month before returning to Turkey.

Collection Of Drawings Makes Interesting Show

The collection of Canadian drawings now hanging in the Public Library gallery will excite the interest of students and connoisseurs rather then the eyes of the merely curious. There is no splash of colour, but much in line wash and figure to attract attention. It is interesting, too, to see drawings by contemporary well-known Canadian artists whose main reputation is for painting—Coburn, Varley, Lismer, Emily Carr, Schaefer, Brandtner, and thirty others.

The collection, assembled by the Windsor gallery for showing in six Ontario art centres (Peterborough is the third to get it) can hardy be called either historical or representative. The two earliest drawings are of 1788 and 1827. There are only three others dated before 1900. There is a good Suzor-Cote—"The Blind Man", done about 1910. The majority of the work is by living artists.

DRAWING FOR ITSELF

An oddity is the lack of drawings and sketches preliminary to major works in another medium. Most of these are drawings per se, and only a few are studio studies (like Grant Macdonald's figure).

Louis Muhlstock has a characteristic nude in ink brushed with colour wash. The small Emily Carr is typical of her style. Will Ogilvie's poignant "Burial in the Hills", done in Sicily during the war (ink and coloured chalk) is one that should not be missed.

The styles range from detailed, thoughtfully-worked pieces like Kathleen Munn's "The Ascension" to impressionistic, thin line, spontaneous drawings like Jacques de Tonnancour's "Woman with Gladioli" (a direct, sure sketch) and W. Roloff Beny's ink fancy of the east portico of St. Mark's Venice (a delightful, free thing). Moral sentiment is given a nineteenth century twigging in Frederick S. Cobourn "Return of the Murderer to the Scene of his Crime" (like an engraving to an improving poem); a strong, simple modern statement in Stanley Cosgrove's "Kneeling Man".

GOOD HUMOUR

There is a refreshing amount of good humour, gaiety and vitality in the show: Henri Julien's "Fire Reels" (1890), Albert Dumouchel's tinkly caparisoned rearing horses ('Chevaux Noirs Ernrubannes'), 1951; and B.C. Binning's 'Me Too One (The Shrimp Boat)' done in 1945, are samples. This piece is lots of fun—something like a New Yorker's intricate, jolly cartoon.

Among the strange drawings, done as a complete abstract design, is Marian Scott's oil pattern on paper, which looks like an air photo map of Blankland.

Since drawing is the very foundation of the visual arts, local people interested in painting should see how Canadian artists have drafn. On the whole, judging from this show, drawing does not take a major place in Canadian art.

Miners To Discuss Daley's Settlement

TIMMINS (CP)—A union membership meeting of the 1,400 workers at McIntyre Porcupine mine will be held Friday to discuss the strike settlement basis reached Tuesday at Labor Minister Daley's office in Toronto.

Mr. Daley announced the settlement basis after a two-hour conference with union and company officials. He said the terms will not be disclosed before being put to the membership of the United Steelworkers of America (CIO-CCL).

Four other mines met or scheduled meetings to discuss the settlement basis reached by McIntyre.

United States Said Behind Pakistan-Afghan Detente

By NORMAN CLIFFE

NEW DELHI—(OFNS)—United States influence is believed to be behind the series of recent events apparently designed to improve relations between Pakistan and Afghanistan, and to promote a better atmosphere on Pakistan's vulnerable North-west Frontier. Afghanistan's appointment of an Ambassador to Pakistan after a long lapse has been followed by the release of all political detainees in the North-west Frontier Province, including the Pathan leader, Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan, know as the "Frontier Ghandi", and his brother, Dr. Khan Sahib, Premier of the province before India's partition. The events are linked because of the long-standing tension between Pakistan and Afghanistan caused by Afghan sponsorship of a demand for an independent Pathanistan which was championed by Ghaffar Khan until his imprisonment five-and-a-half-years ago.

It is presumed that the present Prime Minister of Pakistan, Mohammed Ali, is willing to reverse the policy of his predecessors, who refused to discuss the subject with Afghanistan. Before becoming Premier he was Pakistan Ambassador in Washington, and Afghanistan is indebted to the United States for a great deal of technical and economic aid. The U.S. Vice-President, Mr. Richard Nixon, recently visited both countries, and presumably used his good offices to soften relations between them.

TRADE THROUGH PAKISTAN

Almost all Afghanistan's trade flows through the Pakistan port of Karachi. Pathans, who form the basic racial stock in the area between Kabul and Peshawar, live on both sides of the Durand Line—which is the international border defined in 1893 by Sir Mortimer Durand, Secretary to the Government of India, after the war between Britain and Afghanistan. There are estimated to be three million Pathans in Afghanistan, out of a population of eleven million; another two-and-a-half million in the tribal territory, and two-and-three-quarter million in the frontier province. All speak the same language: Pushto.

Peshawar is only two hundred miles from Soviet Turkestan. When India was partitioned, Afghanistan claimed autonomy for the Pushto-speaking tribal area from the river Indus to the D[illegible] and line, as well as for the fro[illegible] tier province. But Pakistan inherited British responsibility for the tribal area, and respected the tribesmen while continuing to subsidise them, and to extend educational and medical facilities to them. A plebiscite was held in the province, but because the choice was between accession to India or Pakistan, and third alternative of Pathan autonomy was disallowed, Ghaffar Khan and his brother's Government Party boycotted the poll. Just over half of the five hundred and seventy thousand entitled to vote did so, and 50.49 per cent in favour of Pakistan decided the fate of two-and-three-quarter million population. Khan Sahib's Ministry was dismissed, and the brothers were imprisoned. Also rounded up were large numbers of frontier "Red Shirts", a body of rugged Pathans who, under the influence of Ghaffar Khan, a disciple of Gandhi, renounced the arms they normally carried and pledged themselves to non-violence. The Red Shirts were freed by stages, and Khan Sahib was given restricted liberty. Ghaffar Khan was given solitary confinement, and underwent two serious operations during imprisonment.

His release gratifies Indians who hold him in high esteem. It remains to be seen what influence he retains with Pathans, and whether he will exercise it in the interests of harmonious relation with Pakistan.

Pallbearers were: Bruce Johnston, William Cummings, Cecil Sission, Herbert Ferguson, Harry Taylor and George A. Macdonald. Burial was in Little Lake cemetery.

90-Year-Old Minister Dies In Hamilton

HAMILTON (CP)—The Rev. Dr. W. H. Graham, 90, one-time minister of Central United Church and former chairman of the Hamilton United Church Presbytery, died here Tuesday.

Dr. Graham retired more than 20 years ago.

Dr. Graham was born in Blanchard township and was ordained in Stratford in 1896. That year he married the late Martha Campbell, of Campbellford.

Survivors include a sister, Miss Minnie Graham, St. Mary's.

Murder Trial Starts Near Kirkland Lake

HAILEYBURY (CP) — Trial of Walter Okonski of Kirkland Lake on a charge of murder in the death of his wife Maria began here Tuesday.

Henry Kwieciarz, a neighbor of the Okonskis, said, "Okonski was sitting very nicely in my apartment last Nov. 29 about 5 p.m. when he picked up Mrs. Okonski in his hands and carried her into their apartment after a quarrel."

Kwieciarz testified Okonski reappeared about an hour later and said he had killed his wife.

The trial in this town 45 miles south of Kirkland Lake is continuing.

Appointment Made

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Walter J. Blackburn, president of the London Free Press, has announced the appointment of W. Clifford Wingrove, former manager of radio station CKTB, St. Catharines, as assistant manager of CFPL, London.

Naguib Smashes Brotherhood, Arrests Leaders

CAIRO (Reuters) — Gen. Mohammed Naguib's regime today outlawed Egypt's powerful Moslem Brotherhood and arrested more than 100 of its leaders.

The brotherhood, a militant religious organiz[illegible] regime used to ban all established political parties last October.

The arrests were made early today in co-ordinated raids in Egypt's main cities. The brotherhood's headquarters here was sealed and surrounded by police.

The ban followed a riot at Cairo University Tuesday in which brotherhood supporters clashed with government supporters. Five students suffered bullet wounds before police declared martial law in the area.

The brotherhood escaped last year's ban on condition that it restrict its activities to the religious field. Despite this, the organization has been leading a campaign to drive the British out of the Suez canal zone.

German Captain Dies As Fire Sweeps Ship

HAMBURG (Reuters) — The captain of the 1,593-ton German freighter Krusau died today in a fire which swept the bridge of his ship in the River Weser.

Fire-fighters found the captain, Martin Scharm, 44, dead in his cabin. The fire broke out shortly after the ship had left Bremerhaven for Rotterdam. In a few minutes flames raged through the whole bridge. Five tugs raced alongside the Krusau and put the fire out in half an hour.

File Last-Ditch Appeal For Seguin

CORNWALL (CP)—Lawyers for Henri Seguin, 29-year-old Cornwall laborer will file a last-ditch motion for reprieve Saturday in an attempt to save their client from the gallows next Tuesday.

Seguin is under sentence to hang Jan. 19 for the murder on Aug. 16, 1952 of Leonard Hurd, Maxville businessman.

The request for a stay of execution will be made before Mr. Justice Walter Schroeder at Ottawa to allow presentation of possible new evidence not available at the time of Seguin's trial last October.

New Fighting Starts As French Bomb Reds

HANOI, Indo-China (AP) — French army headquarters reported fresh skirmishes today with Vietminh troops around Dien Bien Phu. Fighter planes and bombers hammered at rebel concentrations there, on the northern border of Laos, for the 20th straight day.

French-Viet Namese troops killed 11 of the Communist-led rebels.

HAMILTON (CP) — On their way to attend the funeral of a relative in Toronto, two Pennsylvania brothers were injured Tuesday night when their car crashed into the rear of a department of highways snow plow on the westbound lane of the Queen Elizabeth way, near Grimsby Beach.

Taken to West Lincoln Memorial hospital were Thomas and Robert Walkinson, of Charleroi, Pa. The former had chest injury and lacerations to forehead and left leg, while the latter suffered shock and facial injury.

The 15-ton plow was being operated by John Porter, Beamsville, and Fred Mason, Grimsby.

Dublin Canal Bursts Causes Ruinous Flood

DUBLIN (Reuters)—The Dublin Grand canal burst its banks at Ferbane in central Ireland today, creating the worst floods in the area in 40 years.

The raging waters swirled over fields for miles around the town, about 100 miles west of here, ruining winter crops and threatening spring sowings.

Eager Inventor Attracts Duke, Soon Arrested

WELLINGTON, N. Z. (Reuters) A man believed to be an over-eager inventor was arrested today immediately after he leaped from behind shrubbery and tossed a sheaf of documents into the Duke of Edinburgh's car.

The duke, on a world tour with Queen Elizabeth, had just stepped out of the national art gallery building here after addressing 350 [illegible] and entered the car unescorted.

The documents landed in the lap of Lieut. Michael Parker, the duke's equerry.

The man, said to be a school teacher and amateur inventor, had been shooed away from the entrance of the building before the duke spoke, but sneaked back into bushes surrounding the building. He was hurried off to the local police station for questioning.

QUEEN NOT THERE

The Queen was not with her husband at the time. She was attending a parliamentary luncheon after holding a Privy Council meeting, first ever held by a reigning monarch in New Zealand.

It was convened in the anteroom of the executive council on the ground floor of government house. The Privy Council confined its business to swearing in two new councillors—Sir Harold Barrowclough, chief justice of the supreme court who was knighted by the queen on Tuesday night, and deputy prime minister K. J. Holyoake.

Earlier the Queen laid the foundation stone of the new St. Paul's Anglican cathedral here which will replace the present 88-year-old wooden cathedral.

EMPHASIZED ADVANTAGES

The duke, in his speech to the scientists, emphasized the "enormous advantage" which could result from the pooling of resources of the countries of the Commonwealth in the field of applied research for military purposes. He said:

"Modern warfare depends more and more on scientific equipment and trained men to operate it. There are not enough workers in any one country of the Commonwealth to provide all the up-to-date equipment necessary to ensure that each unit is properly prepared for war."

UK Atom Work Slows After Red-Led Strikes

LONDON (AP)—Strikes called by the Communist - led Electrical Trades Union slowed work today at two key British atomic plants and threatened to hit two more

Around 250 electricians working at the huge plutonium plant under construction at Capenhurst, in northern England, joined 28 colleagues who walked out Monday at the nearby Calder Hall atom project.

And 300 others working at the atomic weapon research station at Aldermaston and at Harwell, nerve centre for the whole of Britain's chain of seven atomic plants, met today to decide whether to join their union's labor war for higher wages. Strikes are now in their third day.

Bikini Test Leader William Blandy, Dies

Blandy retired in 1950 after three years as commander in chief of the U. S. Atlantic fleet. He reported after the Bikini tests that radical redesign was needed throughout the navy, with emphasis on speed and dispersal as defence against the A-bomb.

Alnwick Council Names Officials

ROSENEATH — (ENS) — "The members of the council are filling an office in the community to assist in making human life better," said the Rev. J. R. Wheeler when he conducted a short service during the inauguration of the 1954 Alnwick township Council on Monday. He congratulated the members of the council on the honor that had been conferred upon them by being re-elected by acclamation.

Reeve James Thompson welcomed back the members and entertained them at dinner at Maple Lodge at noon. The members of the council present were Councillors Earl Braithwaite, Edwin McCleary and Hector Winkworth. Councillor Harold Taylor was unavoidably absent owing to illness.

The following were appointed to the various offices in the municipality: caretaker of hall, R. A. Nichol; school attendance officer, Alvin Rosebush; township constable, Fred Norris; stock valuator A. J. Murders Still Unsolved BERN, Switzerland (AP) — A mysterious package left by the late empress Elizabeth of Austria contained nothing more than two small printed volumes of her poetry, the Swiss interior department disclosed Tuesday. The package was addressed to "the president of Switzerland" with instructions that it be opened 55 years after the empress died. New Ointment Helps Clear Children's Skin

MONTREAL (CP)—A new ointment that doesn't "stain, sting or stink" has been found "remarkably effective" in clearing up the skin of infants and children with eczema and in maintaining improvement, it is reported in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal.

The ointment contains hydrocortisone [illegible] compound F acetate. It [illegible] allergy, by Dr. Lila Redmond McCorriston, clinical assistant in dermatology at children's memorial hospital.

She reported compound F was 75 to 100 per cent effective in all cases in the proper ointment bases. Improvement occurred within 24 to 48 hours and was maintained with therapy and for long periods after cessation of therapy.

The ointment treatment is not a cure, but Dr. McCorriston reported that any "flare-ups" of eczema were much easier to control with the preparation.

The ladies of the congregation served refreshments. Guests were present from Young's Point, Peterborough, Omemee, Lakehurst, and other places as well as those from the village.

Railways Win Test Case On Freight Rates

OTTAWA (CP) — The railways Tuesday won a test case involving Western Canada's "one-and-one-third rule" on freight rates.

The board of transport commissioners allowed them to put into effect an "agreed charge" rate on iron pipe between central Canada and the west coast, over the objections of the Alberta government.

Alberta had claimed the move was designed to circumvent the one-and-one-third rule, laid down by Parliament in 1951 to give Alberta a share in the benefits of low "transcontinental" rates between eastern Canada and the west coast.

The board's order today, expected to be a precedent, merely endorsed the agreed charge on pipe.

Criticizes Ottawa For Seaway Plan

MONTREAL (CP) — A. T. Hurter of Montreal, president of the Association of Consulting Engineers of Canada, Monday criticized the federal government for its handling of the initial phases of the St. Lawrence seaway project.

Speaking at the association's annual meeting Mr. Hurter said if independent engineers in private parctice were used they would see that a better job was done and would save the taxpayer money.

It was dangerous to build up a new, expensive department of civil engineers for the project, he said.

Ask Parking Plan

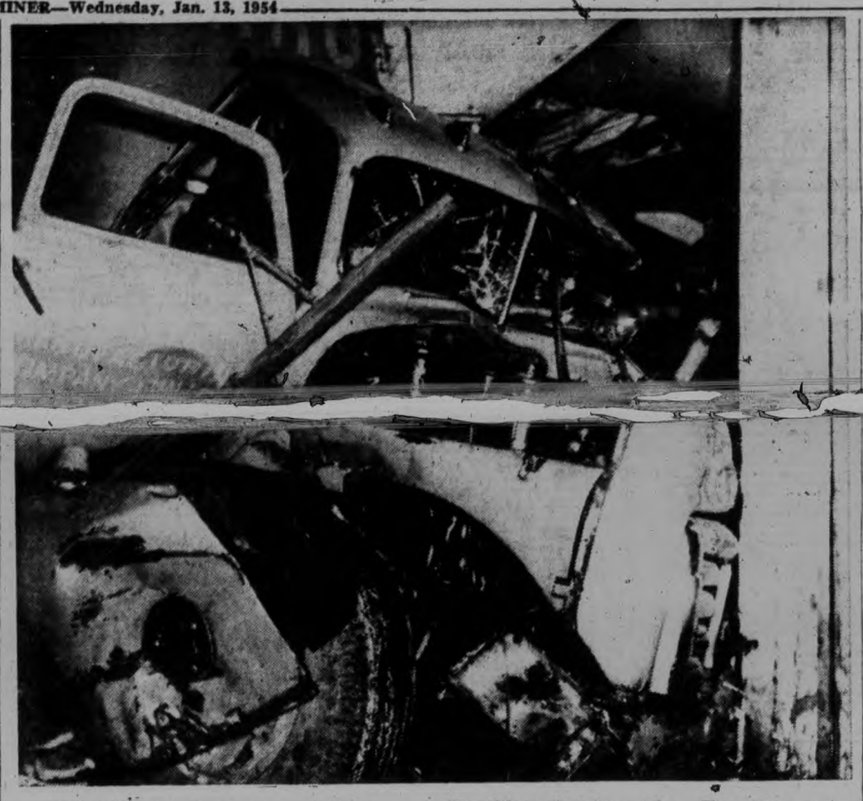
TORONTO (CP)—Toronto parking authority Tuesday asked the city council for approval of a $12,000,000 parking program for the city in 1954. The authority proposed a 1,200-car parking lot at suburban Sunnyside, construction of garages and development of lots in the downtown area. The authority, which has no power to acquire land it feels should be developed for parking purposes, criticized the city fathers for "dragging their feet" on development of needed facilities.

Missing Man Found

KINGSTON (CP) — City detectives Tuesday found James G. Smith, 64, missing from his home here since Sunday, sitting in the waiting room of a bus terminal. He was taken to hospital suffering from severe frost bite. He told police he had slept in the open in below-zero weather both Sunday and Monday night.

Car Kills Boy

WATERLOO (CP)—James Pullinghorn, 12, of Waterloo died in hospital Tuesday after being struck by a car as he was going to school. Police said the boy started to run across the street when he noticed an oncoming car. They said he tried to stop but slipped and fell and was then struck by the skidding automobile.



THE END of both the trip and this transport cab which, driven by Bob Bunyon, of Etobicoke, smashed into a vacant service station garage after its brakes had failed and it had plunged down steep Walton St. hill in Port Hope Sunday night. The driver was trapped in the twisted wreckage for about a half hour. The impact knocked out a concrete and brick wall and the hood of the cab was crumpled like an accordion.

Great Maritime Transfer Of 2,000 Citizens Finished

By JACK BRAYLEY

OROMOCTO, N.B. (CP) — The biggest transfer of Maritimers in two centuries is nearly over and now 436 square miles of bush and farmland lies almost deserted, awaiting building of a $40,000,000 army camp.

When plans were announced 15 months ago for expropriating a vast tract of southern New Brunswick for Camp Gagetown, the 2,000 settlers protested. A few are descendants of the 6,000 Acadians whose roots were ripped from the soil of Nova Scotia in 1755 by a British governor who hurried them into exile.

The problems of the present-day evacuees seemed almost as insurmountable as those of the Acadians. Many of the 450 families had been on the land for three or four generations. But Frank L. Miller, government agent from Ottawa who followed a "fair and just" expropriation policy, has guided most of the cases toward satisfactory settlement.

MORE FERTILE

In the opinion of most of the displaced persons, purchase prices have been fair. There has been plenty of time to find new homes, in many cases in more fertile areas such as the Kennebecasis valley and the fringe of the camp area itself. Woodlot operators have been given extra time to cut over the pulpwood and timber limits. Few have left the province.

Settlements ranging from $1,500 for small holdings to $20,000 for large blocks of farms with timber limits and reaching a total property cost of $10,000,000 have not pleased everyone. A few cases likely will go to the federal Exchequer Court for final ruilng. In most of these cases the farmers claim their neighbors got more than they did for relatively similar property.

But no compensation can quite make up for the loss of a home that has sheltered a family for three or four generations.

There are many poignant cases like that of 95-year-old Mrs. Elizabeth McCarthy. She came to her Petersville home as a bride 75 years ago and she asks: "What does the government pay for contentment?"

Hinson Dykeman never liked cows. That's why he gave up dairy farming and moved to Burton in the camp area where he grew apples. Hinson's property was expropriated. He re-established near Sussex Corner and now he's back in the dairy business with 25 cows.

DECENT PEOPLE

"Yes," says Mr. Miller, "we've naturally had some misunderstandings and a small minority of cases are still to be settled, but things are gradually smoothing out and that's because the New Brunswickers are such decent people to deal with."

Meanwhile, 4,000 acres of undulating bushland are being cleared for the headquarters of Canada's biggest army camp, near this village 11 miles south of Fredericton. The camp is expected to be ready for troops by the spring of 1956. It will be primarily equipped to handle a division of 15,000 men, but can be expanded to train double that number.

The 30-by-20-mile tract of land lies roughly between Fredericton and Saint John, the province's biggest city. The eastern extremity borders the St. John river, while the western border is less than 50 miles from the Maine border in some spots.

Almost all have moved out, leaving behind a loneliness and quiet that's almost ghostly. A trip over the Broad road, the 60-mile short route between Saint John and Fredericton that cuts through the military zone, is a creepy experience.

Through the wild Geary woods are mile after mile of abandoned homesteads. While many homes will be sold through a government assets branch for removal, others will provide targets and obstructions for large-scale tank and artilery manoeuvres.

ONCE FAMOUS

Evidences of occupancy are already growing over with weeds, moss and a mouldy smell. Not a cow or a horse is in sight for miles and not a dog's bark is heard in an area that once was famous as site of the North American field dog trials. Under neglected orchards lie spotty windfalls.

Through windows can be seen a few trinkets, an old rocker, a dog-eared almanac, an oil lamp—all left behind in the last-minute crush of time and space.

In the fringe area and in some places where deals have yet to be closed life goes on—but not as usual. The moves are inevitable and occupants are wistfully doing winter chores for the last time.

Before the army follows the evacuation, the York-Sunbury Historical Society will have combed the homesteads for relics of the past. Valuable possessions have often turned up in homes built by old Loyalist settlers and pioneers. The society got permission to take on a permanent loan basis anything it could find.

Meanwhile, the army has problems of its own. Yet to be settled is the location of houses for soldiers' families, and it appears likely thes will be made available in the immediate Fredericton area.

In case of secret manoeuvres, or wartime emergencies, civilian traffic will have to be diverted from the Broad road.

Bringing Up Baby

Hints Collected by Mrs. Dan Gerber (Mother of 5)

When I was a little girl my mother used to tell me that eating carrots would make my hair curl. "Tain't so", say the experts. But carrots do contribute a lot to the general well-being of babies. High in Vitamin A value, carrots help keep tender young skin clear and also help protect linings of bronchial and intestinal systems. Truly a gold-mine of good eating.

• • •

Gold-mine, "pint size". I'm talking about a container of Gerber's Strained Carrots. Smooth-textured and true-flavored, they're processed especially to please little palates, and for high retention of precious vitamins and minerals. Like all Gerber's Strained Vegetables, the Carrots are grown from selected seeds and planted in special soils under ideal conditions. And like all Gerber products they're prepared by experts who strive to make especially good baby foods.

• • •

Sweet music to little ears. Ingenious toy conjured up by an inventive mother: she crumpled up cellophane and stuffed it into a cheesecloth bag about 5" x 8". Baby was so enchanted with the squeezable softness, the musical crackle that he hugged it for hours on end.

• • •

A big boon to young mothers—Gerber's Teething Biscuits. These good-tasting, smooth-shaped teething biscuits are so easy on baby's tender gums when he's cutting teeth, so easy for tiny hands to hold. Convenient for you, too—Gerber's Teething Biscuits are individually wrapped.

• • •

Wash-saving special! This handy bib for baby—made of clear vinylite plastic, edged in pink and blue—is just the thing to keep baby clean at eating time. Just send either 3 Gerber's Cereal labels or 6 Gerber's can labels to me, Mrs. Dan Gerber, Box 17, Toronto 18.

Party Intends Boycott Commission

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana (AP)—Mrs. Janet Jagan, secretary of the People's Progressive party, has announced that the party will stand by its decision to boycott the constitution commission sent to this British colony, despite chairman Sir James Robertson's broadcast on Sunday.

In the broadcast, Robertson pledged widest interpretation of the commission's terms of reference. He also appealed to the party to reconsider its non-co-operation avowal.

Britain ousted British Guiana's PPP cabinet last October and suspended the constitution, charging that Communist intrigues were threatening the welfare of the state.

Provinces Split Over Freight Rate Scale

OTTAWA (CP) — Western provinces and other bodies Tuesday split widely over a freight rate scale to equalize rates among different parts of Canada.

The divergent views were offered as the board of transport commissioners began hearing final argument in its long inquiry on [illegible] seeking a new scale of basic "class" rates to go into effect next Jan. 1.

Five proposed new rate schedules are before the board, and Tuesday it heard arguments favoring three of them from the governments of British Columbia, Alberta and Saskatchewan, the City of Edmonton and the Winnipeg Chamber of Commerce.

British Columbia started off by supporting a scale drafted by the Canadian National Railways, the province shifting away from earlier support of a "compromise" scale which it had helped the Alberta government to draft.

Merlin Man Sentenced For Abducting Girl

CHATHAM (CP) — Alvin Myers, 22, of nearby Merlin, Tuesday was sentenced to two years less a day on charges of abducting a 15-year-old girl and uttering a forged cheque.

A companion, Leo Luvier of Dover Centre, was also sentenced to two years less a day in reformatory on a charge of uttering a forged cheque.

Police said Myers picked up the 15-year-old Tilbury girl student at her school and lived with her as man and wife at rooming-houses and hotels in London and Toronto. Myers was arrested at Chatham and the girl was returned to her home.

Police said Myers had cashed a forged cheque for $42 at a clothing store and Lucier cashed another for the same amount at a service garage.

Girl Killed In Crash

WINDSOR (CP)—Carol Marchi, 5, died Monday of a broken neck suffered when a car in which she was riding crashed into a transport truck. She was Windsor's first traffic fatality of 1954. Her father, Deno Marchi, 30, driver of the car, escaped serious injury but his sister, Eileen Marchi, 24, suffered a fractured skull.

Two Babies Burnt In House Fire

Midnight Blaze In House Parents Absent

ENGLEHART (CP) — Two baby sisters, Lily Collingridge, 2, and one-year-old Ruth, died about midnight Wednesday when fire destroyed their home on the outskirts of this town, 4 miles south of Kirkland Lake.

The blaze, of unknown origin, swept through the one-storey frame house in near-zero temperature while the parents were absent.

Mr. Collingridge, 27 had left to cut some wood for a neighbor, a widow. Mrs. Collingridge, 21-year-old expectant mother, went out to ask her husband to bring in more fuel for the coal stove.

The house was unattended for only a few minutes but it soon became a blazing inferno. The father attempted to enter but was driven back by the flames and smoke.

CHILDREN IN CRIBS

Lily and Ruth were asleep in their cribs. Ruth's body was discovered at 2:15 a. m. in the ashes of the house. Her sister's body wasn't recovered immediately.

Constable E. M. Stamand of the provincial police saw the flames while on a routine patrol and arrived at the house just as Mr. Collingridge was trying to enter.

"There was nothing to be done to save the girls," he said. "The interior of the house was like a furnace."

Sixteen volunteer firemen and neighbors fought the blaze but were hampered because the pumper truck was forced to leave several times for more water.

Mayor Peter Hodgins announced a public subscription will be started to aid the destitute parents.

OOOOPPPPS!! DOWN WE GO!!—Peterborough's annual slides, down the court house hill, are again thrilling the children from the central district. On little pieces of cardboard or big cartons the children zoom down the steep slope. Sometimes they don't have cardboard, sliding down on their own cushions. The hill is dotted with children sliding down the ice and snow before the school bell rings at Central school. After that the hill's isolated, patched with hundreds of pieces of cardboard.

Three Bodies Recovered From Ruins

60-Room Hotel Destroyed In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP)—Firemen today recovered three bodies from the charred wreckage of the Chateau Hotel at the mid-town intersection of St. Catherins and St. Denis streets. It was feared more bodies would be discovered.

Hours later, only one of the dead was definitely identified. He was Ubald Clement, 60, originally from Ontario but a resident of the hotel for several years. His Ontario hometown was not known.

Morgue officials said the two remaining unidentified persons were badly burned but not too badly to prevent identification.

Five persons previously listed missing turned up, having made their way to safety to find shelter with relatives or friends.

Firemen from many stations raced to the burning, five-storey 60-room hotel, which burned for three hours in sub-freezing temperatures in wind-whipped, congested surroundings.

It was believed as many as 50 guests were in the hotel when the fire broke out at 4 a. m. It was after 7 a. m. before firemen gained the upper hand.

WALLS STILL STAND

The walls of the hotel itself were still standing although the interior was a shambles. A modern, 10-storey office building adjacent to the hotel was untouched as were buildings on the other side.

At least five persons suffered injuries. They were identified as Charles Paget of Sherbrooke, Que., who broke an ankle when he jumped from a second-storey window; Gerard Chagnon of Danville, Que., who suffered cuts and bruises in a second-storey leap; Armand Brouillard, Sore, Que., suffering from burns; Mrs. Lucien Giroux, Montreal, suffering from neck injuries and shock; Jean-Guy Fournier, a fireman, cut by flying glass.

All were in hospital.

A later message said that two teen-age girls escaped the fire only

Unable To Agree On Sites For Berlin Meeting

BERLIN—(AP)—The Big Four foreign ministers' conference has bumped into a deadlock 11 days before the date set for the parley to start. Unable to agree on sites in Berlin, Allied and Russian representatives today asked their home governments what to do. A state department spokesman in Washington said the United States does not believe the deadlock will postpone the conference beyond the Jan. 25 opening date, but there is speculation in political circles here that the Russians are preparing to torpedo the meeting.

Despite the glum outlook, there was no indication today of any change in plans of State Secretary Dulles to arrive here from Washington Jan. 22 for pre-conference talks with Foreign Secretary Eden and Foreign Minister Bidault. Reports from the East indicated Foreign Minister Molotov is expected Jan. 23.

A senior Allied official here said the week's four meetings of the Berlin commandants of the U.S., Britain, France and Russia involved 37 hours of wrangling and were a "waste of time."

SAYS REDS HAGGLED

The state department spokesman in Washington charged the Russians with employing "haggling and dilatory tactics on procedural points" but expressed hope this would "not stand in the way of this very important conference that can mean so much to the peace of the world."

Moscow radio has been taking pot shots at the West in connection with the conference, and the Moscow press has been serving notice that the Soviet Union will not yield in its views on the issues which will confront the foreign ministers.

Western officials and commentators have been just as skeptical of the Russian intentions.

A Soviet radio commentator accused the U. S. and West German press today of trying to undermine the conference by insisting that there can be no question of abandoning the European Defence Community treaty setting up a six-power European army.

112 Austrians Killed By Avalanches

VIENNA (AP)—Alarms of new avalanches, plus fresh snow and rain, today hampered rescue efforts in Austria's snow-buried valleys, where 112 persons are known dead and there is little hope for 29 others.

The over-all avalanche toll in Austria, Germany and Switzerland is 172 dead and missing.

Feverish attempts are being made to evacuate to hospitals 92 persons injured in Austria's eastern province of Vorarlberg.

A small Swiss Army helicopter took off today from Bludenz in an effort to reach the isolated railway sation of Dalaas, near the Arlberg pass where two persons are reported in critical condition. Six persons were killed and five are missing under an avalanche which buried the station and ripped an express train in two Tuesday.

A heavier, 10-passenger United States Air Force helicopter was unable to take off to help rescue work in Austria's "valley of death," the great Waser valley, where 63 persons died, 18 are missing and 56 were injured by avalanches which crushed seven villages.

IN SNOW 57 HOURS

Hanns Neuerbourg, Associated Press correspondent, reported from the stricken area that, while hope was vanishing for the missing, rescuers late Wednesday night freed a woman who had been 57 hours under the snow.

Neuerbourg said the woman was severely injured but is expected to live.

The U. S. Air Force in Germany meanwhile dispatched four cargo-type helicopters from Fuerstenfeldbruck field near Munich with doctors and medical supplies. A C-47 transport also took off with food, blankets and gasoline for the helicopters. It will attempt to drop the supplies over the Walser valley.

Five Employees Of Government Facing Charges

TORONTO (CP)—Highways Minister George Doucett announced today that five employees have been charged under the criminal code as a result of irregularities in the Fort William division of the Ontario department of highways.

Those charged are suspended division engineer A. M. Mills; Douglas Frank Cutting, division clerk; Donald Toule Gandier, clerk; Graham Watson Turner, principal clerk, and Thomas L. Ayres, superintendent of the departmental asphalt plant.

Mr. Doucett Wednesday described as "utterly ridiculous" reports that $1,000,000 is involved in alleged payroll padding and other irregularities reported in the division. He said not more than $25,000 is concerned in an investigation that started last October.

SUSPENDED NOV. 27

Suspension of the division engineer was announced on Nov. 27, when Mr. Doucett said the probe was continuing under provincial auditor H. A. Cotnam and J. L. Zoller, financial comptroller of the highways department.

Mills was charted today under provisions of Section 160 of the Criminal Code that he committed breaches of trust in the discharge of his duties and with intent to defraud. The other four were charged with conspiracy to defraud. The amount of money mentioned in the cases of the last four was $18,625.

16 Die In Airplane Crash

By WEBB McKINLEY

ROME (AP)—A smoking four-engine Philippines Airline plane crashed and exploded in the populous outskirts of Rome today and all 16 persons aboard were killed. The big DC-6 hit a vacant lot not far from a big apartment building. It was coming in for a landing on a flight from Beirut, Lebanon, one leg in its regularly scheduled trip from Manila to London. An eyewitness said the left engines were smoking as it approached Ciampino airport outside Rome. It appeared to be heading for the building, then banked and plunged into the lot with a tremendous roar.

The accident occurred in driving rain.

Among the seven passengers aboard was the airline's European manager, Royal R. Jordan, a native of Boston. The pilot was Ira Broome of Cairo, Mich., head pilot for the airline.

It was the first fatal accident in the airline's international operation. The Philippine airline was given a safety award last October at an international air conference.

Airline officials said the cause of the crash was as yet unknown. An investigation was launched immediately.

No Evidence That Reds Intend Renew Hostilities

WASHINGTON (AP)—Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway said today U.S. defence leaders do not see any evidence that the Communists intend to renew hostilities in Korea. Ridgway, the army chief of staff, was formerly supreme commander of Allied powers in the Far East. He told the Senate foreign relations committee that the planned withdrawal of two U.S. divisions from South Korea would not weaken the American position but would provide greater flexibility of action.

Ridgway and army secretary Robert T. Stevens appeared before the committee to urge Senate ratification of a mutual defence pact negotiated with Korea.

In reply to a question by Chairman Alexander Wiley (Rep. Wis.), Ridgway said there have been "verified withdrawals" of Chinese units from North Korea since the armistice but he said the over-all Communist strength there still is "not far from one million" men.

Ridgway told the committee there also was verified evidence that the Communists have rebuilt war-torn airfields and constructed some new ones.

But, he added, "Our conclusions are we do not see evidence of an intention on their part to renew hostilities."

Suggests Meteor Landed In Georgian Bay

TORONTO (CP)—A ball of fire that flashed across Ontario, Quebec and New York state at dawn Wednesday may have fallen into Georgian bay, a University of Toronto expert in stellar physics said Wednesday night.

"It was probably the size of a football, travelling up to 45 miles a second," said Dr. Helen Hogg of the university's Dunlap observatory at suburban Richmond Hill. "I'd guess it was 75 to 100 miles up" when seen.

Startled residents of Ontario and Quebec centres from Toronto to Montreal and north to Sudbury called police and radio stations for explanation. Many citizens thought it was a burning plane.

Dr. Hogg said one report, from Parry Sound 120 miles north of Toronto, told of an explosion "like a 25-pound bomb" after a flash of fire.

"That blast indicates Parry Sound was probably less than 30 miles from the object's path," she said. "It may have landed in Georgian bay west of there, or it may have burned out before reaching the earth."

Quebec To Levy Income Tax

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government plans legislation providing for a provincial tax on personal income, it was learned today on reliable authority.

Premier Duplessis is expected to announce the legislation when the Legislative Assembly reconvenes later today.

The informant said he could not disclose any other details of the projected legislation, notice of which was given in the Legislative Assembly agenda Wednesday.

The Canadian Press learned that in some government quarters it is believed the legislation will provide for a provincial tax of five per cent on personal incomes.

This, they said, would not necessarily mean an increase in income tax payments for Quebec residents. The five-per-cent paid the provincial government could be claimed as a credit against federal payments.

25% Hungarians Communists

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Dr. Alexander Havadtoy, a Hungarian-born Presbyterian minister, said Wednesday that between 20 and 25 per cent of Canada's 60,000 Hungarians are Communis

Dr. Havadtoy, minister of a Hungarian congregation at nearby Mount Bridges, told a London Presbytery meeting that it is the job of the church to "win them over" by presenting a "true Christian attitude."

Where Hungarian congregations were established on a firm footing, he said, it has been found that most of these "so-called Communists" wanted to return to the church.

More Americans To Pay Tax

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Eisenhower today proposed bringing 10,000,000 more Americans under social security, increasing benefits generally, and raising to $4,200 the amount of income subject to social security tax.

In a special message to Congress, Eisenhower said benefits now paid—averaging $50 a month with a minimum of $25 and a maximum of $85—are "too low" to fulfil the purpose of "helping combat destitution."

He proposed raising both the minimum and maximum. No figures were given. A formula will be presented later by Welfare Secretary Ovita Culp Hobby.

Well - informed congressional sources said the increases Mrs. Hobby will propose will range from $5 a month in the lowest brackets to more than $10 in upper brackets.

Eisenhower's proposal to increase to $4,200 the amount of income subject to social security tax would mean an immediate $12-a-year tax increase for workers earning $4,200 or more. Employers' payments, which match the employee's contribution, would be increased a like amount. At present only the first $3,600 of income is taxed.

Eisenhower's proposal to expand the system to include an estimated 10,000,000 Americans would bring under social security such persons as self-employed farmers, doctors, dentists, lawyers and other self-employed professional people and clergymen on a voluntary basis.

Workers Strike At Atomic Plant

LONDON (AP) — The Communist-dominated electrical trade union called a flash strike at a key atomic project today—third such plant hit this week in the union's pin-prick labor war for higher wages.

Two hundred men walked out of the Aldermaston plant in Berkshire, in southern England, to start the fourth day of 24-hour "guerrilla" strikes at key construction works.

Some 250 men also were called out today at the Associated Ethyl Oil refinery at Ellesmere port, northern England.

The union is seeking an 11-shillings weekly raise for its 45,000 members who now average about £4 4s 4d a week.

Explosion Causes $500,000 Damage

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — An explosion followed by a flash fire today resulted in an estimated $500,000 damage when it levelled Palace Recreation, known as "Canada's largest bowling alley."

It was not known if anyone was trapped by the roaring inferno which swept through the modern building which contained 32 alleys.

It was first thought that the owner George Karrys had been trapped, but it was later established that he was not in the building.

The fire started shortly after 11 a. m.

Fire chief Hedley Coates said every available piece of equipment was on the scene. Fire trucks wer only a block from the burning building when the devastating explosion occurred.

The blast blew out the entire west wall.

One injury was reported. C. E. Forster was burned on the face and hand.

Will Question Italian Woman

PORT CREDIT (CP) — Police Chief Joseph Nelson said today he expects to question Sophie DiDomenico, 26, later today or Friday on whether she jumped or was pushed Wednesday from the Canadian National Railways Chicago-Montreal flyer.

The red-haired Italian woman is in St. Joseph's hospital in Toronto. She is reported to be suffering from intense shock and still too ill to be questioned. Hospital officials refused to give out information on her condition today.

"If the girl talks when she has recovered sufficiently to be questioned," Chief Nelson said, "we will issue warrants charging attempted murder. The girl will be taken into protective custody to prevent any harm coming to her. We are afraid she is so terrorized by her experience she may cover up in fear she will be killed when she is out of hospital."

TERRORIST SOCIETY

He said he believes the Mafia, a terrorist society of crime and violence that originated in Sicily, was attempting to procure Miss DiDomenico for immoral purposes, and that when she objected she was hurled from the train.

He said police information is she came to Canada from Quilla province in Italy two years ago. She lived in Montreal until she moved to Brantford two or three weeks ago, seeking work as a housekeeper. She left Brantford last Sunday to return to Montreal.

She was discovered lying in a snow-filled ditch at the bottom of a 30-foot embankment by Joseph Lolato, a contractor, after the eastbound CNR flyer roared through Port Credit, 10 miles west of Toronto.
